Bombs Rock Greece

By Ben Ames
United Press Staff Writer

Athens (Saturday), Nov. 2.—Italy turned the fury of an "aerial blitzkrieg" upon all Greece yesterday in 24 violent bombing attacks that killed and wounded nearly 250 persons and blasted five important ports and cities, an official communique, said early today.

Tons of bombs smashed upon the port and airport of Athens, on strategic Salonika, which was bombed six times in as many hours, on the central city of Larissa and the islands of Crete and Corfu.

Premier Benito Mussolini unleashed his heavy aerial assault, it was claimed, after Greek mountain troops in major victories hurled back tank and infantry assaults on the northern fronts.

Greeks Hit Back

Greece's tiny air force was said by the Athens radio to have struck heavy blows at the invaders on the fourth day of the war, bombing and disorganizing marching columns of Fascist troops and an airdrome and other objectives in Albania.

[There were reports from Athens that a number of high British navy officers had arrived there, apparently to lay plans for speedier and greater British naval aid to Greece.]

A strong Italian drive led by tanks was said to have been hurled

U. S. Forces Gather Near French Isles

By J. C. Stark,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Secret movements of United States naval forces in the eastern Caribbean area stirred consideraole interest here last night.

Warships and planes appeared to be gathering in the area of French possessions but there was no explanation in official quarters.

The entire neutrality patrol fleet from Key West, Fla., was at sea on a secret mission; air reinforcements arrived at San Juan, Puerto Rico, and an undetermined number of warships was observed off San Juan steaming east into the Atlantic today.

Speculation in unofficial quarters centered on two possible explanations:

1. That the naval forces were being concentrated near the French islands of Martinique and Guadaloupe and French Guiana, on the South American mainland, in readiness to occupy them immediately in the event the Vichy

Full-Scale War Breaks Out Again in Egypt

Italians Attack, Seek to Discourage Aid to Greece

By the Associated Press

Cario, Nov. 1.—Italy's long-stalled invasion of Egypt came to life today in a new burst of fighting across the sands of the western desert, indicating Mussolini may be unfolding a grand plan to coordinate this drive with his campaign against Greece.

In a revival of heavy desert fighting, the R. A. F. reported eight Italian warplanes were downed and four more so badly damaged they probably failed to reach their bases yesterday in a battle over Matruh, British advance base blocking the Fascist drive toward the Nile and the Suez Canal.

British fighters lost two planes. Two others collided, but the pilots parachuted to safety.

(The Italian high command reported 17 British planes downed in the Egyptian battle and said Fascist ground forces struck at British troops 25 miles east of Sidi Barrani, advance base of the Italian drive. Sidi Barrani is 85 miles from Matruh.)

Elsewhere in the battle of Africa, the British took the initiative with air raids on Italian targets in Ethiopia and Libya and patrol attacks on Italian camel trains and outposts. The Italians struck back with a heavy bombing of the island of Perim, at the southern entrance of the Red Sea.

The Italian attack on Matruh, the biggest air operation in Egypt in weeks, apparently was an attempt to discourage the British from sending many planes to Greece.

Turkey, Yugoslavia Decide to Stay Out; Bulgaria Reported Reinforcing Border

Nonbelligerent Balkan nations strove feverishly last night to prevent the spread of the Italian-Greek war in southeastern Europe.

At the same time, mounting tension was evident in the movement of armies and in an apparent German maneuver—to keep Russia definitely out of the conflict.

Among the developments of the day were these:

1 Adolf Hitler was reported using his veteran troubleshooter, Franz von Papen, now Ambassador to Turkey, to reach an understanding with Russia that will keep both Turkey and Bulgaria out of the Balkan war as long as Russia remains nonbelligerent.

2 Ismet Inonu, Turkish President, announced Turkey is weighing the whole situation in collaboration with her ally, Great Britain, but insisted Turkey will follow the idea of Russia and remain out of war unless Turkish interests are definitely threatened. Later, the official Turkish radio broadcast a government communique stating that "despite all occurrences" Turkey will continue its relations with Russia. Ankara, meanwhile, was reported to have cancelled all army leaves.

3 In its first formal statement of policy since the outbreak of the Greek-Italian war, the Yugoslav government declared a policy of "watchful neutrality" in the conflict. The statement said Belgrade regarded both Italy and Greece as "sincerely friendly" nations, but would fight if Yugoslav independence is threatened.

4 Bulgaria early today was reported rushing troop reinforcements to the Turkish frontier.

5 Sofia heard continued reports of additional German troop movements through Rumania, headed east.

6 A Rome radio broadcast, heard in New York, stated Britain had ordered all her nationals to leave Yugoslavia. London would not confirm the report.

7 Italy stepped up her air attacks on Greece, bombing five towns with Athens admitting damage and casualties.

It was from Nazis in Rumania, the Associated Press reported, that word was heard that Germany was initiating negotiations with

Draft Queries To Be Mailed Out Today

4,950 Will Receive Questionnaire Here; Chance of Selection Put at One in Ten

Questionnaires, to be returned within five days, will be mailed today to 4,950 registrants in Washington's 25 Selective Service districts.

On the basis of information in these questionnaires, registrants will be classified and those eligible selected for training. Local officials estimated approximately 1 in 10 here would be called to service.

These first questionnaires, allotted to districts by quotas fixed yesterday, undoubtedly will take care of trainees to be called in the first two groups, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Washington Selective Service executive, said.

Unofficial estimates were that 150 would be called November 18 and another 300 between then and January 1. Before March 1, under present plans, more than 1,900 Washington registrants will be selected for training.

Scheduled to be sent out yesterday, the questionnaires were held up at the last minute, awaiting arrival at the local boards of official notices to be posted there to notify registrants that the questionnaires were in the mail. Meanwhile, clerks from each of the districts were called to Selective Service headquarters in the National Guard Armory and instructed in the task of mailing and handling the questionnaires by Col. C. A. Dravo and Capt. Tinsley Garnett, of the Washington staff. Master lists were delivered to all district offices.

Listed by Districts

District 1, 180; 2, 135; 3, 90; 4, 180; 5, 180; 6, 135; 7, 225; 8, 225; 9, 270; 10, 180; 11, 270; 12, 180; 13, 180; 14, 180; 15, 180; 16, 135; 17, 180; 18, 225; 19, 225; 20, 180; 21, 135; 22, 180; 23, 180; 24, 180; 25, 180.

Until all questionnaires have been returned, the local boards will remain open from 4 to 8 p. m. to aid registrants in filling them out. The first class of District men called to service November 18 will go to the recruit reception center at Fort Meade for assignment. Some will probably be sent to Fort Myer and others will remain at Meade to await arrival of the District National Guard units in January.

Advisory Quarters Still Needed

The 25 Washington registrants whose serial number, 158, was drawn first in Tuesday's lottery and became order No. 1, will meet at the armory today at 1:15 p. m. to organize the Number One Club and receive gold "1's" from the Rockettes. National Selective Service Executive Dykstra, Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Gen. Cox and Commissioner Hazen will become honorary members, it was announced.

Meanwhile, proposals of the Registrants' Advisory Board to utilize local fire stations as question-and-

Nazi Landing In Greenland Reported Foiled

London (Saturday), Nov. 2 (INS).—The Daily Express in a dispatch from Stockholm today said Germany's first attempt to penetrate the Western Hemisphere by capturing five vitally important meteorological stations in Greenland was foiled by a Norwegian patrol boat which captured the German vessel.

The German expedition, according to the Daily Express report, started from Aalesund on the Norwegian west coast. The vessel had a Norwegian crew, armed with rifles, hand grenades and machineguns. It headed for the Eskimo colony of Scoresbysund.

All 50 members of the expedition including meteorological experts surrendered to the crew of a patrol boat

Chamberlain Trip To U. S. Denied

London, Nov. 1 (AP).—Widely circulated reports that Neville Chamberlain was on his way to California in hopes of regaining his health brought from the former prime minister's secretary today the assertion that he "has not left this country and has no intention of doing so."

Chamberlain himself, the secretary added, regarded the reports as such rubbish that he does not consider them worthy of a formal denial."

'Unholy Alliance' Imperils U.S., Says President; Willkie Lays Warplane Lag to Roosevelt

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Aboard Willkie Special, Nov. 1.—Wendell Willkie tonight concluded 51 days of cross-country campaigning with a radio indictment of the President's airplane production record and a charge of "deceptive optimism."

He said the President "neglected and abused" the aviation industry through years of needed preparation for defense and is "fearfully late" in his pledge to make America the leading air power.

His claim that the President was belatedly "converted" to Willkie's doctrine of "expanding production" was delivered from a track siding in the New Jersey marshes.

Here in the Jersey flats, the dim lights of New York in the distance, Willkie's special train stopped its churning wheels for the last campaign layover.

Trip Breaks Records

When it chugs into New York tomorrow afternoon for the campaign journey's end it will have shattered all previous records for political campaign travel.

Railroad officials said only one other train has made a longer tour. That carried a drug company exhibit and was on the road five months.

In less than half that time Willkie has swept through 34 States over nearly 19,000 miles of roadbed. His total rail, air and motor travel approximates 30,000 miles.

Willkie, whose demands for speed and more speed fulfilled every promise of a blitzkrieg campaign, didn't plan all of this as a stunt. He passed his last night aboard in belief he had won the election.

Bids for Jersey Vote

Two parting shots for the New Jersey vote had been fired in New Brunswick and Elizabeth before Willkie closed his 51 days of lightning cross-country raids. From his private car he delivered a last sharp radio arraignment of the President's Boston speech. Then he went under wraps for tomorrow night's final bout with the "champ."

From this Kearny (N. J.) site of the old Manhattan Transfer, Willkie questioned the President's report of "rapid progress" toward a 50,000-planes-a-year production goal and his ability to deliver speedily the 26,000 planes ordered by the British.

He said Americans should not "fool" either themselves or the British people.

"We Must Arm Britain"

"We must arm Britain with planes, not disarm her with political speeches," he shouted. "Even if we give them complete priority over our own defense needs, it will take years to fill their orders.

The "tragedy" was, he said, that with a little foresight and understanding of industrial production, a stream of American-produced airplanes could have assured British safety from threat of invasion and made American defenses "impregnable."

Willkie charged that from leading the world in aviation when the

The Gallup Poll

Willkie Gains in Maryland, Wisconsin and Minnesota

Trend to Him in Michigan Halted As Roosevelt Wins Back 1 Per Cent; Shifts Do Not Give G. O. P. Any New States

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, Nov. 1.—A gain for Wendell Willkie in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Maryland is revealed in the latest returns of the Institute survey. In Michigan, however, the recent trend of sentiment toward Willkie has been halted and President Roosevelt gains back 1 per cent.

These changes were found in interviews conducted between October 23 and 30. The trend since the Institute's previous report October 27, which was based on interviews conducted between October 14 and 23, is as follows:

Wisconsin today—Willkie, 53 per cent; Roosevelt, 48 per cent. October 27—Willkie, 51 per cent; Roosevelt, 49 per cent.

Michigan today—Willkie, 52 per cent; Roosevelt, 48 per cent. October 27—Willkie, 53 per cent; Roosevelt, 47 per cent.

Minnesota today—Willkie, 49 per cent; Roosevelt, 51 per cent. October 27—Willkie, 46 per cent; Roosevelt, 54 per cent.

Maryland today—Willkie, 42 per cent; Roosevelt, 58 per cent. October 27—Willkie, 40 per cent; Roosevelt, 60 per cent.

While these shifts move no new State into the Willkie column, they bring Minnesota within the danger zone for the Democrats, provided the Republican trend is not halted there as it was in Michigan.

The sizeable Roosevelt lead in Maryland, despite the Republican gain there, is interesting in view of Maryland's past record as a barometer of national sentiment.

In every Presidential election since 1900 Maryland has been on the winning side and the medium deviation between the Maryland results and the results for the Nation has been 3.3 per cent.

If the same situation prevails today, the national vote, based on this single barometer area would be 54.7 per cent for Roosevelt, or more than enough to elect him.

President May Ask Additional Plane Plants

Proposal to Congress To Give U. S. 50,000 A Year Is Likely

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt said yesterday that a new warplane production program designed to give the Nation an air force of 50,000 planes may be presented to Congress when quorum sessions are resumed.

Additional aircraft plants are required for the United States to reach this goal of a 50,000-plane force and an annual production capable of replacing it every year, the President told his press conference, and it is probable that the program will be put before the next session of Congress.

Officials have estimated that the cost of such a plan would be about $2,000,000,000.

Mr. Roosevelt was asked whether the possible expansion of plane production facilities was based on Great Britain continuing its fight throughout the winter. He replied that it was based entirely on our own needs, to attain the 50,000-plane goal.

The President said he was a little amused at the reception given by some Republican leaders to his announcement that Great Britain wanted 12,000 more planes and that he had passed their request on to the Defense Commission with the hope that the orders would be filled.

He said that it was almost kindergarten stuff that when new aircraft orders were piled on top of existing orders it would be necessary to increase production facilities. In order to produce the 12,000 planes

British Study Bomb-Sight Orders in U.S.

Contracts Considered To Firm Making Secret Device for Army, Navy

The British government is considering the placing of orders with the Sperry Co., makers of this country's secret bomb sight, for sights built to British specifications, it was learned last night.

This information followed published reports that the Army has released for export to Britain its closely guarded bomb sight, said to be the envy of military attaches from every capital.

President Roosevelt, asked about the reports, said yesterday that he hadn't the faintest idea whether the stories about release of the sight were correct. If they were, like other stories, he said, they were not accurate.

Meanwhile, a British-American trade of our bomb sight in return for specifications of the British airplane gun turret was reported by International News Service.

Experts presumed that if the British government does place orders for the bombing devices with Sperry the British specifications that would be followed would be

The President's Charges

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Brooklyn, Nov. 1.—Back into the teeth of his opponents, the President tonight flung charges of dictatorship and class hatred in a fighting speech that opened his final whirlwind tour before election.

With a reference to the Communist-Nazi alliance in Europe, President Roosevelt denounced the "combination" in the Republican Party between "extreme reactionary" and "extreme radical elements of this country," elements with no common ground except to "produce dictatorial ends."

When he walked into the ancient Brooklyn Academy of Music promptly at 9 p. m., a tumultuous five-minute ovation greeted him. On the way from Pennsylvania Station he was cheered by crowds that lined the streets along the route.

Vehemently asserting that "I am a firm believer in private enterprise and private property," President Roosevelt told a howling audience that the "all too prevalent Republican sentiment is a direct, vicious, unpatriotic appeal to class hatred, to class contempt."

Assails "Unholy Alliance"

"That, my friends, is just what I am fighting against with all my heart and soul," he declared at the traditional Friday-before-election rally of the Democratic organization at the Music Academy.

The President contended that "something evil" was happening in the country "when a full page advertisement against this Administration, paid for by Republican supporters, appears—where of all places?—in the Daily Worker, the newspaper of the Communist Party."

"There is something very ominous," said the President, "in this combination which has been forming within the Republican Party between the extreme reactionary and the extreme radical elements of this country."

This "unholy alliance," he declared, may constitute a threat "to the future of democracy in this country."

The Daily Worker ceased to be the official organ of the American Communist Party on August 1 of this year, when it was bought by three women, two of them of distinguished Colonial ancestry.

They announced the paper would be conducted "as a medium of free expression in the interests of the working people of America."

Several motorists reported removal of gadgets from their cars. Representative Sam Hobbs, Alabama, told police pranksters took a Congressional tag from his.

Amsterdam Raided

Heart of Berlin Is Rocked In Surprise Attack by R. A. F.

By Jack Fleischer
United Press Staff Writer

Berlin (Saturday), Nov. 2.—The heart of Berlin was rocked by crashing shellfire last night when bombing British planes, in one of their earliest night-time attacks, caught thousands of people in the central streets and sent them plunging for air-raid shelters.

The R. A. F.'s bombs caused "a number of dead and wounded in residential districts" after an earlier siege of the Nazi-held Dutch city of Amsterdam, where 19 wounded German soldiers were killed in a bombed hospital, according to an official Nazi communique early today.

In addition to the 19 soldiers, 7 Dutch civilians were reported to have been killed in Amsterdam, and others wounded.

After the Amsterdam attack, the communique said, a "row of British planes" attempted to reach Berlin but "most of them were turned back by German defenses to the north and south and only single British planes came over Berlin at high altitude."

The R. A. F. fliers were said to have dropped both explosives and incendiaries on "residential districts" of the German capital.

D. C. Woman's Fight to Save Three From Sea Wins Medal

A Washington woman and a Rock Hall (Md.) man are among 25 persons who will receive Carnegie bronze medals for effecting the rescues of eight persons from death by drowning, the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission announced yesterday.

MRS. MASON

Mrs. Elizabeth R. Mason, 25, of 1825 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, who swam 1½ miles through the choppy waters of Long Island Sound last July 22 to carry word of her three companions whose boat had capsized, had left Washington for a visit in West Virginia yesterday just an hour before announcement of the award was made.

The Rock Hall man is Edward A. Warner, 31, who, on September 17, 1939, assisted in the rescue of five persons from burning and drowning at Bay Ridge. Guy E. Andrews, 32, of Baltimore, who cooperated with Warner in the rescue, will receive a bronze Carnegie Medal.

The commission said that Mrs. Mason, Anne R. Daley, 57; Edward R. Sammis, 38, and Margaret H. Sammis, 35, of Long Island, were in a sailboat when it capsized a mile and a quarter from shore in Little Peconoc Bay. Waves, 2 to 3 feet high, were running.

"After having held to the capsized boat for 20 minutes, Mrs. Mason, who was convalescing from a serious operation and who had been advised by a physician not to swim, swam toward shore for aid. After having swam several publicans, he said, "do not realize the nature of this threat," but he added that "they should remember what the collaborate understanding between communism and nazism has done to the processes of democracy abroad."

Visiting New York City on a "political trip for the second time in a week, the President hoped to clinch the Empire State's 47 electoral votes, which now seem hanging in the balance.

Brooklyn, the most populous borough of the metropolis, gave him a 525,000 majority in 1936; but Democratic leaders this year are striving desperately to maintain what they regard as a necessary majority of 350,000.

Farley on Platform

On the platform with the President were former Postmaster General James A. Farley, Gov. Lehman, Senator James A. Mead and Kings County Leader Frank V. Kelly.

"We have seen nations great and small go down in ruin, or get backed up against the wall," warned the President. "Because the reactionary men who led them could not see the real danger that threatened.

"They were afraid of losing their own selfish privilege and power. They feared the legitimate forward surge of their own common people, more than they feared the menacing might of foreign dictators."

"I am fighting to keep our people out of foreign wars and to keep foreign conceptions of government out of our own United States," Mr. Roosevelt asserted to the thunderous acclaim of the audience.

The President declared that a return of the Republicans to power would mean the abolition of many New Deal reforms.

Ridiculing the idea that the credit of the United States has been impaired by the Administration's fiscal policies, the President suggested to his audience that they "look into the treasury of the Commonwealth & Southern system."

There, he said, amidst shouts of laughter, "you will find that they have bought and hold $21,000,000 of United States Government securities." That was the nearest he came to mentioning his Republican opponent, Wendell Willkie, former president of C. & S.

The President told his Brooklyn audience that "the only common philosophy of his opponents is to get wholly rid of all the New Deal—lock, stock and barrel."

Hits "Doctrine of Fear"

Asking his audience if they wished to "abandon" each of a long list of New Deal reforms, he was answered with a succession of resounding "Nos."

And again he struck at "certain insurance companies" for spreading "the doctrine of fear." He described it as "just another pay-envelope campaign of fear like the one in 1936."

Former Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins accompanied the President from Washington to New York. Absent from the train was Presidential Secretary Stephen Early, who had been involved in a scuffle with a New York policeman on the President's last trip here.

After his address the President was whisked back to his special train. Tomorrow, after visits to Rochester and Buffalo, he will invade Pennsylvania at Erie to bid for the Keystone State's 36 electoral votes. Then he will proceed to Cleveland for a speech tomorrow night.

Ohio has 26 votes, making a total of 109 electoral votes from the three key States he will visit on this trip.

The President is expected to return to Washington Sunday.

'Hysteria' Invoked to Befog Minds of Voters, Hull Says

Calls for Roosevelt's Election on Record To Meet Menace of World Conquerors, Deplores 'Spurious . . . Counterfeit Issues'

Secretary of State Hull last night charged "firebrands of hysteria" are being thrown into the political campaign, and called for reelection of President Roosevelt to "assure the security and safeguard the peace of this country."

Urging a "continuity of national leadership," he declared that "President Roosevelt's record of unremitting labor for peace, of ceaseless efforts to keep war away from this country and this hemisphere can not be blacked out by any attacks on his sincerity and good faith."

He spoke over the red and blue networks of the N. B. C. and M. B. S.

It would be "a tragedy," Hull said, for the election to "turn on spurious and counterfeit issues . . . artifically created to mislead the voters."

Calling for "clear and full recognition . . . of the extent of the peril which confronts the country," he referred to the "invaders" of other peaceful lands," who "bring into play every weapon of deceit, corruption, subversion and assault."

He declared that the "conquering nations" had "fixed no limits for their program of conquest" and were "desperately struggling to seize control of the oceans as an essential means of achieving and maintaining their conquest of the other continents."

U. S. a Rich Prize

"This country," he continued, "and the other American countries are in no way different in the eyes of the would-be conquerors from those which they have already overrun and are daily overrunning—except that we would offer, were they to conquer us, a richer prize.

"Already they have conquered countries which have colonial possessions in this hemisphere. Should they attempt to exercise jurisdiction or control over these possessions, or any of them, the menace to the United States and to every American country would be too obvious."

This country, he said, "must have a government which clearly recognizes the dangers and difficulties which confront us; which dares to tell the country that they exist and what they are; which makes adequate provision to meet them; which is steadfast in purpose and persistent in action; which has the invaluable asset of experience."

"Under the leadership of President Roosevelt, this country has such a government," he asserted. "Its record is an open book. There are no secret commitments and no entanglements in the quarrels of other nations."

Opposition Attacks "Petty"

Then, charging the political opposition has made "all sorts of petty attacks" on the Administration record, he continued:

"Outstanding is the wholly unwarranted and utterly vicious charge that the President is 'leading us into war,'" he said.

On the contrary, he asserted, "this country is being entrenched against war."

"We are creating the weapons and the organization needed, first, to discourage would-be assailants and, second, should we be assailed, to repel assaults," he continued.

"We are warning our people of danger to this country should other nations which are under assault go down. We are making available access to the resources and the products of this country to countries under assault whose survival is important to our own security."

"It is most unfortunate that, while all this is being done, peril, already grave, is being increased by the utterances of those who irresponsibly deny that there is danger, those who misrepresent our diplomatic and military efforts of preparedness, those who make reckless accusations, those who distort the record simply for the purpose of influencing the balloting.

U. S. Has Many Friends

"When the charge is made that the foreign policy of the Administration has brought this country into a position of 'loneliness' in world affairs, there is again a plain distorting of the record. The nations of the Western Hemisphere are our friends. All peaceful and peace-seeking nations everywhere are our friends. All nations fighting desperately for survival are our friends. Only the rulers of those nations which are bent on conquest are at odds with us. But surely, anyone who believes in law is unpopular with lawbreakers. And, naturally, anyone who strives wholeheartedly to keep the peace has the enmity of willful peacebreakers.

"I protest against these attempts to confuse and mislead the voters by raising counterfeit issues and arousing suspicion. To throw firebrands of hysteria into the electoral campaign at one of the most crucial moments in the history of the Nation may well jeopardize the safety of the conutry.

"It is all-important that the judgment of the voter be calm and dispassionate.

"In the presence of such problems as confront this country now, it is necessary to weigh more carefully than usual the disadvantages which would attend a change in leadership. It should be manifest that today the balance of advantage lies with continuity of national leadership. The President's practical experience and his familiarity with the facts and problems of the international situation as they affect this country are at this moment an extraordinarily valuable asset. This is no time for the country to be making a change from experience to inexperience—a change which furthermore, would immediately involve 2½ months of confusion and uncertainty.

"President Roosevelt's record of unremitting labor for peace, of ceaseless efforts to keep war away from this country and this hemisphere cannot be blacked out by any attacks on his sincerity and good faith. That record has been one of adherence to sound principles and practical objectives which can, in the fullest possible measure, assure the security and safeguard the peace of this country. It is my firm belief that with his record of accomplishment, with his broad program of constructive international relations and under his seasoned leadership, our people can look forward and go forward with confidence."

Lindley Foresees A Close Vote

Lexington, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Ernest K. Lindley, Washington political commentator, told Southern scholastic press editors tonight that the general election next week would be the closest since 1916. He predicted Roosevelt's reelection by a narrow margin.

LINDLEY

However, he added, "Anything from a narrow Willkie victory to a Roosevelt landslide would not be surprising."

The columnist spoke before more than 300 preparatory and high school student journalists at the sixteenth annual convention of the Southern Interscholastic Press Association, sponsored by Washington and Lee University.

In commenting upon the campaign, which he termed the "most unique in American history," Lindley credited Roosevelt with 206 "sure" electoral votes and Willkie with 32 from five States.

He said that the doubtful States were hanging in the balance or leaning toward Willkie, but that the President is "more likely to get 60 electoral votes from the doubtful States than Willkie is to get 229."

Third-Term Defeat Called Axis' Wish

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Claude G. Bowers, U. S. Ambassador to Chile, in a letter to Magistrate Frank Oliver, of New York, said that "should Roosevelt be defeated it would be interpreted throughout South and Central America as a repudiation of his policy here."

The letter, made public today by the Democratic national committee, said, "in South America the totalitarians have their organizations, agents and propagandists working covertly and reporting to European capitals on their plans; and working openly to undermine confidence in the United States and to destroy faith in Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull.

Early's Apology Settles Incident, LaGuardia Says

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Mayor LaGuardia said today that he considered an apology by Stephen Early, White House secretary, to James Sloan, New York colored policeman who was injured in a scuffle near President Roosevelt's train here Monday night, should settle the affair.

"I examined the apology and I think it should settle it," the mayor said. "All the protest is politically inspired by people having no interest in the patrolman."

"A gentleman can do no more than apologize," LaGuardia added. "The officer had orders not to let anybody by. Early had to catch the train. It was a regrettable meeting between the two irresistible forces."

At his home, Sloan replied when asked whether he would accept an apology: "I'm not going to talk about that."

Colored Leader Asserts His Faith in Early

Edgar G. Brown, president, United Government Employes, yesterday called on Joe Louis and others to withdraw their activities in the case of the New York City colored policeman who was allegedly kicked by White House Secretary Stephen T. Early, until investigations have been concluded.

Brown said that he represented 30,000 Negro Federal employes and that the New York incident imperiled racial relations. Agitation of it, he said, "should stop."

"Mr. Stephen T. Early, secretary to the President," he continued, "has made it possible for those of us on guard here at the Nation's Capital in all matters affecting the welfare of colored citizens North and South to receive an audience and proper consideration at all times before the powers that be in season and out," Brown said.

In view of his record, "I would be loathe to question his genuine friendship," he said.

Text of Roosevelt's Speech Blasting 'Democracy Haters'

Opponents Aiming At Dictators' Rule, President Says

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Nov. 1.—Following is the prepared text of President Roosevelt's political address tonight at the Brooklyn Academy of Music:

Sentiment is a very wonderful and continuing thing in the human race. It has brought me back again to this old Brooklyn Academy of Music on the Friday night before election.

This is a strange campaign. Here it is almost the day of election, and it is still impossible to determine what are the pronciples of the opposition party. What is it that the Republican leaders would do during the next four years if given a chance?

They have made campaign speches on all side of all questions.

On a Monday, we hear that this Administration has done a good job with its foreign policy; on Tuesday we hear the foreign policies of the United States condemned.

On Wednesday we understand that our policy toward agriculture should not be changed; and on Thursday we learn to our amazement that the farmers have been the victims of the New Deal and are forced to exist on a dole.

On Friday, we are treated to the encouraging thought that the social gains of labor during the past seven years should be continued; and on Saturday, we are told to weep because labor has been the principal sufferer under the New Deal.

To one group, further and bigger relief is held out; and to the big taxpayers cuts in expenditures are promised.

One day they say they would continue our good neighbor policy; the next day they hurl insults at certain of our good neighbors to the south.

That is the way they seek to catch a vote here and a vote there, and pick one out of the air.

There is, however, one explanation for these contradictions, rather a sad explanation. That explanation is found in the strange, the very strange, assortment of political bedfellows who have been brought together in the Republican political dormitory.

Many conflicting interests, many irreconcilable social outlooks, many fundamentally opposite economic attitudes have been thrown together under one political roof.

The only common philosophy and the only common purpose they have is to get wholly rid of all the New Deal—lock, stock and barrel—and to get control of Government in their own hands for their own purposes.

Just as they have not been able to foist their falsifications on the American people, they will never be able to foist this only common purpose of theirs upon the American people.

We will all see to that next Tuesday.

We all know the story of the unfortunate chameleon who turned brown when placed on a brown rug, and red when placed on a red rug, and who died a tragic death when they put him on a Scotch plaid. We all know what would happen to government if it tried to fulfill all the secret understandings and promises made between the conflicting groups which are now backing the Republican Party.

There is something very ominous in this combination which has been forming within the Republican Party between the extreme reactionary and the extreme radical elements of this country.

There is no common ground upon which they can unite, unless it be their common will to power, and their impatience with the normal democratic processes to produce overnight the inconsistent dictatorial ends they each seek.

Scores "Unholy Alliance"

No elements in American public life have made such vicious attacks upon each other in recent years, as have the members of this new unholy alliance against each other.

I do not think that some of the men, even some of the leaders, who have been drawn into this unholy alliance realize what a threat that sort of an alliance may bring to the future of democracy in this country.

I am certain that the rank and file of patriotic Republicans do not realize the nature of this threat.

They should remember, and we must remember, that the collaborative understanding between communism and naziism has done to the processes of democracy abroad.

Something evil is happening in this country when a full page advertisement against this Administration, paid for by Republican supporters, appears—where of all places?—in the Daily Worker, the newspaper of the Communist Party.

Something evil is happening in this country when vast quantities of Republican campaign literature are distributed by organizations which make no secret of their admiration for the dictatorship form of government.

These forces hate democracy and Christianity as two phases of the same civilization. They oppose democracy because it is Christian. They oppose Christianity because it preaches democracy.

Their objective is to prevent democracy from becoming strong and purposeful. We are strong and purposeful now and intend to remain so.

In the years after the last World War, Americans worked and built many things, but few of our people stopped to think why they were working and why they were building and whither they were tending.

Those were the days when prosperity was measured only by the stock ticker.

There were the factory workers forced to labor long hours at low wages in sweat shop conditions. They could look forward to no security in their old age. They could look forward to no insurance during periods of unemployment.

There were the farmers of the Nation, overburdened with debt and with farm surpluses, their income vanishing, their farms threatened with foreclosure.

There were the natural resources of the land being wasted—soil, forests, minerals, waterpower.

There were millions of workers, unable to organize to protect their livelihoods, unable to form trade unions.

There were the small businesses of the Nation, threatened by the monopolies of concentrated wealth.

The savings of the many were entrusted to supposedly great financiers, who were to lose these savings in fantastic adventures of giant holding companies and giant investment trusts.

The crash came as it had to come. And then for three years the American people waited and suffered. For three years the American Government did nothing to help.

In 1933, the American people began to stir themselves. They had come to learn that inaction offered no escape from the problems of a troubled and changing world.

The American people determined then and there that what could not be done by individual effort could be done through joint effort; that what the industrial and financial leaders could not do or would not do, a democratic Government could do, and would do.

You all know the history of recovery, beginning in 1933, and progressing ever since.

Our economic system began again to function. Then came the suggestion from monopolistic finance that while the Government had done a good rescue job, the best thing it could do at that point was to forget all about it, and to turn the whole economic system back to Wall Street to run it again.

They little knew the temper of the American people. The New Deal was no mere rescue party, to restore to a chosen few their old power over the people's savings, the people's labor, the people's lives.

Recalls "Frustrated Hopes"

We had seen social unrest at home and abroad—the frustrated hopes of common men and women, the apathy which is the forerunner of cynicism, the despair which dissolves civilization. What this Administration was determined to do was to save America from that frustration and from that despair.

We all remember how negligible was the opposition this Administration met in the early days, when it was cleaning up the wreckage which had come from the era of speculation.

The bitter opposition from Republican leaders did not come until a little later. It came when this Administration made it clear that we were not merely salvaging a few things from the past, but that we were determined to make our system of private enterprise and private profit work more efficiently and democratically, to fill the demands and needs of all the people of America.

We understand the philosophy of those who offer resistance and counter offensive against the American people's march of social progress. It is not an opposition which comes necessarily from wickedness—it is an opposition which comes from subconscious resistance to any measure which disturbs the position of privilege.

It is an unfortunate human failing, that a full pocketbook often groans more loudly than an empty stomach.

I am a firm believer in private enterprise and in private property. I am a firm believer in the American opportunity of men and women to rise in private enterprise.

Of course, if private opportunity is to remain safe, average men and women must be able to have it as part of their own individual satisfaction in life and their own stake in democracy.

With that in view we have pushed ahead with social and economic reforms, determined that this period in American life should be written down as an heroic era—an era in which men fought not merely to preserve a past, but to build a future.

We have seen nations great and small go down in ruin, or get backed up against the wall, because the reactionary men who led them could not see the real danger that threatened. They were afraid of losing their own selfish privilege and power. They feared the legitimate forward surge of their own common people, more than they feared the menacing might of foreign dictators.

For them, we take warning here.

Most Republican leaders in our own country for the last seven years have bitterly fought and blocked that forward surge of average men and women in the pursuit of happiness. And let us not be deluded that overnight those leaders have become the real friends of these average men and women.

Do you believe that the bulk of the money to finance this vast Republican campaign is being provided by people who have the interests of the common man at heart? Very few of us are so gullible.

Oh, they may say at election time that they approve the social gains and social objectives of the last seven years. But I say that these men have not yet proven that they even understand what these social gains or social objectives have been.

The American people know how many and how difficult were the battles we have fought and won in the last seven years.

Do you want to abandon the protection of people's savings from fraudulent manipulators, the curbing of giant holding companies that despoiled investors and consumers alike, by delivering them into the hands of those who have fought these reforms?

Do you want to abandon the responsibility for the well-being of those who live and work on the farms of the Nation to those who fought against the farm program every inch of the way?

Do you wan to abandon collective bargaining, the outlawing of child labor, the minimum wage, the time and a half for overtime, the elimination of sweatshop conditions, by turning them over to the proven enemies of labor?

Do you want to hamstring the old-age pension system, unemployment insurance, aid for children and maternity welfare, vocational training for the physically handicapped, financial aid to the blind, by delivering them into the hands of those who have fought and misrepresented these reforms?

Do you want to abandon slum clearance to those Republican leaders who have fought against appropriations for decent housing?

Do you want to turn over your Government to those who failed to have confidence in the future of America and who now preach fear for the future of America? As an example of this doctrine of fear certain insurance companies are now sending letters to their policyholders, warning them that if this Administration is retained in office, their policies will shrink in value.

This is just another form of pay-envelope campaign of fear like the one in 1936.

The fact is that the very existence of most of these insurance companies was saved in 1933 by this Administration. They are today fully solvent, more solvent than they were in their lives before.

If there was a vestige of truth in these dangerous forebodings, the bonds of the United States would be selling very low in price instead of well above par. The fact is, however, that only last week the Government of the United States sold one-year bonds for public housing—$100,000,000 worth of them at an interest rate of only ¼ of 1 per cent. They were oversubscribed 18 times. That certainly indicates the solidity—a safety—of the credit of the United States. And if you need further proof, look at the Treasury of the Commonwealth & Southern System. There you will find that they have bought and hold $21,000,000 of United States Government securities.

Our program in the past, our program for the future, is equality of economic opportunity. Such a program calls for many things. It requires an orderly settlement of industrial disputes not by those devoted to company unions, but by agencies alert to the requirements of labor and mindful of the responsibilities of industry.

This program entails old-age insurance and unemployment insurance, operating on an increasingly wider base, so that eventually it will include every man and woman in the country.

It makes available cheap credit to impoverished tenants, consumers, and small business. In fact, our program starts with small business, so that it may grow and flourish.

It curbs the old predatory activities of high finance and monopoly tactics.

It guarantees that our national resources are used for the benefit of the whole people—not exploited for the benefit of a few.

It provides for the resettlement of farmers from marginal lands to richer lands, and for farm ownership for enslaved tenants.

Monopoly does not like this program. Certain types of high finance do not like it. Most of the American plutocracy does not like it.

But the vast majority of American business, the backbone of American business, continues to grow and flourish under it. For that business is interested in reasonable profits, not promoters' tribute. That business is interested in freedom from monopolistic restraints and economic imperialism. That business knows that the farmers, the workers, the great mass of our citizens have never asked for more than equality and fair play.

We are a Nation of many nationalities, many races, many religions—bound together by a single unity, the unity of freedom and equality.

Whoever seeks to set one nationality against another, seeks to degrade all nationalities.

Whoever seeks to set one race against another seeks to enslave all races.

Whoever seeks to set one religion against another, seeks to destroy all religion.

So-called racial and religious voting blocs are the creation of designing politicians who profess to be able to deliver them on election day. But every American citizen—realizing how precious is his right to the secret ballot—does scorn and will scorn such unpatriotic politicians. The vote of Americans will be American—and only American.

The true attitude of some leaders of the Republican Party toward the common man is not frequently revealed, but occasionally their true feelings break through the restraints which a political campaign places upon their tongues, and they misspeak themselves. We can then see their true sentiments in all their naked unloveliness.

In a Republican campaign speech the other day a prominent leader of the Philadelphia bar delivered himself in these words, quoted in the New York Times:

The President's only supporters, he said (and I quote) "are paupers, those who earn less than $1,200 a year and aren't worth that, and the Roosevelt family."

Forget the Roosevelt family—but these Americans whom this man calls "paupers," these Americans who in his view are not worth the income they receive, small though it is—who are they? They are only millions and millions of American families, constituting a very large part of the Nation! They are only the common men and women who have helped build this country, who have made it great, and who would defend it with their lives if the need arose.

The demand for social and economic justice comes from those who receive less than $1,200 a year, but not from them alone. For I believe that when Americans cross this dividing line of $100 a month, they do not lose their devotion to social and economic justice.

They do not suddenly become greedy and selfish. And I count among my supporters millions of other men and women who vote by the dictates of their hearts and minds, and not by the size of their bank accounts.

"Paupers"—who are not worth their salt—there speaks the true sentiment of the Republican leadership.

Can the Republican leaders deny that this all too prevalent Republican sentiment is a direct, vicious, unpatriotic appeal to class hatred to class contempt?

That, my friends, is just what I am fighting against with all my heart and soul.

I am fighting for a free America—for a country in which all men and women have equal rights to liberty and justice.

I am fighting against the revival of government by special privilege—government by lobbyists—government vested in the hands of those who favor and who would have us imitate the foreign dictatorships.

I am fighting, as I have always fought, for the rights of the little man as well as the big man, for the weak as well as the strong, for those who are helpless as well as for those who can help themselves.

I am fighting to keep this Nation prosperous and at peace. I am fighting to keep our people out of foreign wars, and to keep foreign conceptions of government out of our own United States.

I am fighting for these great and good causes. I am fighting to defend them against the power and might of those who now rise up to challenge them.

And I shall not stop fighting!

Hoover Declares Preservation of Democracy Is the Main Issue in Campaign

New Deal Has An Axis Odor, He Charges

Former President Says Men Are Not Free Under Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

Salt Lake City, Nov. 1.—Herbert Hoover said tonight the fundamental issue in the present campaign still is "the preservation of democracy."

Discussing "the major issues" in an address prepared for a political meeting and a Nation-wide broadcast, the former President asserted:

"If we are to save democracy we must save the roots of democracy. We must save the philosophy. This is the battle of America."

The New Deal started, he said, with three economic ideas:

"First, the whole American system was a wreck and wrong and must be made over. Second, new frontiers of enterprise were gone and the job was to divide the existing pot. Third, the Federal Government should be exalted to control of economic life. They adopted the European words of 'planned economy,' 'economic planning.'

"You will find every one of these economic ideas somewhere along the Berlin-Rome-Moscow Axis, and to force these ideas on America you have seen attempts to control our courts, to control our Congress, to control our elections, to control our public opinion with mass propaganda and slogans, and finally to demand a third term. All that at least has a pronounced odor of totalitarian government.

"You cannot mix these ideas into a society of free men and women.

"Are men free when there is political manipulation of currency, credit, wages, prices and production? Does free enterprise consist of the Government in business in competition with the citizen? Are men made free by changing regulation to prevent abuses by a minority of bad men into dictation to good men as to conduct of their business? Are farmers free men when it is dictated to them what they can sow and reap?

"They have driven our economy on fear, not upon faith, upon tied men, not free men . . .

Wants Change in Direction

"The end result was to fix depression as a chronic way of American life. This munitions boom may obscure it momentarily. But the consequences are inevitable. It is only by a change in national direction that there lies the moral as well as the economic regeneration of America.

"Mr. Willkie has been bravely crusading this country from one end to the other, demanding a change of national direction back to free men. That issue would be enough for one campaign, but there are others."

Recalling that he discussed the third-term issue last week, Mr. Hoover remarked "we are not concerned with an empty tradition—we are concerned with a vital check on the rise of personal power."

He noted that the Department of Labor has said there are about 4,500,000 persons on the Federal pay roll throughout all its agencies and asked:

"Do you think that, in another four years you have a chance to defeat such a Presidential power for himself or his successor?"

Willkie, he added, "is, by character and temperament, no seeker for personal power. His dominant hope is public service."

Describing the Administration's ideas of public spending as "frantic efforts to stimulate deadened enterprise by pump priming," he warned that "the end is trebled taxes, huge deficits, and the dangers of printing press credit."

Willkie's mentality, he said, "is not the kind that promotes such policies. His constant insistence is to get this economic machine functioning, produce, give jobs, make a market for farm products in full stomachs instead of half-full stomachs, build up national income, create the production out of which taxes can be paid and deficits overcome. And above all, open the windows of hope to American youth."

As one who not only has served in the White House but has "enjoyed the friendship of five Presidents," Hoover commented:

"The first requisites of a President of the United States are intellectual honesty and sincerity. Those Mr. Willkie possesses. The second requirement is intelligence. That Mr. Willkie has abundantly. The third requirement is executive ability. That includes the ability to choose honest and able men. Mr. Willkie has demonstrated that in his life work."

Weatherman Predicts Rain for Election Day

By the United Press

There's a mighty good chance that the rains will come Tuesday, election day.

The United States Weather Bureau's long-range forecast system, whereby it predicts the weather five days in advance, says there will be showers over much of the Nation. The bureau admits that it has been wrong before and maybe it will be again.

Joe Louis Booed At Harlem Rally

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Joe Louis, heavyweight boxing champion of the world, was booed at a Republican political rally in the heart of Harlem last night, but he took it like a champ.

"You boys," said the imperturbable Brown Bomber, "can boo 'til you get blue in the face . . . but I'll just keep on talking."

Looking down at his hecklers, he declared, "I'm used to boos—and I win anyway."

This brought a wave of cheers.

He was there to urge the election of Wendell L. Willkie. Police estimated 3,500 to 4,000 colored people jammed into a ballroom to hear him, and that 3,000 to 4,000 waited outside.

"If Willkie is elected," said Louis, who has promised in writing to put over the antilynching bill, Roosevelt has been in office for eight years and done nothing about that. The people in the North don't know how that is eight years."

The Presidential Campaign

McNary Asks 'Economy of Abundance'

By the Associated Press

Salt Lake City, Nov. 1.—Senator Charles L. McNary pleaded today for revival of the "spirit of enterprise" as typified by the pioneer Mormon settlers and urged rejection of "the New Deal creed that we are an aging people, ready to give up the struggle."

McNARY

The Republican nominee for Vice President said in a campaign speech:

"The Republican Party and the next Administration take direct issue with the concept of a shrinking economy.

"We propose to create greater abundance; not to strive for scarcity, and devote our chief energy to planning how to distribute that scarcity.

Assails Trade Pact "Dogmas"

"In addition the next Administration will not be bound by the free trade dogmas of Secretary of State Hull.

"The next Administration undoubtedly will deal with foreign countries realistically.

"At the least it will reserve to the American farm producer first access to his own market. It will further, by every means, seek to enlarge the American market for farm products."

In an area where the sugar crop is important, McNary criticized provisions of the Sugar Act under which he said "our growers are permitted to produce less than 30 per cent of the sugar consumed by our own people.

Favors Reclamation Over Relief

One quarter of the "huge sum" spent in the plains, mountains and coast States to relieve the needy, McNary said at one point, "would have afforded homes and means of livelihood" to thousands of distressed people if it had been spent on reclamation projects instead.

"The New Deal, satisfied with its farm program, sees the aggregate improvement it has been able to make in the farmers' lot, as a maximum aim," he continued. "I see it as a minimum." Then he added:

"And I assert, in full confidence, that the next Administration will be able to provide something better."

G. O. P. Perils Corn Price, Wallace Says

With Wallace Touring Eastern Ohio, Nov. 1 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace today asked eastern Ohio farmers to vote for the New Deal to assure continuation of the corn loan, which he described as "the backbone of livestock prices in the Midwest."

"If you don't like the corn loan, vote Republican," the Vice Presidential nominee said as he swung through Ohio agricultural areas.

WALLACE

This challenge for a vote of confidence in one of the Roosevelt Administration's prime agricultural policies followed a similar declaration by Wallace in Iowa that serious consequences would result if the corn-loan plan was discontinued.

Wendell L. Willkie's assertion that the United States would be at war by April 1 if President Roosevelt were reelected was termed by Wallace "an April fool joke of the most dastardly type."

Wallace told a group at Coshocton that "Wendell Willkie in his recent Akron speech made it clear that he was against production control."

"Production control is necessary and if we try any other method we'll be shooting toward 10-cent corn," said Wallace.

In Coshocton, home town of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, Wallace praised labor for its part in developing the farm program.

Wallace came here after declaring at New York that Willkie's campaign speeches indicated "he is not qualified by experience or judgment for the difficult task of keeping America secure and at peace," and that Willkie had shown "a complete confusion of mind" upon foreign issues.

The Republican leadership in Congress for the last several years, Wallace continued, "has misjudged the probability of a European war, the weakness of the Allied Powers, the need for an early start on the American defense program.

Wallace Attacked In Talk by Peek

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—George N. Peek, former AAA Administrator, farm leader and industrialist, asserted today that it was Henry Wallace, "more than anyone else who sabotaged President Roosevelt's 1932 pledges to agriculture and thereby destroyed any hope of attaining the objective which the McNary-Haugen bills sought."

PEEK

The Democratic Vice Presidential candidate, Peek told the Agricultural Club, "never favored the ideal upon which the McNary-Haugen bills were based, that of a domestic American economy independent of world economy," but favored instead "a world economy and a reduction in the American standards of living to the world level."

Peek charged, in his prepared speech, that everyone of Mr. Roosevelt's promises of 1932 "went out the window in favor of a system of free trade, acreage restriction and farm regimentation, directed from Washington, of course, by an enormous, constantly increasing and highly paid Federal bureaucracy.

"Instead of tariff protection of the home market as Mr. Roosevelt promised, they (the farmers) got Hull's trade agreement program which has at last cast off its camouflage and is admitted by Hull to be a general tariff reduction, effected without Congressional sanction, although this has been flatly denied by Mr. Roosevelt late in 1935. Under it many important agricultural schedules were reduced, among them cattle and dairy products.

"At the same time, under the influence of the free trade notions of Secretary Hull and Henry Wallace, no effort was made to dispose of surpluses of our export crops by Yankee trading or any other kind of trading in foreign markets as Mr. Roosevelt promised. This was in the face of practical demonstrations that such trades could be made."

Jackson Predicts Republican Bolt

Attorney-General Jackson told a Binghamton, N. Y., audience last night that many "conscientious Republicans" would vote for Mr. Roosevelt.

JACKSON

He incorporated in his speech a statement from Mayor Leon F. Roberts of Jamestown, N. Y., a Republican, saying that he would vote for reelection of the President because "the wealth that is supporting Willkie in this campaign is fighting to transfer the cost of Government from itself to those who can afford to pay no more."

"Who are the men who most earnestly desire the overthrow of the New Deal and the election of Mr. Willkie?" Roberts asked. "Are they not the same men who fought enactment of the social security law? Regulation of the stock exchange? Unemployment insurance? Old-age pensions? Yes, and even workmen's compensation, and every other New Deal measure that has changed the despair of the common man to hope? Are they not the same men who, even today, resist the law of the land which compels them to bargain collectively with their employes? Can we afford to trust our hard-won gains in the hands of a group whose dearest wish is to scuttle the laws that made those gains possible?"

Insurance Man Hits Back at Flynn

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Herbert W. Schaeffer, chairman of the Insurance-Club-For-Willkie, declared today that "the Administration has clearly demonstrated its intent to federalize the insurance business."

He made the statement in answering a recent charge by Edward J. Flynn, Democratic national chairman, that "an alleged insurance association, presumably connected with the Republican organization, has been flooding the mail with statements calculated to alarm 64,000,000 life insurance holders in the United States."

James Thomson Favors Willkie

New Orleans, Nov. 1 (AP).—James M. Thomson, veteran publisher of the New Orleans Item and Tribune, announced in a front page editorial today he would scratch the Democratic ticket for the first time in his life Tuesday to vote for Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican Presidential nominee.

THOMSON

"I look upon the no-third term tradition as a part of the unwritten law of our republic," Thomson said.

The Item, published by Thomson, is one of the South's oldest afternoon newspapers and has been Democratic for 63 years. "It supported Franklin D. Roosevelt for President in 1932, when Thomson served as Louisiana chairman to raise money for the National Democratic Committee campaign purposes, and again in 1936.

[Thomson married Genevieve Clark, daughter of the late Speaker Champ Clark, candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1912—Editor's note.]

Roosevelt Means War, Says Cobb

San Francisco, Nov. 1 (AP).—Irvin S. Cobb said tonight, "We may be very sure—as sure as the sun shines—that President Roosevelt, if reelected, will carry us into war as swiftly as he can take us there."

In an address prepared for a Nation-wide (N. B. C.—Red) broadcast, Cobb asked, "What's wrong with the horse-swapping idea?" and added he would vote the "straight Democratic ticket" Tuesday—and "I'm going to vote for a man named Wendell Willkie."

Regarding President Roosevelt's reference to Joseph Kennedy as "my ambassador," Cobb said:

"We may be very sure that if we give him (Roosevelt) an unlimited tenure of office, by electing him to a third term, it shortly will not be 'our' or 'your,' but 'my Army, 'my Navy,' 'my Government' and 'my war.'"

Cobb asserted he had "countless" reasons for opposing the "perpetuation of the political theories of the double deal, most of them having accumulated since the beginning of 1937.

"In fact, I counted up to the first half million and then I got tired and stopped."

Glass Displeased By G.O.P. Pressure

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—United States Senator Carter Glass today expressed displeasure at what he said seemed to be a concerted effort to induce him not to vote for the nominees of the National Democratic Presidential Coonvention at Chicago.

GLASS

For the last two weeks Senator Glass said he has been receiving an average of at least ten telegrams and letters each day from various States urging him to support the Republican candidates and reminding him of his previously expressed opposition to a third-term for any President.

Said Mr. Glass:

"I have repeatedly stated since the Chicago convention that it is my purpose to vote for the nominees of that convention and I have not for an instant altered that determination.

"Persons who are sending me telegrams and writing me letters urging me to take a different course are wasting both their time and money. I have consistently had the conviction that any person who participates in the proceedings of a party convention is honorably bound to abide by the result. . . .

"Moreover, I noticed that an expression of opinion made by me nearly five years ago in personal conversation is being used by the opposition as if the words had been uttered in the pending political campaign. This species of unfairness may be responsible for the totally futile supposition that I may be induced to alter my purpose to vote for the nominees of the Chicago convention. No such thing will occur."

Dempsey Calls Joe Louis 'a Fool'

New York, Nov. 1.—Jack Dempsey, former world's heavyweight champion, today threw a terrific verbal one-two punch at Joe Louis, present titleholder, because of the latter's indorsement of Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential candidate.

Dempsey was harsh on John L. Lewis, also, saying "I don't think Mr. Lewis has been fair to his followers in the C. I. O. or to President Roosevelt."

"As for Joe Louis, he's just a fool. By coming out for Willkie he's talking against his race and his people. He should remember he was a poor man himself. He used to pick cotton. Mr. Roosevelt is the poor man's friend."

Berlin Opposing Roosevelt—Ickes

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Nov. 1 (AP).—Secretary Ickes charged in an address tonight that the German government was directing a campaign from Berlin against the reelection of President Roosevelt.

ICKES

"The fact that Adolf Hitler does not want Franklin D. Roosevelt in the White House during the next four years," Ickes added, "is the best reason I know of for keeping him there."

At the outset of his address, Ickes said he did not question the Americanism of the Republican candidate, Wendell Willkie, nor the sincerity of his statements opposing the Nazi doctrine.

"The impertinent advice from Berlin to defeat President Roosevelt," he continued, "is not based upon any belief that the international policies of Wendell Willkie are different from those of President Roosevelt. It is the result of the conviction that Franklin D. Roosevelt has, and Wendell Willkie has not, the strength and knowledge and resourcefulness needed to thwart the Nazi plan for world conquest."

Ickes said the campaign was being conducted in Nazi and Fascist publications in this country, and also by propaganda among "appeasement" elements in the country.

In addition, he said, Berlin has broadcast dispatches to South America designed to undermine American influence and discredit President Roosevelt. He read excerpts from dispatches which he said had been broadcast.

One of these, dated June 23, described Mr. Roosevelt as "the spiritual father of England's war policy" and added that "when England has to choose between reason or destruction, Roosevelt evidently tried to smooth Churchill's (British prime minister) path and gain time for England. If the United States public allowed itself to be gulled, then Roosevelt may be reelected and Great Britain choose not the path of reason but that of destruction."

Another, dated August 8, said: "A struggle will develop between Germany and the United States, but it will be the United States who will suffer."

Reed Calls Willkie A True Democrat

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—James A. Reed, former United States Senator from Missouri, tonight described Wendell L. Willkie as a better Democrat than President Roosevelt "from every standpoint of true democracy and measured by every yardstick."

Reed, terming himself the same kind of Democrat as Champ Clark, whom Reed nominated for the Presidency, addressed a meeting sponsored by the Democrats for Willkie of Illinois, in the Chicago Civic Opera House.

"This is not a contest between political parties," he declared. "At Chicago, Mr. Roosevelt, having already betrayed and submarined the Democratic Party, nominated himself.

"At Philadelphia, a convention called Republican nominated a dyed-in-the-wool Jeffersonian Democrat who refused to follow the New Dealers into the quagmire of socialistic and bolshevistic boondoggling."

"Somebody must mobilize the business of America," he said. "Somebody must guide its finances. Somebody must marshal its army.

"Women of America, your boy may be summoned to the field. Sixteen million boys are under draft . . . When your boy goes forth which would you rather have as commander in chief—

"Roosevelt, the financial, economic and legislative failure, the man who stood by and saw our army in a state of inefficiency and without equipment?

"Or would you rather have the soldier who fought in the field and who won his stripes by valor in battle—Wendell Willkie."

Pro-Willkie People Control Gallup Poll, Flynn Charges

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 1.—Edward J. Flynn, Democratic national chairman, who heretofore has declined to comment on any of the Presidential polls, asserted today that the Gallup Poll is "controlled by pro-Willkie people."

FLYNN

Flynn, at a press conference, said the Gallup Poll was "attempting to bolster the idea there is a swing to Willkie."

In response to a question as to whether he had any comment on the declaration of Axis power spokesmen that President Roosevelt was initiating "an offensive against the Axis," Flynn said:

"That proves conclusively that the Axis powers are attempting to create a situation to help Willkie and bears out pretty grimly the fact that they are behind Willkie." Turning to his comment on the poll, the chairman remarked:

"It is very apparent that the Gallup Poll is attempting to do now what it did during the Philadelphia convention," Flynn said. "There, however, they were dealing with delegates and not with voters."

(A Gallup poll released during the Republican National Convention showed Willkie as the favored candidate for the nomination.)

Dr. George Gallup issued this statement at his headquarters in Princeton, N. J.:

"That statement (Flynn's) is just about as fantastic as the one made by some Willkie supporters about a month ago that the Gallup poll had sold out to the New Deal for $100,000, or as fantastic as a statement in the Chicago Tribune that 'Dr. Gallup is known to be a rabid New Dealer.' Let's wait and count the chips after the election."

Representative Joseph W. Martin, G. O. P. national chairman, said he wished he had known "about this said control several weeks ago when the poll gave us an awful bump."

Flynn said the poll was "careful to note many undecided votes" and thus "trying to cover themselves up."

"For example in States like New York, Connecticut and Missouri which they (the poll) say have switched to Willkie—my information shows it is not so," Flynn said.

"They are taking practically the same course as the Literary Digest did four years ago (it forecast Landon's election) and will come to the same end," Flynn added.

At a later press conference, Flynn made public a letter which he said came from the Willkie-McNary headquarters in Brooklyn, addressed to a first voter. He said the letter carried the "implied promise of fine jobs for unemployed people."

He characterized it as possibly "the absolute low in cruelty and deception" in the campaign and added that it was a "deliberate attempt to mislead poor people into thinking they are getting a job by filling out the application blank inclosed."

At Republican headquarters, Martin announced the indorsement of Willkie by Dr. Daniel Poling, editor of the Christian Herald and Ferdinand Q. Morton, Negro member of the New York Civil Service Commission, a life-time Democrat.

Gillette Sets Campaign Cost At $24,000,000

Complaints of Hatch Act Violations Pour In to Him

By Stanley Carroll
International News Service Staff Writer.

The dramatic battle to elect a President of the United States and other officers Tuesday will cost the Democratic and Republican parties between $24,000,000 and $30,000,000, Senator Gillette (Democrat), Iowa, chairman of the Senate Compaign Expenditures Committee, estimated last night.

The Hatch (Clean Politics) Act limits each party to annual campaign expenditures of $3,000,000 each.

"My estimate," Senator Gillette told International News Service, "is my own guess, but it is based upon reports which our committee has received. They (the expenditures) may be more or they may be less—I don't know. But, conclusions based upon the information we have received lead me to believe that each party in this election will spend between four or five times the $3,000,000 maximum limitation provided in the Hatch Act."

Complaints Pour In

Complaints pouring in upon the committee from all parts of the Nation cite instances in which individuals or firms have contributed $5,000 each to the Democratic or Republican National Committee and an amount equal or larger to State or local campaign chests.

Senator Gillette said he believed it would be "a reasonable construction" of the Hatch act to assume that it would permit such donations to State or local committees, regardless of contributions to national committees.

"That is a matter which must be interpreted by the Supreme Court," he said. "It seems very logical to assume that the Hatch Act, in its present form, does not fix any limit upon the amount which any individual can donate to a State or local political committee."

Senator Gillette said his committee is studying proposals for rigid tightening of the Hatch Act, but he declined comment on the changes being considered.

Plan to Strengthen Act

"We will have recommendations to make for strengthening the Hatch Act, but I cannot say what they will be until the full committee has decided upon them," he said.

The committee recently received a telegram from Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, author of the Hatch Act, expressing concern over reports that individuals were contributing up to $5,000 to State and local campaign committees regardless of their donations to the national parties. Hatch asked for a special study of this matter.

"There is no way at this moment of knowing how much is being contributed to either major party by individuals," Senator Gillette said. "That is one of the things that we expect to learn later."

Gillette said that the committee has already made plans to police elections next week in a number of States from which complaints of alleged irregularities have been received.

Ripped Willkie's Picture, Prison Guard Fired

Joliet, Ill., Nov. 1 (AP).—Joseph E. Ragen, superintendent of Illinois prisons, said today he had ordered the dismissal of Malcolm Brown, 31-year-old prison guard here, as a result of Brown's actions last night in connection with a Republican torchlight parade.

Brown was seized by police who said he had climbed aboard a float and ripped pictures of Republican Presidential Candidate Willkie.

Ragen, a Democrat, said "such practice cannot be tolerated."

Stark Probes Charge Of Willkie Vote-Buying

Jefferson City, Mo., Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Gov. Lloyd C. Stark tonight ordered an intensive and open investigation of New York Mayor F. H. LaGuardia's charges that Willkie campaign workers were handing Negroes $1 bills folded as a "W."

LaGuardia made his charge in a speech at St. Louis last night, displaying such a folded bill. He said in this manner voters were being "bought" in St. Louis.

Charles Ferguson, Republican State chairman in a telegram to Stark asked for the investigation and said he was offering $1,000 reward for "proof of the charges."

LaGuardia Calls Tie-Mauling Suit Of Detroit Man 'a Republican Stunt'

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Mayor LaGuardia tonight described as "a Republican stunt" in the service against him of a summons and complaint for $350,000 for the alleged mauling of Benjamin H. Owens in Detroit.

LAGUARDIA

"There isn't anything too low for a utility campaign or a utility candidate," he added. "And if there is any doubt about who the candidate is, it is Wendell Willkie."

LaGuardia, irked, seized Owens, a fare box inspector of Ferndale, Mich., and twisted his tie when Owens asked, "Did Boss Flynn send you here?" The mayor had just spoken in behalf of President Roosevelt's campaign for reelection.

Owens' complaint charges the mayor with assault and battery and defamation of character.

Owens' brother, Robert W. Owens, jr., a member of the law firm which brought the suit, was present at city hall, and told reporters his brother had been "shaken up," and that "I can only say that my brother has more patience than the rest of the Owens clan."

Asked what he would have done himself, he replied, "I would have cleared for action."

Tear Bomb Disperses Missouri G.O.P. Rally

Springfield, Mo., Nov. 1 (AP).—Phil A. Bennett, Republican nominee for Representative in Congress, said a tear gas bomb was tossed into a crowd of 650 persons in a store building at Pleasant Hill last night, breaking up a rally at which Bennett was the speaker.

"I had finished my speech and was showing a movie produced by the Republican National Committee when someone threw the bomb," Bennett said. "It nearly put my eyes out. Naturally the crowd scattered. But it was so dense that we couldn't find out who threw the bomb."

Text of Willkie's Speech Assailing President for Delay in Plane Production

GOP Nominee Hits 'Neglect And Abuse'

Charges U. S. Lost Rank as No. 1 Air Power Under New Deal

By the Associated Press

Aboard Willkie Train in New Jersey, Nov. 1.—Following is the prepared text of a radio talk by Wendell Willkie from his special campaign train.

For several weeks I have been campaigning across the country preaching the doctrine of production. I have tried to show that industrial and agricultural production is the foundation of national defense as well as of domestic prosperity.

The third-term candidate, in his speech at Boston, finally ate his own words, and admitted that expanding production is essential. In that speech he discussed, among other things, the question of military airplanes. And this is what he said:

"What counts most in sustained air power is the productive capacity of our airplane factories."

And he went on to say that the productive capacity of the United States "will make us the strongest air power in the world."

But he has come to it fearfully late. And even now he does not seem to know the difference between production on hand and production that is just on order. The third-term candidate in that speech repeated his promise to attain a production capacity of 50,000 planes a year in the United States, and he said:

"Day and night we are working and making rapid progress toward that goal." That sounds good. But let's look into the record to see just when we began to make this rapid progress and see how far we are getting.

Airpower Spurts

But it is very late. Years ago Spain was used as a proving ground for the bombing and fighting planes of the dictators. Whole towns were wiped out by the Nazi bombers to test the power of modern warplanes. The lessons of Spain and of the Far East impressed our War Department. In June, 1937, Secretary of War Woodring, in his annual report to the President warned us of the need for strengthening our air forces. He said:

"It should be borne in mind that modern aircraft cannot be quickly improvised. The construction of airplanes necessarily takes considerable time. Hence our peacetime strength should approximate rather closely our requirements in war."

That was more than three years ago. Yet the third-term candidate in a special message to Congress in January, 1939, had this to say:

"No responsible officer advocates the building up of an air force to the total of planes on hand or of productive capacity equal to the forces of certain other nations."

Note that he said not merely that we didn't need the planes on hand, but that we did not need the productive capacity.

That was four months after Munich. Nine months later, Poland was blasted into surrender by Hitler's air force. Yet it was not until May 16, 1940, almost eight months after the surrender of Poland, that the New Deal Administration woke up to the fact that the United States had only a few hundred fighting planes. Incidentally, none of those planes was up to the standard of the war in the air that was raging in Europe. Not one of them had self-sealing fuel tanks, armor or sufficiently heavy fire power.

But at that late date, the third-term candidate made a speech to Congress in which he pictured the possible bombing of our great Middle Western cities, and called for a program of 50,000 military and naval airplanes, plus capacity to produce that number each year.

Charges "Neglect, Abuse"

This was the first real indication that the third-term candidate gave of his interest in airplanes and airplane production. Behind it lay a history of neglect and abuse. Let's run back over that history. It helps to explain the perilous position in which we now find ourselves.

In 1933, when the New Deal first took office, the United States was the acknowledged leader of the world in aviation. When the third-term candidate first took office, we had assistant secretaries of air in the War and Navy Departments. These offices became vacant. Mr. Roosevelt never filled them, and they are vacant to this very day. And listen to the reason he gave. It was said to be for purposes of economy.

That was the third-term candidate's shining tribute to governmental economy. He saved a few thousand dollars a year at the expense of out aviation. But since that time he has spent more than $60,000,000,000. These few thousand saved in relation to $60,000,000,000 spent looks like a cinder in a path to the moon. But that wasn't all. Less than a year after he had first taken office, the third-term candidate gave a tremendous set-back to the development of our civil aviation by canceling arbitrarily and without warning, all domestic air-mail contracts. Every one remembers that tragic episode. Without instruments, without preparation, and without the specialized training required, the Army was ordered to fly the mail. It obeyed orders. And twelve young Army aviators crashed to their deaths before an aroused public opinion compelled the New Deal to beat a hasty retreat from this disastrous political raid upon our aviation companies.

The only excuse that was ever given was that the canceled contracts had been signed under a Republican Administration. The New Deal never brought into court any charges against the companies or their officials.

The contracts were ultimately restored to the same companies which had previously held them. In the meantime, our aviation industry had been given a black eye by a smearing investigation conducted by Senator Hugo Black, who was later elevated to the Supreme Court, for no reason understandable to anybody.

In Boston on Wednesday night, the third-term candidate related with pride the efforts at rapid expansion that are being made by our private airplane manufacturers.

But I should like to ask him this:

Mr. Third-Term Candidate, what have you ever done to encourage the expansion of our private airplane factories?

The recent expansion in our airplane production has been due almost entirely to orders placed by commercial airlines and foreign governments. Much of the expansion of our airplane industry is due to the orders of the British government. Until the last few months, our major aircraft factories were starved for orders, as far as this Administration was concerned.

The third-term candidate spoke to us about the hum of activity in airplane manufacturing plants, making it sound as though he alone were responsible for it. Let me tell you about one of them. The great rush to expand airplane production at this plant is due not to any encouragement from the New Deal, but is a result of its past neglect. In August, 1939, a contract was signed with this particular manufacturer for 38 large bombers. That contract included an option for 212 additional bombers. But four months later, on December 21, 1939, that option was allowed to expire because the Administration took no action on it.

A second option for the same 212 bombers was given. And that, too, expired because the New Dealers failed to take it up. That option was allowed to expire in March, 1940—six months after the outbreak of the war, and just two months before the third-term candidate rushed to Congress with his talk about fifty thousand planes.

Option Exercised

The option for the bombers that now are being made by that plant was not exercised until last April, and then only 42 bombers were ordered.

It was not until 47 days ago that a contract for additional bombers under the emergency defense program was actually signed with this manufacturer.

And at the time, since August, 1939, these options tied up that plant as far as other business was concerned.

The third-term candidate also spoke about the Curtiss-Wright airplane engine plants at Paterson. Well, here's a little history about that.

One of the biggest jams in our program of airplane production has been the effort to produce, at the eleventh hour, an efficient liquid-cooled engine. Such an engine was developed some years ago by the Curtiss-Wright corporation. It was called the Conqueror motor and was the only great liquid-cooled airplane engine in the United States at that time.

But in 1936 the Curtiss-Wright Corporation was forced to discontinue the manufacture and perfection of that engine because of insufficient Army orders. As a result our airplane program has been slowed down in recent months because of the difficulties in manufacturing a new liquid-cooled engine. This situation would never have arisen if the Government had encouraged the Curtiss-Wright Corporation to keep its Conqueror engine in production.

Of course, we are making progress. Our airplane companies are making every effort to obtain production, production and still more production. The credit belongs to these private manufacturers who doggedly kept going and who are now patriotically bending every effort to make up for the loss of time and the discouragement.

The credit for increased production belongs to the airplane industry and to the orders that have been placed here by Great Britain. The credit or discredit for our lack of greater productive capacity belongs elsewhere. And the third-term candidate knows where it belongs.

And now, with deceptive optimism he tells us we are making "very rapid progress toward the goal" of a production capacity of 50,000 planes a year. He tells us proudly that he has asked for sympathetic consideration for orders that the British government seeks to place with American manufacturers for 12,000 additional planes.

This will bring Britain's present orders for military planes from the United States to more than 26,000 planes.

But he does not tell us when Britain will get those 26,000 planes, nor when our military forces will get the 50,000 planes he talks about.

For that information, however, we have reliable sources.

William S. Knudsen made a statement about airplane production on October 8 last. This is what he said:

"We are scheduled to turn out 1,133 planes in October. I think we will get around 900 to 950."

In other words, Mr. Knudsen tells us that this month we are scheduled to turn out only 1,133 planes. And yet, we know that Germany is currently turning out at least twice that number each month.

But more than that. According to Mr. Knudsen's figures, our actual production will fall about 200 planes below the schedule; and remember I am talking in terms of actual planes and not in terms of percentage of undisclosed figures.

In October, we will only get from 900 to 950 planes. At that rate, how long will it take to make these 26,000 planes for Great Britain plus 50,000 planes for our own armed forces?

Well, Mr. Knudsen had something further to say on that. He said:

"We hope to reach 1,250 planes by January 1, and 1,500 planes by July 1. After that we should do better up to the spring of 1942, when we hope to reach 3,000 planes."

That means that it will be another 18 months before we are scheduled to produce as many as 3,000 planes a month or 36,000 a year. And if we succeed in fulfilling the schedule which we are not doing at this time, we will still be far short of the goal of 50,000 planes toward which the third-term candidate says we are making such progress.

Now, in pointing this out, I do not imply any criticism whatever of our airplane manufacturers. They are doing an amazing job in keeping with the finest traditions of American industry. I merely want to say that we should stop fooling ourselves with talk about rapidly reaching a 50,000 plane production annually, which fools nobody who knows anything about the subject. Anybody who knows anything about production will understand that after years of neglect and abuse of industry by the New Deal that goal cannot be reached short of a period of years. Mere talk won't bring us closer.

And when the third-term candidate talks about 26,000 planes for Britain, let's not fool ourselves about that either and above all, let's not fool the British people. We must arm Britain with planes, not disarm her with political speeches. Even if we give them complete priority over our own defense needs, it will still take years to fill their orders.

Charges Other Delays

And the tragedy of it is, that a little foresight, a little understanding of the facts that industrial production could have made it possible for American industry and American workers to pour out today a stream of airplanes for Britain that would assure her safety against any Nazi invasion.

And American industry—workers and managers together would be turning out a stream of airplanes to make our land impregnable.

Once again the third-term candidate has given us a speech about defenses that are not on hand—but just on order.

"We had an Administration, which for over seven years has not, and does not have the capacity or the training to understand the facts of production, and has not believed in the need for productive capacity.

"The third-term candidate told us eight years ago that we had no more need for industrial plants. His followers, pursuing this utterance to its logical conclusion, had told us that we could not hope to find employment in private industry for all our people.

"All over this country in the last several weeks I have been preaching production, production. Only by production, only by the outpouring of more and more goods which we need can we make our people strong. Only the strong can be free, and only the productive are strong.

"Not alone does it make it free and strong, it is the way to more jobs. It is the way to a higher national income which would enable us to pay our taxes and to meet our debts. That is the road to a powerful national defense.

"That is the road which America has always advanced toward a higher standard of living. For us this is no eleventh-hour conversion, this is no political expedency, this is a deep-rooted conviction.

"People of America, it is the time to turn our backs on the wasted years of stifled enterprise, neglected industry and chronic unemployment. People of America, time to put an Administration in office that is sympathetic with and understands the necessity of America again becoming the greatest productive nation in the world—an Administration that can bring unity between labor and industry and agriculture to make America strong and to keep America free. That is our goal. Elect the Republican ticket this fall and that goal will be achieved."

Charge by White House Pickets Called Lie by Acting WPA Head

Hunter Denies Assertion of Intimidation To Vote for Democrats, Calls Trip From New York 'a Political Trick'

Howard O. Hunter, Acting Work Projects Administration Commissioner, said yesterday New York City WPA workers who picketed the White House had told an "unqualified lie" in their complaint that the WPA sought to coerce their votes for the Democratic Party.

Hunter, drafting his statement while the picketers marched round and round on the sidewalk in front of the White House, declared that their visit here was "nothing but a political trick."

Some of the banners, illustrated with caricatures, said: "Mr. President, we demand the right of free elections;" "Restore Civil Rights on WPA," and "Our President Has Forgotten One Third of His Nation."

William Levner, who said he represented WPA Teachers Union 453 (A. F. of L.), the Workers Alliance and The United American Artists 60 (C. I. O.), led the picketers and signed formal statements addressed to President Roosevelt, Senator Guy M. Gillette, chairman, Senate Committee Investigating Campaign Expenditures, and Hunter.

300 Ousted, He Says

His statement for the President said: "We believe this scurrilous political trick is being carried out without your knowledge or consent . . ."

"Briefly, within the past few months, beginning in the month just prior to election day, the New York WPA under pretext of enforcing Section 15 (f) of the 1941 Emergency Appropriations Act has been calling its workers to headquarters, 70 Columbus Avenue (N. Y. C.) and putting them through a grilling about their political affiliations."

Levner declared that "each and every one of those here today can testify that he has been asked how he registered and was about to register, how he had voted in the past and how he was about to vote . . . In the end, each of us and over 300 more, have been suspended from WPA."

Hunter replied: "Political attacks are to be expected during the closing days of a heated campaign, but the sending of this delegation from New York City with its preposterous charges represented nothing but a political trick."

Levner said the delegation came here on the "nickels and dimes from our coworkers and other sympathetic American citizens."

"Unqualified Lie," Hunter Says

Hunter said: "We are thoroughly familiar with the investigation of Communists on WPA rolls in New York City, which is the cause of the complaints, and the questioning has been strictly in accord with the provisions of the Appropriation Act which forbids employment of Communists.

"Approximately 300 of the 100,000 WPA workers in New York City have been interviewed and those suspended, because of evidence that they are Communists, will be reinstated if they can disprove this."

"The charge that any attempt has been made by WPA officials to influence the votes of WPA workers in the coming election is an unqualified lie. Every WPA worker in the United States has been sent an individual notice, signed by me, to emphasize his complete freedom of choice as a voter."

WPA Offices Also Picketed

The WPA offices were picketed for an hour before the group moved to the White House sidewalk.

In New York, according to the Associated Press, Lieut. Col. Brehon Somervell, WPA administrator for the city, issued the following statement:

"The only groups of people questioned in my office were Communists, or Bundists. They were questioned according to section 15 F of the Relief Act.

"This is just a smoke screen to cover up Communistic or Bund activities. If anyone thinks that I am engaged in any political activity whatsoever, he is a fit candidate for a psychopathic ward in Bellevue or St. Elizabeths in Washington."

Johnson Cancels Talk On Dctor's Advice

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, on the advice of his physician, canceled tonight an engagement to speak in Philadelphia in behalf of the candidacy of Wendell L. Willkie.

Gurney Asks Wire-Tapping Prober's Ouster

Senator Accuses Maloney of Exceeding Authority as Counsel

By the Associated Press

Senator Gurney (Republican), of South Dakota, demanded yesterday the dismissal of William P. Maloney as chief counsel for a Senate subcommittee appointed to investigate wire tapping.

In a statement, Gurney said Maloney appeared to have far exceeded his authority in scheduling a hearing yesterday on the alleged tapping of telephone wires of Supreme Court justices when the TVA case was pending in 1938—a hearing at which no committeeman showed up.

The scheduled meeting did, however, produce some statements on politics.

Hyman I. Fischbach, New York attorney representing one of the prospective witnesses, handed reporters a statement in which the witness, Robert C. La Borde, of the investigators technical service, said an attempt was being made to "smear the Republican Party."

Maloney told reporters no politics was involved and that he supposed the "smear charges" were made because of the TVA case time angle.

"I think it is only fair," Maloney said, "to state that at this time there is no evidence of Wendell L. Willkie having any personal knowledge of any wire tapping."

Willkie's company, Commonwealth & Southern, had been active in the TVA controversy.

Democrat Tunney Out for Willkie

Oklahoma City, Nov. 1 (INS).—Gene Tunney, a life-long Democrat, announced himself for Wendell Willkie, Republican Presidential candidate.

The retired world's heavyweight boxing champion was in Oklahoma City as guest of the chamber of commerce and other civic organizations.

"I decidedly want to see Willkie elected and I'm confident he will be," Tunney declared at a chamber of commerce banquet. He also spoke at three high schools in the city. He commended the work of Representative Martin Dies, of Texas, and his committee investigating subversive activities in the United States.

President Blamed For Plane Lag

President took office, seven years of "neglect and abuse," of industrial aviation has taken its toll.

The President, he said, left vacant the War and Navy posts of Assistant Secretaries for Air, for economy reasons that look like "a cinder in the path of the moon."

He said Mr. Roosevelt next set back civil aviation by canceling arbitrarily domestic airmail contracts in a "disastrous political raid upon our aviation companies."

He said that before the contracts were restored "our aviation industry had been given a black eye by a smearing investigation by Senator Hugo Black, who was later elevated to the Supreme Court."

Then, adding to his prepared text, Willkie said that Black had been appointed a justice "for no reason understandable to anybody."

Martin Optimistic

After his radio speech, Willkie conferred aboard his train with Republican National Committee Chairman Martin and Sam Pryor, his Eastern campaign manager. They brought highly optimistic election reports.

Then Dr. Harold Barnard again went to work like a trainer on a race horse on Willkie's strained vocal chords, before urging the candidate to bed for his longest night's rest.

This secluded spot alongside the Passaic River, just ten minutes out of New York, was purposely selected to isolate Willkie from the long strain of public appearances. Tomorrow night Willkie makes his Madison Square Garden speech and his managers want him at his best.

Before taking this longest weekday breathing spell, Willkie shouted more confident predictions of victory to 8,000 gathered before the New Brunswick Courthouse and twice that number massed and cheering before the Elizabeth City Hall.

One of the more realistic Republican politicians aboard train now is listing 244 electoral votes as "certain" for Willkie, and another 78 "probable" out of which he says a winning combination will be drawn.

In this "certain" list he puts Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, North and South Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Vermont and Wisconsin. His pool of "probable" States includes Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Michigan, Missouri, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Wyoming.

Wagner Sees Big Roosevelt Victory

Fort Wayne, Ind., Nov. 1 (AP).—Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, declared tonight that President Roosevelt would "lead us to a victory so complete that never again will human rights be challenged in the land of the free."

Wagner, in a speech prepared for a Democratic rally, urged the re-election of the President and of Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, whom he called a "brilliant statesman and outstanding American."

The New York Senator asserted that Wendell Willkie had "reached a new high in political promises."

Wagner assailed Willkie's expressed views on labor and said that "for seven years he has really been fighting to destroy jobs—jobs in the Tennessee valley, jobs in the Pacific Northwest, jobs right here in Indiana."

Flynn Accused of Backing Drys To Keep Votes From Willkie

Had Barkeeps Circulate Petitions, Sen. Gillette Told; Insurance Policyholders Urged To Support G. O. P., Democrat Charges

By the Associated Press

Democrats and Republicans exchanged a volley of pre-election charges yesterday before the special Senate committee appointed to police this year's elections.

John Burke, New York County Republican, urged the committee to investigate his charges that Chairman Edward J. Flynn of the Democratic National Committee had used "bartenders, saloon-keepers and others" to circulate petitions for the Prohibition Party in New York in order to reduce the vote for Wendell Willkie and other Republicans.

Sol A. Rosenblatt, counsel for the Democratic National Committee, asked the committee to investigate what he described as an illegal attempt to scare 64,000,000 life insurance policyholders into voting against President Roosevelt.

Pledges Action

Chairman Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, who conducted the public hearings alone, assured all complainants that if they had any evidence of specific violations of Federal laws it would be turned over to Government prosecutors for immediate action.

Burke, president of the New York County Chapter of the National Republican Builders, Inc., appeared to explain financing and purposes of his organization before making his charges against Flynn.

He testified that Flynn backed the Prohibition Party in upstate New York because most of its supporters would vote for Willkie if there were no Prohibition ticket in the field. Burke also charged that the Democratic leader was behind the court action to remove Communist candidates from the New York ballot in order to render the Communists homeless so they will have to vote for Mr. Roosevelt."

Rosenblatt, Democratic counsel, denied Burke's charges. Flynn, in New York, commented:

"They have accused me of everything else. They might as well accuse me of this."

Herman A. Bayern, New York City insurance broker, complained of efforts he said were being made to get life insurance policyholders to vote for Willkie. He said this was "making a political football of the life insurance business."

Objects to Activities

Bayern objected to activities of the "Peoples Committee to Defend Life Insurance and Savings," of Philadelphia, and charged that officials and employes of a number of insurance companies had engaged in political activities for this committee in violation of Federal laws.

At the request of Rosenblatt, Chairman Gillette ordered G. Hoyle Wright, agency superintendent in New Jersey for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., to appear here Monday for questioning.

Rosenblatt said the Democratic National Committee had evidence that Wright had told a group of company salesmen, at a meeting at Newark, N. J., in mid-September, that they would not have jobs unless the Roosevelt Administration was defeated.

Specific denials of "political activity" were offered to the committee by Frances Oakey, controller of the New York Life Insurance Co., and D. J. Reidy, of the Guardian Life Insurance Co. Gillette said he had letters from a number of other insurance companies denying political activities.

District Heroine Awarded Medal

hundred feet, she gave herself up for lost but kept on swimming for an hour and for more than a mile," the resume of award said.

Her strength failing, she reached water 5 feet deep and floundering awkwardly, from time to time she touched bottom and sprang forward, it was related. "She was weak, dizzy and nauseated. A man swam to her from shore and she told him of the others and then fainted."

While Mrs. Mason was taken to shore where she recovered, men went out in boats and effected rescue of her almost-exhausted companions.

Warner and Andrews were credited with saving Thomas F. Murphy, 44, and four others when their cruiser caught fire a mile from shore. Aboard was a tank with 100 gallons of gasoline and wind kicked up 8-foot waves.

Andrews and Warner took a tender from a yacht 2,700 feet to the distressed cruiser, although warned to beware of an explosion. Murphy and two other men were rescued. Andrews then drove the tender off from the cruiser, risking entanglement with a fish net. When the tender was 15 feet away, the cruiser's tank exploded.

The tender was undamaged. Andrews stopped it and pulled another man aboard. The remaining man, who had drifted some distance off, was then rescued.

Outfaces Five Lions

A bronze medal went to Joseph R. Arcaris, 31, of Benson's Animal Farm, Nashua, N. H., for entering an animals' enclosure at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., last Feb. 9 when five enraged and untrained lions knocked down and bit Chester Czaja, 24, the caretaker. Arcaris, who never had worked with lions fought off the beasts with a six foot stick.

The lone silver medal and death benefits of $45 a month were awarded to the widow of R. Ted Woodruff, 40, who died in a futile effort to rescue two-year-old Patrick J. Whalen from an oncoming passenger train at Peoria Heights, Ill., last May 22, the United Press reported.

Other bronze medals given for rescues from drowning were awarded to Ford D. Little, 36, and his son, Robert C. Little, 13, Greensboro, N. C.; Guy E. Andrews, 32, Baltimore, Md.; Thomas Wilson, 22, McNamee, New Brunswick, Canada; Patricia Lucille Shields, 9, Buffalo, N. Y.; Dorothy Jean Bailey, 15, De Pere, Wis.; Russell L. Klein, 17, East Brady, Pa.; V. Nadine Sivils, 16, Appleton City, Mo.; Mrs. Marjorie E. Obita, 27, Oakland, Calif.; Miss Irene Jones, 46, Fitzgerald, Ga.; William H. Sissel, 69, Wichita Falls, Tex.; Walter James Nivens, 21, West Charlotte, N. C., and Norman J. Massalleno, 26, colored, Panama City, Fla.

Heroic acts also won bronze medals for Ralph Allen Kelley, 17, Nashua, N. H.; Ralph C. Wernett, 17, Albrightsville, Pa.; Kenneth Delbert Schumacher, 28, La Crosse, Wis.; Orra E. Robison, 38, Mansfield, Ohio, and Joseph A. Roberson, 40, Minsus, Tex.

the plans of the Vickers sight, now doing heavy duty on Royal Air Force planes.

British officials admit privately that the Vickers sight is not so accurate as the Sperry sight, which they would very much like to obtain from the United States Government.

Army and Navy officials, however, insist that the Sperry secret sight has never been released to any one other than constituted American authorities.

This famous device was first developed by the Navy in 1925 and was later made available for Army use.

The War Department declined last night to confirm or deny the reported swap of our bomb sight for the British turret.

The power-driven turret, a recent innovation on British fighters and interceptor planes, reportedly has a 360-degree traverse, permitting quick fire in any direction. Power comes from the plane engines.

The highly mobile turret is credited with inflicting severe damage on German aircraft during recent engagements over the British Isles.

More Plane Plants May Be Asked for Britain, the President added, the Defense Commission will have to arrange through private capital, or otherwise, for the construction of new plants.

Commenting on reports that automobile plants would undertake the production of aircraft parts, which would be assembled in the factories of aviation companies, Mr. Roosevelt said the Defense Commission has been studying such a plan and that it may be carried out.

Officials disclosed that 920 planes were produced in American factories last month for the Army and Navy and for the British. By April, 1942, Defense Commissioner Knudsen declares, the Army and Navy will be equipped with 35,000 first-line planes, orders for most of which have been placed in recent months. The President said earlier in the week that if the British request for 12,000 more planes is met, they will have 26,000 on order here.

Willkie's Brother To Fly to Cast Vote

Chicago, Nov. 1 (INS).—Edward E. Willkie will fly 1,496 miles next Tuesday so he can vote for his brother, Wendell L. Willkie. The brother of the Republican Presidential nominee will fly from New York to Chicago to cast his vote, and return by plane in the early evening to hear election returns.

Draft Is Purely Civilian Job, Gullion Says

Talks at Catholic U. Law School Forum On Military Code

Drafting men for selective military service is civilian business with which the Army is little concerned until selectees are inducted into the armed forces by military medical officers, Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, judge advocate general of the Army, declared last night.

"The administration of the Selective Service Act," he emphasized, "is a civilian function. We have nothing to do with the men until they are accepted for service by our own medical men."

Speaks at Symposium

Gen. Gullion spoke briefly during a symposium on military law at Catholic University Law School. Assistant Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson presided at the session which terminated a series of military law lectures by Lieut. Col. F. Granville Munson, of the Army Judge Advocate General's Department.

Attending the forum as a guest was Rear Admiral W. B. Woodson, Judge Advocate General of the Navy. Panel members were Albert Warner, radio news commentator; Robert Kintner, columnist and author; Capt. Thomas L. Gatch, of the Navy Advocate General's Office, and Col. Munson. The session was held under auspices of the Rev. Dr. Robert J. White, dean of Catholic University Law School.

Won't Destroy Initiative

During questioning on the possible effect of military service on American men, Col. Munson declared he was convinced "Army or Navy training will not beat initiative out of our young men."

"On the contrary," he asserted, "it gives sparkle and assurance to men from civilian life."

Col. Munson also pointed out that the National Guard, after completing its duty in the Federal service, will resume its status as troops of the District of Columbia as it was when men were discharged from the Army after the World War.

answer centers was not acted on by the Commissioners yesterday. Neither did the Commissioners approve the all-important Board of Appeals which has been named by the President, but must be announced at the District Building. The Fire Department already has sanctioned use of the various stations as advisory headquarters for men stumped by the questionnaires.

On the national front, first of the official master lists of numbers drawn in Tuesday's lottery reached registration boards throughout the country yesterday. All boards were instructed to send out questionnaires immediately and speed machinery which will put 800,000 young men in training camps by next June.

It was predicted at national selective service headquarters here that another lottery will be held in 1941 and by the end of the year 69 per cent of all American youths now 20 years old will be called for military service.

On the other hand, it was estimated that only about 5 per cent of the 17,000,000 men who registered will be called to training camps by June.

Cabinet Votes Confidence in Petain, Laval

Approval Follows Vice Premier's Return From Occupied Zone

By Lansing Warren.

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, France, Nov. 1.—Vice Premier Laval, returning from Paris tonight, reported to the ministers of the council of the state of the negotiations with the occupying authorities.

Unanimously, the cabinet approved the attitude taken by Marshal Henri-Philippe Petain, and expressed confidence in the chief of state and the vice president of the council.

Laval in Paris was accompanied by Minister of Finance Marcel Bouthillier, as well as Minister of War Gen. Charles Huntziger. Bouthillier, following Laval's expose here tonight, gave technical information. The two ministers were questioned at considerable length by their colleagues before the expression of confidence was taken.

Laval did not make the broadcast that was expected after the cabinet meeting and would add nothing to what he declared in a statement to the French press in Paris and published in full by newspapers here today.

In that he stressed that while the military operations continued it would be difficult to come to any definite conclusion on the various problems of European cooperation. But he indicated that the negotiations had reached the point where solutions of some of the questions outstanding between France and Germany could soon be treated.

Marshal Petain agreed in principle on Franco-German collaboration, but there is nothing to indicate that any definite agreement has been reached with regard to peace terms or what exact forms that cooperation will take. Laval's recent talks here were with both military and civil authorities, and these were turned chiefly upon economic and colonial matters. Gen. Huntziger's presence shows that the French position under the armistice was also considered.

What may be said without mistake is that the marshal's prestige in the unoccupied zone at least has suffered no diminution from what has been learned here on the dealings with the Reich.

Utility Claim Agent Found Dead in Room

Newport News, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—John Edward Tabb, 65, claim agent for the Virginia Public Service Co. for a number of years, was found dead in his room late yesterday afternoon. Dr. G. Colbert Tyler, city health commissioner, attributed death to a heart attack.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Sunday from the First Baptist Church.

Contract Bridge

The Long Island Bridge League members play good bridge, as is indicated by today's hand on which telling of the league's events.

"Here is a hand I saved from last year's individual," he begins. "In one of the later rounds, genial Al Weiss and myself were paired for four boards. Both of us were voicing the common complaint in a singles event. 'Oh, what a tossing around I've been getting.' So we went to town for a top on this board, the first we played. I don't recommend the bidding, and I'll admit I had luck in the opening leads and the break in the trump and club suits. But we were in six, the gods of chance smiled on us and that was that . . .

After over confident West laid down his heart king and his ace which I ruffed low, it was curtains. The play was a simple dummy-reversal, with a prayer on my part. I laid down the club ace, then overtook the jack with the queen in dummy. I ruffed another heart, then ruffed a low diamond in dummy. Now the last heart was ruffed in the closed hand, and my last trump, the king, was led and overtaken by dummy's ace. Hereupon the spade ten and nine picked up the outstanding trumps, the club king dropped both my opponent's last clubs and the clubs left in dummy were high. Such are the adventures of the overbidder in a jam of his own making. But it's fun."

Mr. Holton made six spades, doubled, losing one diamond trick.

Russia Deports 100,000, Poles Say

Copyright by New York Times

Deportation of Poles by the Soviet Union seems to have centered about Lwow and Wilno, the Polish Embassy announced here yesterday after further study of fragmentary reports it has received from the Russian-occupied portion of Poland. It estimated that 100,000 of the 300,000 inhabitants of Lwow already have been deported.

Some of the deportees, who include Poles, Jews, Ukranians, white Ruthenians and Lithuanians, are still in European Russia, around Archangelsko and in the Volga regions abandoned by German colonists, according to the information available. Others were sent to the Steppes of Kazakstan, between Troick, Czelabinsk and Petropawlowsko, the embassy statement added, where the deportees work in lumber camps.

The deportations began soon after the Soviet occupation early in the year, according to the embassy, and were limited at first to army officers, police and administrative officials, and the judiciary. The embassy alleged that that these men were sent away for political reasons although the Soviet officials said they were needed to work.

Wild Barrage Balloons Foul Nazi Power Lines

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—The German radio broadcast tonight a report that "serious damage has been done to power lines and telephone wires by British barrage balloons as far as western Jutland."

The broadcast, picked up here by N. B. C., added the damage was caused by heavy chains which the balloons were said to be dragging.

(British barrage balloons frequently have broken away from their moorings and floated over the continent as far as Sweden.)

The Stockholm radio reported later tonight that several such balloons had drifted not only over Jutland and Denmark, but over Sweden and Iceland.

Nazis Doom Norse Who Help British

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 1 (AP).—Norwegians fighting for the British or communicating with King Haakon's exiled regime will be liable to the death penalty under a new decree announced in German-occupied Norway, reports from Oslo said tonight.

This appeared to be confirmation of rumors that British espionage was operating in Norway and that small boats secretly have been putting into isolated coves to provide direct contact between Norwegians and England.

U. S. Skidding Toward War, Gayda Says

Duce's Editor Attacks Roosevelt and Calls Hull a Warmonger

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 1.—President Roosevelt was accused today by Virginio Gayda, the highly placed Fascist editor, of initiating an offensive against Germany and Italy and of responsibility for creating, along with his supporters, an "ideological political conflict which is skidding toward belligerency between the United States and the Axis."

He declared again, however, that Italy is not interested in the outcome of the Presidential election in the United States.

Writing in Giornale D'Italia, Gayda—who frequently speaks official opinion—offered what he termed an answer to the speech of last Saturday night by Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State.

"These Bellicose Americans"

That speech, said Gayda, "pretended again to change the elementary truth of the facts, inventing an Axis menace against America." He went on to ask "these bellicose Americans" to furnish one single, concrete, documented proof" of such a menace.

(Secretary Hull described the rulers of Germany, Italy and Japan as "would-be conquerors" attempting to reduce mankind to "a master-and-slave relationship among nations and individuals, maintained by brute force.")

Mr. Roosevelt, Gayda asserted, had concerned himself with the internal affairs of Germany and Italy and had made "public defamations of their political systems."

The editor cited speeches and actions of Mr. Roosevelt, Hull, Ambassador to France William C. Bullitt, Secretary Morgenthau, certain Senators, William Allen White, the Emporia, Kans., editor, and others.

He referred to the President's Chicago ("quarantine") speech of 1937 and went on down to the incident of the recent British-supported attack on Dakar, West Africa, by "free French" forces which have remained Britain's allies.

Hold U. S. Inspired

As to Dakar, Gayda said, a Spanish diplomat inquiring at a "foreign office" (presumably London) was told that the expedition was made on American suggestion.

Gayda mentioned these as actions which he said were particularly unneutral.

The alleged routing of Atlantic clippers via Bermuda (where there is a British censorship), "to keep the Italians and Germans from using this means of communication."

The alleged application particularly to Germans and Italians of alien surveillance in the United States.

An alleged refusal to furnish an Italian airline in South America with gasoline.

Export bans on various mineral products.

The trade of 50 destroyers—which Gayda said were good vessels—for British bases in the western Atlantic.

Coordination of American and English airplane manufacture to help Britain.

Gayda asserted that American pilots were fighting in England now as an "Eagle Squadron."

Gayda's attack on the Roosevelt Administration filled six columns of his paper. Developments in the United States' "war policy," he said, would fail to prevent a victory for the Axis powers in the war.

Mr. Roosevelt not only had "slandered" the totalitarian regimes, the editor asserted, but had shown "a war attitude which is approaching ever nearer to intervention."

The Corriere Padano, newspaper of the late Marshal Italo Balbo, accused Mr. Roosevelt of "despotism."

British Unbowed By Raids, Gallup Survey Finds

Special Dispatch to The Post

Princeton, Nov. 1.—New evidence that the British people are far from unnerved by the persistent Nazi bombing is revealed in a survey conducted by the British Institute of Public Opinion, affiliate of the American Institute.

An overwhelming majority in the survey hold the opinion that it will not be possible for Germany to win the war by air attack alone.

The question put to a cross-section of British voters was:

"From what you have experienced or read or heard about during the past few weeks do you think it is possible or impossible for Germany to win the war by air attack alone on this country?"

Possible	6%
Impossible	80%
Don't know	14%

The British Institute has continued to carry out its function of measuring British opinion even in the face of the air blitzkrieg. It has moved its headquarters from London to Bristol and is conducting surveys from there.

Hadassah Hears Plea to Help Save Democracy

Cincinnati, Nov. 1 (AP).—Dr. Jacob J. Weinstein, Chicago rabbi, today called upon Jews to "help preserve the democratic way of life."

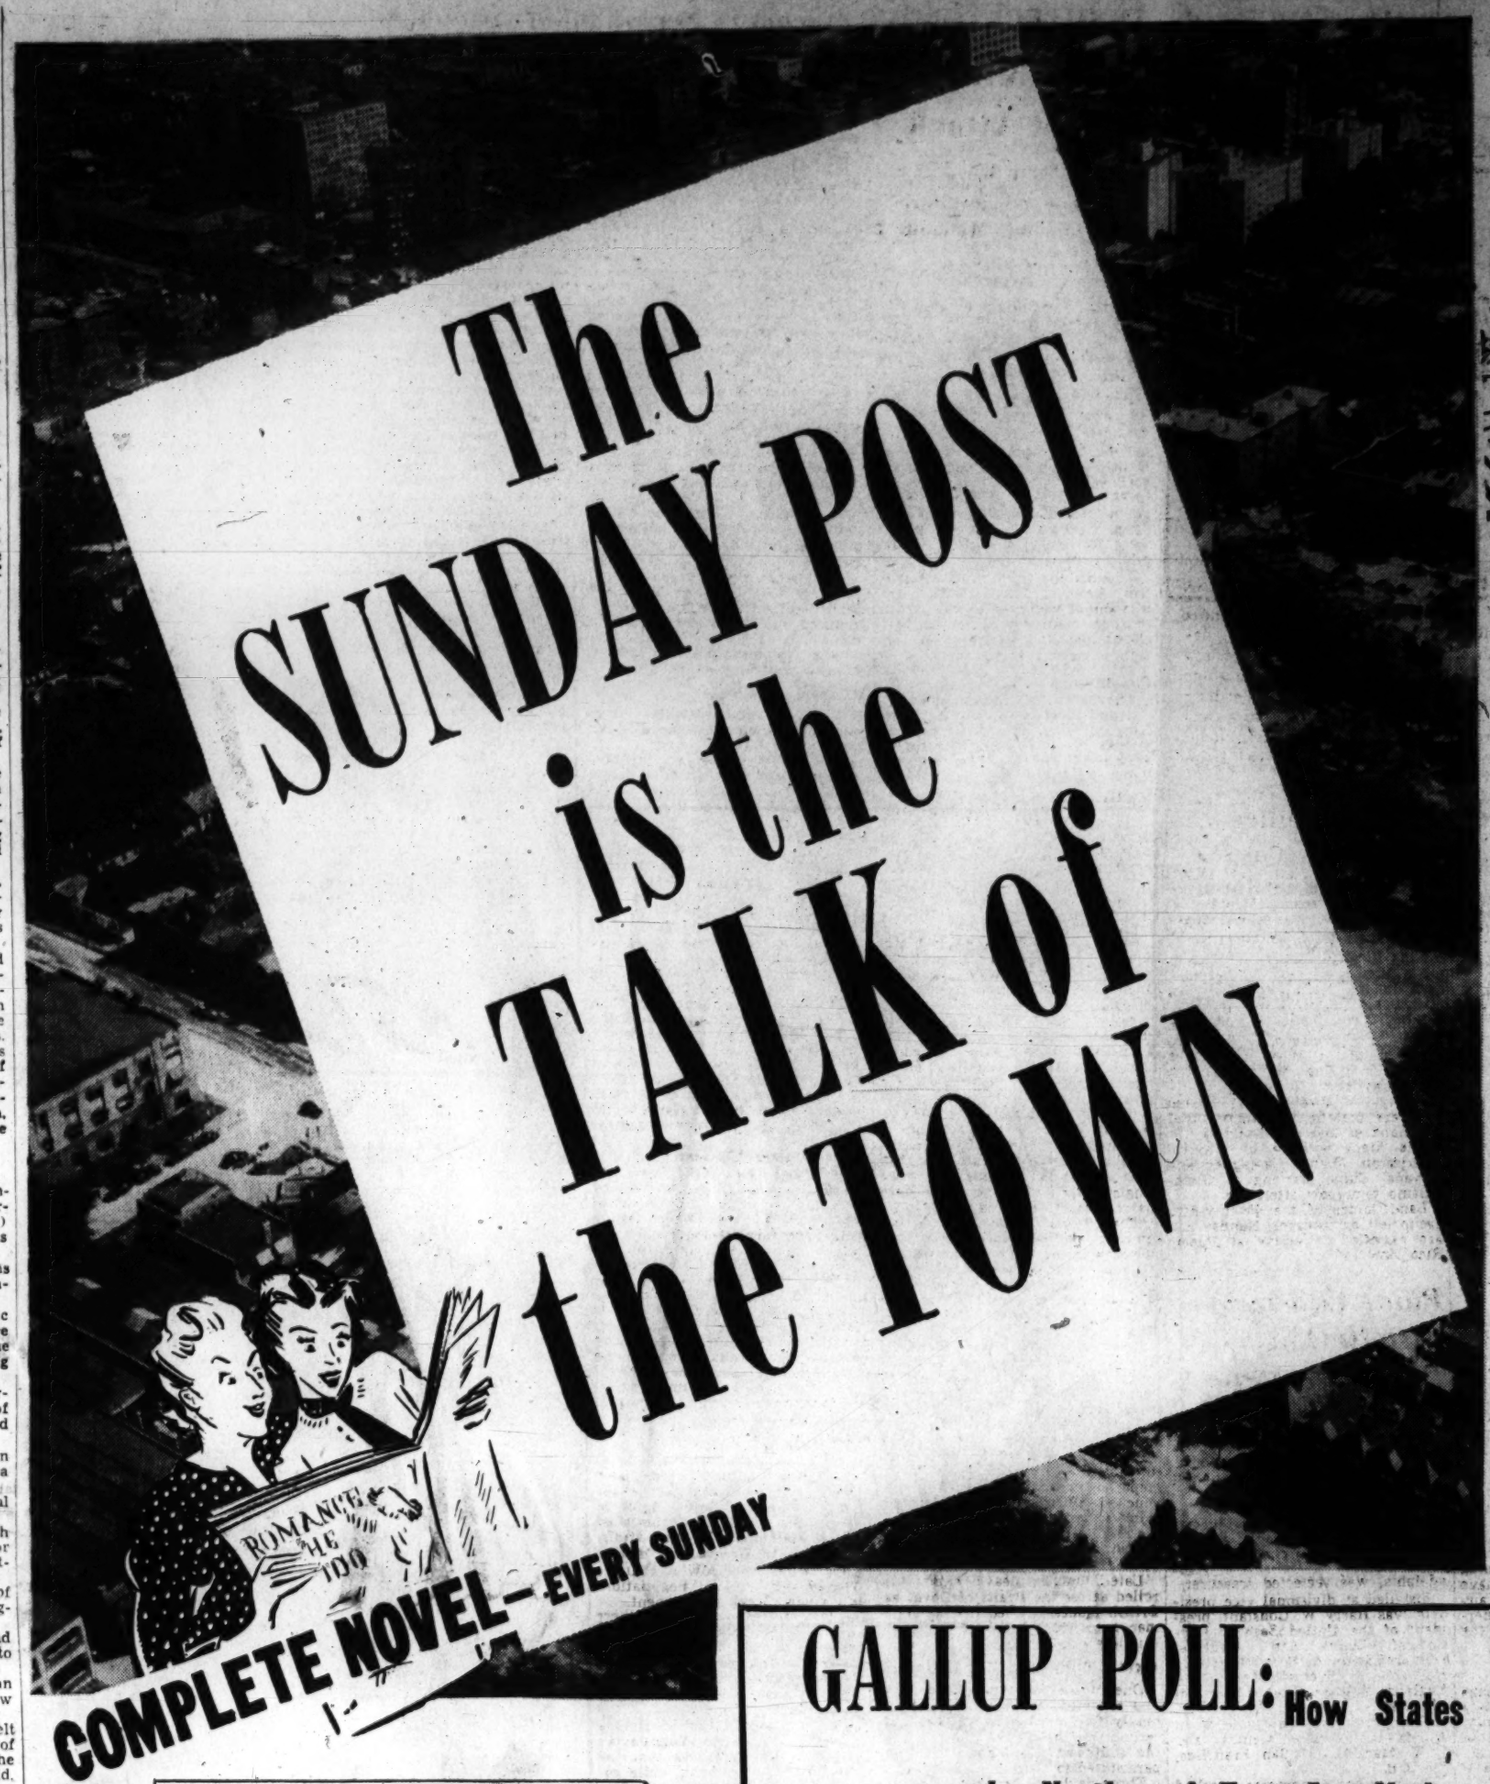

Speaking before the twenty-sixth annual convention of Hadassah, women's Zionist organization, Dr. Weinstein declared:

"If we are interested in justice for the Jews, we must also be interested in universal justice which shall be meted out to all men, wherever their rights are threatened."

The convention received from Nevile Butler, British Charge d'Affaires at Washington, a message expressing the empire's "gratitude" for the organization's public health activities "without regard to race or creed."

THE RIDDLE OF MARTINIQUE

French-owned Martinique is the gap in our new defense chain formed by the bases leased from Britain. To this key island went The Post's Eddie Folliard; returned with the answers to the riddle of Martinique: How do its people feel toward Vichy? Toward Britain? Toward the United States? What about those one-time American planes? What about the $200,000,000 in French gold? Folliard's story Sunday will be the first to come out of Martinique in months.

Another unique story: from secret exile, Hitler-foe Otto Strasser writes of Hitler's scheme for the final partition of France. On Sunday's opposite-editorial page.

A SEPARATE AIR FORCE?

An air fleet of 50,000 planes calls for a re-examination of aviation's relation to the other armed forces. Norris reviews the problem and the possibilities, on the Army-Navy page.

13 Convoyed Ships Sunk, Nazis Say

8 Aerial Bombs Cripple Destroyer, Germans Disclose

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 1.—German dive-bombers screaming down on three British convoys off the very shores of Britain today sank 13 ships—including one cruiser—totaling 47,000 tons and badly damaged 9 others aggregating 36,000 tons, DNB, official news agency, said tonight.

The agency said the attacks occurred as the convoys approached southeast coast harbors. One, it said, was in the mouth of the Thames River.

Near Great Mouth, DNB declared, a single Heinkel bomber sank a protecting cruiser and three freighters out of a convoy accompanied by 20 cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

Warship Struck

It said parts of the destroyer were blown into the air by the bomb blasts and the warship was left wallowing with its decks awash.

Two other vessels in this convoy were struck and the rest scattered, the report said, despite a guard of 20 destroyers and a number of submarines.

Although hit at least 20 times by British defense fire, DNB declared, the German planes were able to continue the attack.

Eight British planes were shot down in fighting over England today the agency said, and only one German plane was lost.

In addition, it continued, many grounded British planes were destroyed in German attacks on British airports. Three grounded planes were said to have been destroyed and a fuel tank set afire at Norwich Catton.

Two Shot Down Off Norway

At another central England airport, which was not named, a hangar was destroyed and other facilities damaged, DNB said, and Nazi bombers also successfully raided towns on England's east and south coasts.

The German high command reported that two British planes were shot down yesterday off Norway's coast.

Its communique also claimed successful bombing of important armament works near Birmingham and Bristol yesterday and an attack on a munitions depot west of London in which, it said, several buildings were blown up.

'Mystery Fleet' Moves East Off San Juan

UNDER SEALED ORDERS—A group of United States destroyers was sighted north of San Juan, Puerto Rico, yesterday, steaming eastward into the Atlantic. Eight such ships have left Key West in the past three days under sealed orders. The Miami Herald said it had learned unofficially that a concentration of U. S. seapower was under way near St. Lucia. government's collaboration with Germany and Italy was considered an impairment of French sovereignty over parts of the colonial empire.

2. That the neutrality patrol was taking increased precautions against possible Axis sea raiding operations in southern waters, either in the South Atlantic or the Caribbean approach to the Panama Canal.

May Involve New Bases

A third possible reason given was that the naval vessels might be engaged in work connected with the establishment of bases on sites recently acquired from the British. It was believed, however, that this would call for less secrecy than has been observed in connection with the present naval movements.

French assurances that the negotiations with the Axis powers had not involved use of strategic bases or otherwise impaired France's sovereignty over its colonial empire appeared to have been received with some reserve here pending a more complete explanation of the Vichy government's collaboration with Germany and Italy.

Apart from the French possessions in this hemisphere, officials were interested in Dakar, in French West Africa—the nearest African point to South America.

The sudden departure of the German freighter Helgoland from Barranquilla, Colombia, three days ago without clearance papers also aroused interest among officials here. The ship, which had been anchored there since the beginning of the war, was reported to have had aboard several German airplane pilots of the German commercial airline in South America, the Scadta.

100 Planes at Martinique

The Colombian port in the Caribbean is about 1,000 miles from Martinique, where some 100 American-made planes were taken by the French aircraft carrier Bearn immediately after the Franco-German armistice.

The planes, however, have been on a field, exposed to the weather since last July and doubts have been expressed here that they could be flown without reconditioning.

French authorities here said their reports from Martinique indicated all was quiet there, and private advices said no German ships had arrived there.

The naval movements to the south began three days ago with the sudden departure of five destroyers and a seaplane tender from Key West, and since then three other destroyers and 11 seaplanes left there on a secret mission. Three of the seaplanes returned yesterday.

It was believed likely here that the warships observed off San Juan today were those which left Key West.

Twelve hundred Air Corps officers and men arrived at San Juan yesterdan on the transport Hunter Liggett and officials there acknowledged also the arrival of a squadron of naval patrol planes.

Langley Field, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Eighteen bombing and two A-17 attack planes, comprising the air echelon of the Twenty-fifth Bombardment Group (heavy), took off at 8:03 a. m., today on the first leg of a flight to Boringuen Field, Puerto Rico, the Air Corps' new Caribbean base.

Thirty-two officers and 44 enlisted men are making the flight under command of Maj. W. B. Souza.

The flight will be by way of Charleston, Miami, Camaguey and Havana, Cuba, arriving at Guantanamo tomorrow afternoon.

Land forces of the Twenty-fifth group left by transport Sunday and are expected to arrive at Puerto Rico tomorrow.

Carl J. Schumann, president of the Hilo Varnish Corporation of Brooklyn, N. Y., was installed as vice president of the National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association at its closing convention session yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Ernest T. Trigg, of Washington, president of the national association, is now serving a three-year term. Samuel R. Matlack, of Philadelphia, was reelected treasurer.

Installed as divisional vice president was Harry W. Constant, president of the United Sash & Door Co., of Wichita, Kans. Regional vice presidents installed were Harry Hall, jr., of Everett, Mass., New England; William H. Jarden, jr., of Philadelphia, Eastern; A. P. Mills, of Memphis, Tenn., Southern; W. A. Alpers, of Cleveland, Central, and H. S. Margetts, of San Francisco, Western.

Six new board members installed included Horace S. Felton, of Philadelphia; W. H. Gerke, Indianapolis; Norman W. Kelley, Roanoke, Va.; J. G. Penniman, Boston; Fletcher W. Rockwell, New York, and Frank L. Sulzberger, of Chicago.

British Archies Bag 5 Raiders In Hot Attack

Make Best Score As Foe Strikes Hard At London, Midlands

By The Associated Press

London (Saturday), Nov. 2.—Sharpshooting British ground batteries blasted five German raiders out of the dark skies over England last night and early today in one of their best night's shooting performances of the 56-day-old Nazi air siege, the air ministry announced.

Their performance, during an eight-hour raid which ended in the early morning hours today, brought to 13 the number of German craft announced officially as downed since dawn Friday. Six British planes were lost but two of the British pilots were saved.

Whether the antiaircraft batteries had been provided with new weapons or whether they are getting sharper shooting eyes was not disclosed, and the absence of any unusual circumstances about the night's raids led to speculation in this direction.

The Germans punched at the capital and other parts of the United Kingdom with one of the heaviest attacks in a week and the night's antiaircraft barrage was especially lively.

Midland Towns Strafed

In one Midland town a number of persons were trapped in a factory basement shelter; in another several persons were buried in cellars when four houses were demolished, and a bus was hit; and in a third 150 fire bombs came whistling down in rapid succession.

Flare-scattering German raiders took to the stratosphere earlier in the night to launch their attacks on London and widely scattered areas of England.

Antiaircraft batteries picked off the flares almost as quickly as they appeared and the raiders, unseen in the blackness, showed no inclination to get close enough to the ground to pick out targets.

During the initial phase of the stab at London, reports came of scattered raiders over East Anglia, Northeast Scotland, Southwest England. These for the most part were single plane forays and there were no reports of heavy damage.

The fifty-sixth night of raids, beginning earlier than usual, followed a series of daylight raids on London, Merseyside and other points in England and Scotland and a brisk duel between German and British long-range guns across the English Channel.

The air ministry said the day's air attacks cost the Germans nine planes against six British fighters downed. Two of the British pilots were saved.

For two hours German batteries near Gap Gris Nez poured shells at a British convoy steaming through the Channel, but the convoy kept on its course apparently untouched. Britain's big guns replied with a heavy barrage against the Germans who laid down a smoke-screen along part of the French coast.

Later tonight, heavy explosions rolled across the straits of Dover as British planes bombed the big German guns which had been firing on shipping.

Fight 5 Miles Up

One of the day's bag of raiders was reported shot down in a battle nearly five miles above Dover. A second was shot out of the sky over the southeast coast and the pilot parachuted to earth.

Three daylight alarms sounded in London, two before noon when a few German craft reached the suburbs. In the afternoon a score of raiders, part of a flight of more than 50 which flew in over the southeast coast, were engaged high over the city by British fighters.

Germany Seeking New Soviet Accord

Russia for an understanding on the Balkans and Near East.

Von Papen left Bucharest yesterday, en route to Berlin and it was reported that his return is in connection with the proposed understanding.

Germany was represented as anxious to eliminate any possibility of conflict with Russia over both the Dardanelles, which Turkey guards, or over oil-rich Iran and other areas where the interests of the two great powers may overlap.

The Germans are willing to make some concessions, it was reported, but it was considered problematical whether an agreement satisfactory to both parties could be effected.

Nazis here said an understanding of this character between Germany and Russia would force Turkey and Bulgaria on the same bandwagon and might smother or at least localize the Italian-Greek war.

Until such an accord is reached, certain German-Russian questions will remain in a state of suspension, it was indicated. These include the matter of which group of powers will control the mouth of the Danube.

After nearly a week of conferences here, German, Russian, Italian and Rumanian specialists have not announced any definite settlement of this issue.

Later in the night the official Turkish radio announced:

Relations are Unique

"Turkish-Russian relations in this confused period are unique. Our country, despite all other occurrences, will continue its relations" with Russia.

The radio, summarizing Inonu's speech, said it showed that "Turkey is nonbelligerent," and then added this comment:

"Greece may leave the defense and begin a march for the Albanian frontier. . . Slowness of the Italian advance indicated Italy was ill-prepared."

From London the New York Times reported that, while the British had expected Inonu's speech to be firm, they were visibly pleased at the turn it took, especially in the reaffirmation of friendship between Turkey and Russia coupled with the praise for Turkey's "ally"—Britain.

The speech was "warmly welcomed," according to an official statement which said that Gen. Inonu's "stirring words" gave "fresh confidence that Britain's ally would stand firm against German aggression."

The Yugoslav declaration of neutrality, the New York Times reported from Belgrade, was issued following a series of ministerial conferences and was linked, despite its guarded phraseology and mild tone, with the speech of Inonu.

Diplomatic circles in Belgrade, the New York Times stated, view the Turkish and Yugoslav announcements as being timed to counteract the Axis campaign to force a quick Greek capitulation before actual events have disclosed Turkey's position and the extent of the aerial, naval and military assistance which Britain is giving to Greece.

Italians Spread Rumors

While semiofficial German sources at Belgrade admitted the probable failure of peace attempts and the likelihood of a finish fight in Greece, Italian sources continued to circulate rumors of internal dissatisfaction in Greece and to hint at a possible overthrow of Premier Metaxas and peace negotiations with a new Greek government.

Greek sources denied that there is the remotest possibility of a government change under the circumstances, and responsible foreign observers here could discern nothing save wishful thinking to support the Italian official viewpoint.

The immediate reaction among diplomatic circles to Yugoslavia's neutrality statement was that the Cvetkovitch government, while coordinating its statement with Turkey, is not prepared to coordinate its policy with anybody until the whole uncertain Balkan picture is more clarified.

Bulgaria's position is considered the foremost puzzle at this point, and the likelihood Sofia would permit passage of German troops, should Germany seek a quick military decision alongside her Axis partner in Greece, is not discounted for a moment in these circles.

No Explanation Offered

No explanation was forthcoming from Sofia concerning the report from there that troop reinforcements were being rushed to her frontier facing Turkey. The United Press reported, however, that diplomatic quarters feared a sharp rise in Balkan tension as a result of the Turkish government's new announcement of nonbelligerency.

Inonu's speech was said in Bulgarian quarters to have been based on a Turkish hope that Germany's reluctance to participate in a Balkan war will cause the Nazis to wait until the last minute to aid the Italian invasion, whereas any Turkish aid might bring the Germans into the Balkan war immediately, and a possibility that Turkey has reached some sort of a secret understanding with Russia regarding not only the war in the Balkans but the entire European conflict.

Ismet Inonu, heir to Kemal Ataturk as the leader of reborn Turkey, made his statement concerning Turkey's position to the National Assembly.

But, he insisted, Turkey will fight instantly if attacked, and "we remain loyal to our friendships; our obligations and ties of collaboration are unshakeable."

His stress on the "friendly turn" of Turkey's relations with the Soviet Union, following "a critical period," gave foreign observers the idea that this was the key to Turkey's decision, the Associated Press reported from Ankara.

Thus Turkey, they believed, will wait for Russia's signal before entering the Balkan war which has been started by Italy's incursion into Greece, unless she first is attacked or considers herself menaced by such a development as the entrance of Bulgaria into hostilities on the side of the Axis.

Greek Line Pierced, Italians Report

Claim Strategic Ioannina Sector Has Been Overrun

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 1.—Italian armored motorized units were officially declared tonight to have made apparent breaches in Greece's Metaxas line at some points, pushing forward over rugged terrain soggy with three or four inches of mud.

For other and larger Fascist forces was claimed the capture of a populous area extending 35 miles within the invaded country in the region of Ioannina, (Janina) the strategically important Greek city which is the main immediate objective of the Italian campaign.

This area, said the official Italian News Agency Stefani, has 35,000 inhabitants and contains 79 villages. Its precise geographic limits were not given.

Road Junction Reached

The authoritative assertion that advance groups of Italian armored cars were now operating behind the Metaxas line—an irregular series of pill boxes and other fortifications roughly following the contours of the Greek Albanian frontier—was based upon a report to the Italian high command that the Greek highway junction of Kalibaki had been reached.

Officials here, unable to locate a town of such spelling, suggested instead that Kalikabi was meant—a town above Zitsa on the road northwest of Ioannina. Zitsa itself lies scarcely more than 10 miles from Ioannina.

While this picture of the Greek campaign was being drawn, military dispatches from the African battlefront indicated that the Italian armies were advancing in Egypt, and correspondents were told that this might be interpreted "unofficially" as a resumption of an Italian offensive which for weeks had been at a standstill there.

Specifically, the high command reported that some 100 miles inside Egypt's western desert Fascist motorized columns operating with planes had struck heavily at British forces and put them to flight, presumably operating from Greek bases bombed Napies and two important outlying steel mill and manufacturing areas—Bagnoli and Pomigliano d'Arco. One Neapolitan was reported killed and five injured. It was the first assault yet made on southern Italy's industrial areas. Both explosive and incendiary bombs fell.

Italy itself felt British bombs during the early morning. Planes

On the political front the Italians indicated they still were counting on Turkey to remain neutral since Bulgaria—which is under Axis influence—is apparently remaining quiet.

The newspaper La Stampa of Turin said the Turks had been "greatly compromised" by newspapers and diplomats "working in favor of England and Greece;" but that the country was nevertheless "substantially neutral" and showed no signs of being ready to make "desperate, irremediable gestures."

BRITONS OPPOSE FASCIST FIGHTERS—In the Battle of Greece yesterday, British planes were reported to have bombed Tirana (1), as Italian troops at the east end of the front (2), opened a major drive toward Salonika. back from its objective of the fortified Greek town and base of Janina, 35 miles below the Albanian border.

To the northeast, on the rugged Florina front, where the Italians are struggling to open a path to Salonika, 140 miles away, the Greek defenders were said in a radio broadcast to have achieved an important victory.

They not only "refused to yield an inch of ground but threw back the Italians Friday and "won an important hill position."

Greek planes bombed an Italian column marching into the lines on the Florina front, "killing many, damaging equipment and confusing the advance," it was stated over the radio.

List 92 Raid Victims

The ministry of public security issued a communique early today listing 92 dead and 149 wounded in 24 separate Italian air attacks throughout Greece Friday.

Rescue workers still were digging frantically in ruins, particularly at Salonika, and it was feared the toll would be considerably higher.

At Salonika more than 50 dead and 100 wounded were listed in official accounts last night.

The ministry of public security, asserting angrily that the Italians unloaded their bombs "solely on civilian objectives," listed the 24 bombed places as:

Salonika, attacked six times; the port and airdrome of Athens, raided twice; Kastoria, on the northern Macedonian front, bombed twice; Candia, on the Island of Crete; Corinth; Janina, on the northern front; Metsoeven, in the Pindar Mountains; Megara, near Athens, attacked twice; Thebes; Rethinnon, and Larissa in central Greece.

Jewish Section Strafed

On the Island of Corfu, it was stated officially, bombs smashed upon the Jewish section of the town of Corfu, two clinics and an Italian school with a total of 10 dead and 27 wounded.

At Kastoria, in the path of the Italian advance toward Salonika, bombs fell mostly into a lake while Crete escaped any severe damage, most of the bombs falling into the sea.

"The Italians dropped leaflets in the Greek language declaring that Italy is not an enemy of Greece but loves and respects the Greek people and desires to march in only to protect them against the English," the government communique said.

"These leaflets promised that Italy would respect the customs, traditions and religion of the Greek people if they would submit."

The important hill which the Greeks claimed to have captured on the Florina front to check Italy's push eastward toward Salonika was described as Mount Pissoderi, a ragged summit.

Greece's fierce mountain fighters were said to have stormed and taken the summit in a wild battle of bayonets and hand grenades.

Mount Pissoderi dominates the main road between Florina and Koritza, westward on the Albanian side of the border.

Half of the mountain is Greek and the other half Albanian.

In the attack on Korca (Koritza), the Greek planes were said to have unloaded three tons of bombs in a series of bombings, destroying or putting beyond use two Italian airdromes whence the Italian planes were believed to have taken off for yesterday's bombings of Salonika.

En route back to their bases the Greek planes were said to have machine-gunned and dispersed a column of Italian motorcycle soldiers.

[The United Press reported from London that the British fleet may soon launch a "large-scale offensive" against Italy in the Mediterranean.

[The authoritative British Press Association, discussing the prospects of heavy naval attacks, said: "The moment appears to be approaching when one might expect powerful moves against Italian strength with the British Mediterranean fleet passing from the present phase of activity to a large-scale offensive."]

Although "no operations were carried out over western and central Germany because of bad weather," an air ministry communique said, a direct hit was scored yesterday by a coastal command plane on a merchant ship off the German-held Norwegian coast.

The vessel was a camouflaged 3,000-ton German supply ship, the ministry's news service added. After a direct hit, it said, white smoke poured out and part of the ship's cargo was seen in the water.

The report acknowledged that one of the coastal command's American-built Lockheeds was shot down

Confronted by only "light and ineffective" ground defenses, the news service said the British planes raiding Naples dived at times to within 2,000 feet of the city to drop their heavy bombs.

Able to "pinpoint" their targets, it said, the British raiders set off "many" explosions which were followed by fires.

The report said the first British planes concentrated on the oil refinery and groups of storage tanks at Poggio Reale, on the southern outskirts of the city; the second on Naples' railroad station and junction, and the third on searchlights and antiaircraft batteries, one of which "was silenced effectively."

The communique did not disclose where the British bombers started their flight, but since it specified that they were of the bomber command, they probably were land planes whose nearest base is at Malta, about 350 miles from Naples.

Previously, British bombers had attacked only such northern industrial cities as Milan and Turin, crossing the Alps from Britain, but to reach Naples from England would add about 1,000 miles to their round trip.

Spain Studies Weapon Italians Used at Gibraltar

Algeciras, Spain, Nov. 1 (AP).—A peculiar, torpedo-shaped apparatus used by the Italians Wednesday in an attempt to destroy shipping at Gibraltar was taken to the Spanish naval arsenal at San Fernando today for further study.

The "special device," as the British called it, was equipped with a seat on either side a little more than halfway back. It was driven by a propeller in the nose.

The apparatus was found on the Spanish coast near Gibraltar, but there was no trace of persons who might have manipulated it.

First reports said a submarine fired the "torpedo" that exploded in the harbor entrance. Later it was described as a "motor launch."

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, Nov. 1.—Mr. and Mrs. Guy W. Picking, of Baltimore, were arraigned today before Magistrate Thomas A. Aurelio in Yorkville Court for driving around in an automobile on which an American flag had been painted as part of a travel service advertisement.

J. Henry Smythe, jr., a slogan writer, was responsible for the arrest. He called the car to the attention of a policeman. In court, Magistrate Aurelio ordered a complaint drawn.

Mrs. Picking, who did most of the talking for the family, denied at first that the Stars and Red and White Stripes on the car were meant to represent the flag, but later she admitted that it was.

After she and her husband pleaded not guilty, the magistrate granted their request for an adjournment until December 16 to obtain counsel. In the meantime, Mrs. Picking said, she was going to get an opinion from Attorney General Jackson.

Storks Tell of 'Hell' Under Nazi Rule In Netherlands

Johannesburg, South Africa, Nov. 1 (AP).—Boer farmers in this vicinity report that some of the storks arriving here in their annual 7,000-mile migration from the Netherlands are carrying written messages on the condition of the Dutch under Nazi rule.

One farmer said he untied this scribbled message from the leg of a stork:

"We inhabitants of Bergen-op-Zoom tell you German occupation in just hell."

Another said, "the Dutch people are dying under injustice."

120-Foot Fall Kills Circus Clown

Milford, Del., Nov. 1 (AP).—A clown in a "thrill act" died today of injuries received when hurtled 120 feet from the top of a ladder during the dismantling of the act's equipment after a Halloween celebration in Plaza Square last night.

Thrown from the ladder, Walter Caldrell, 35, of Raleigh, N. C., hit another member of the crew, George Craig, of Union City, N. J., standing on the ground below. Both were taken to a hospital.

Caldrell died at 1:40 a. m. Craig received a deep gash in the neck and also was injured internally.

Defense Housing Gets Under Way

Contract Awarded For 600 Modern Homes at Fort Knox

Award of a $1,935,000 contract to build 600 homes for enlisted men and their families and 100 for civilian employes at Fort Knox, Ky., was announced yesterday by the Public Buildings Administration. It was the agency's first defense housing project.

The contract went to the Fleisher Engineering & Construction Co. of Lexington, Ky., whose fee was fixed at $81,000. The firm has 150 calendar days to get the homes ready, and plans to start construction next week, officials said.

The homes will be the starter for a $45,762,500 Army housing program being handled by the Federal Works Agency through the PBA.

Like D. C. Projects

Plans for the housing project call for construction of a new 70-acre community on the Fort Knox reservation, with homes similar in many ways to some of the low-rent housing projects around Washington.

Some of the buildings will have dwellings for four families, some for eight families. The buildings will be two stories, frame, separated from each other by 100 feet of lawn. The kitchens will be on the street side of the buildings, the living rooms in back looking out on a 50-foot garden.

Officials said that the building designs had been standardized, with enough variation "to establish individual character." Like the Farm Security homes at Greenbelt, Md., the Army's new dwellings will have "varicolored" walls and roofs.

The Government has gently rolling grounds to work with in planning the layout of the military community, and officials said that they would orient the houses according to land contours and avoid "any regimentation of dwelling groups."

Community Services Planned

Included in the present contract are the costs of roads and parking areas. In the community plan, but not in the first contract, are provisions for a chapel, firehouses, and other community buildings.

Standard dwellings will have a kitchen-dinette and living room on the first floor, with two or three bedrooms on the second floor. Kitchens will be equipped with combination sink and washtubs, built-in shelf cabinets, broom closet, and space for storing a washing machine. Each unit will have its own coal-burning hot-air furnace, with coal bins that can be filled from the outside through a special window. The bathroom equipment will include medicine chests. Hardwood floors and painted plaster walls and ceilings will be standard for the interiors.

Greek Line Pierced, Italians Report

Claim Strategic Ioannina Sector Has Been Overrun

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 1.—Italian armored motorized units were officially declared tonight to have made apparent breaches in Greece's Metaxas line at some points, pushing forward over rugged terrain soggy with three or four inches of mud.

For other and larger Fascist forces was claimed the capture of a populous area extending 35 miles within the invaded country in the region of Ioannina, (Janina) the strategically important Greek city which is the main immediate objective of the Italian campaign.

(The Italian radio in a broadcast picked up in New York asserted that Ioannina itself "has been reached.")

This area, said the official Italian News Agency Stefani, has 35,000 inhabitants and contains 79 villages. Its precise geographic limits were not given.

Road Junction Reached

The authoritative assertion that advance groups of Italian armored cars were now operating behind the Metaxas line—an irregular series of pill boxes and other fortifications roughly following the contours of the Greek Albanian frontier—was based upon a report to the Italian high command that the Greek highway junction of Kalibaki had been reached.

Officials here, unable to locate a town of such spelling, suggested instead that Kalikabi was meant—a town above Zitsa on the road northwest of Ioannina. Zitsa itself lies scarcely more than 10 miles from Ioannina.

While this picture of the Greek campaign was being drawn, military dispatches from the African battlefront indicated that the Italian armies were advancing in Egypt, and correspondents were told that this might be interpreted "unofficially" as a resumption of an Italian offensive which for weeks had been at a standstill there.

Specifically, the high command reported that some 100 miles inside Egypt's western desert Fascist motorized columns operating with planes had struck heavily at British forces and put them to flight, presumably operating from Greek bases bombed Naples and two important outlying steel mill and manufacturing areas—Bagnoli and Pomigliano d'Arco. One Neapolitan was reported killed and five injured. It was the first assault yet made on southern Italy's industrial areas. Both explosive and incendiary bombs fell.

Italy itself felt British bombs during the early morning. Planes

On the political front the Italians indicated they still were counting on Turkey to remain neutral since Bulgaria—which is under Axis influence—is apparently remaining quiet.

The newspaper La Stampa of Turin said the Turks had been "greatly compromised" by newspapers and diplomats "working in favor of England and Greece," but that the country was nevertheless "substantially neutral" and showed no signs of being ready to make "desperate, irremediable gestures."

back from its objective of the fortified Greek town and base of Janina, 35 miles below the Albanian border.

To the northeast, on the rugged Florina front, where the Italians are struggling to open a path to Salonika, 140 miles away, the Greek defenders were said in a radio broadcast to have achieved an important victory.

They not only "refused to yield an inch of ground but threw back the Italians Friday and "won an important hill position."

Greek planes bombed an Italian column marching into the lines on the Florina front, "killing many, damaging equipment and confusing the advance," it was stated over the radio.

List 92 Raid Victims

The ministry of public security issued a communique early today listing 92 dead and 149 wounded in 24 separate Italian air attacks throughout Greece Friday.

Rescue workers still were digging frantically in ruins, particularly at Salonika, and it was feared the toll would be considerably higher.

At Salonika more than 50 dead and 100 wounded were listed in official accounts last night.

The ministry of public security, asserting angrily that the Italians unloaded their bombs "solely on civilian objectives," listed the 24 bombed places as:

Salonika, attacked six times; the port and airdrome of Athens, raided twice; Kastoria, on the northern Macedonian front, bombed twice; Candia, on the Island of Crete; Corinth; Janina, on the northern front; Metsoeven, in the Pindar Mountains, Megara, near Athens, attacked twice; Thebes; Rethinnon, and Larissa in central Greece.

Jewish Section Strafed

On the Island of Corfu, it was stated officially, bombs smashed upon the Jewish section of the town of Corfu, two clinics and an Italian school with a total of 10 dead and 27 wounded.

At Kastoria, in the path of the Italian advance toward Salonika, bombs fell mostly into a lake while Crete escaped any severe damage, most of the bombs falling into the sea.

"The Italians dropped leaflets in the Greek language declaring that Italy is not an enemy of Greece but loves and respects the Greek people and desires to march in only to protect them against the English," the government communique said.

"These leaflets promised that Italy would respect the customs, traditions and religion of the Greek people if they would submit."

The important hill which the Greeks claimed to have captured on the Florina front to check Italy's push eastward toward Salonika was described as Mount Pissoderi, a ragged summit.

Greece's fierce mountain fighters were said to have stormed and taken the summit in a wild battle of bayonets and hand grenades.

Mount Pissoderi dominates the main road between Florina and Koritza, westward on the Albanian side of the border.

Half of the mountain is Greek and the other half Albanian.

In the attack on Korca (Koritza), the Greek planes were said to have unloaded three tons of bombs in a series of bombings, destroying or putting beyond use two Italian airdromes whence the Italian planes were believed to have taken off for yesterday's bombings of Salonika.

En route back to their bases the Greek planes were said to have machine-gunned and dispersed a column of Italian motorcycle soldiers.

[The United Press reported from London that the British fleet may soon launch a "large-scale offensive" against Italy in the Mediterranean.

[The authoritative British Press Association, discussing the prospects of heavy naval attacks, said: "The moment appears to be approaching when one might expect powerful moves against Italian strength with the British Mediterranean fleet passing from the present phase of activity to a large-scale offensive."]

Although "no operations were carried out over western and central Germany because of bad weather," an air ministry communique said, a direct hit was scored yesterday by a coastal command plane on a merchant ship off the German-held Norwegian coast.

The vessel was a camouflaged 3,000-ton German supply ship, the ministry's news service added. After a direct hit, it said, white smoke poured out and part of the ship's cargo was seen in the water.

The report acknowledged that one of the coastal command's American-built Lockheeds was shot down

Confronted by only "light and ineffective" ground defenses, the news service said the British planes raiding Naples dived at times to within 2,000 feet of the city to drop their heavy bombs.

Able to "pinpoint" their targets, it said, the British raiders set off "many" explosions which were followed by fires.

The report said the first British planes concentrated on the oil refinery and groups of storage tanks at Poggio Reale, on the southern outskirts of the city; the second on Naples' railroad station and junction, and the third on searchlights and antiaircraft batteries, one of which "was silenced effectively."

The communique did not disclose where the British bombers started their flight, but since it specified that they were of the bomber command, they probably were land planes whose nearest base is at Malta, about 350 miles from Naples.

Previously, British bombers had attacked only such northern industrial cities as Milan and Turin, crossing the Alps from Britain, but to reach Naples from England would add about 1,000 miles to their round trip.

Spain Studies Weapon Italians Used at Gibraltar

Algeciras, Spain, Nov. 1 (AP).—A peculiar, torpedo-shaped apparatus used by the Italians Wednesday in an attempt to destroy shipping at Gibraltar was taken to the Spanish naval arsenal at San Fernando today for further study.

The "special device," as the British called it, was equipped with a seat on either side a little more than halfway back. It was driven by a propeller in the nose.

The apparatus was found on the Spanish coast near Gibraltar, but there was no trace of persons who might have manipulated it.

First reports said a submarine fired the "torpedo" that exploded in the harbor entrance. Later it was described as a "motor launch."

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, Nov. 1.—Mr. and Mrs. Guy W. Picking, of Baltimore, were arraigned today before Magistrate Thomas A. Aurelio in Yorkville Court for driving around in an automobile on which an American flag had been painted as part of a travel service advertisement.

J. Henry Smythe, jr., a slogan writer, was responsible for the arrest. He called the car to the attention of a policeman. In court, Magistrate Aurelio ordered a complaint drawn.

Mrs. Picking, who did most of the talking for the family, denied at first that the Stars and Red and White Stripes on the car were meant to represent the flag, but later she admitted that it was.

After she and her husband pleaded not guilty, the magistrate granted their request for an adjournment until December 16 to obtain counsel. In the meantime, Mrs. Picking said, she was going to get an opinion from Attorney General Jackson.

Another said, "the Dutch people are dying under injustice."

Milford, Del., Nov. 1 (AP).—A clown in a "thrill act" died today of injuries received when hurtled 120 feet from the top of a ladder during the dismantling of the act's equipment after a Halloween celebration in Plaza Square last night.

Thrown from the ladder, Walter Caldrell, 35, of Raleigh, N. C., hit another member of the crew, George Craig, of Union City, N. J., standing on the ground below. Both were taken to a hospital.

Caldrell died at 1:40 a. m. Craig received a deep gash in the neck and also was injured internally.

Mrs. Browder's Case

There is no question that the wife of Earl Browder, Communist Party candidate for the Presidency, entered the United States illegally, and is, therefore, subject to deportation. Some question may be raised, however, as to the humanity of a proceeding that forces her to leave her husband and three sons and return to Soviet Russia.

It is also pertinent to ask whether it is mere coincidence that Mrs. Browder presents the first case for decision under the discretionary provisions of the Alien Registration Act. The timing of the deportation order creates a suspicion that the case is being used for political effect, regardless of the soundness of the Attorney General's position.

As a matter of fact, the status of Communists in this country is anomalous and our method of dealing with them quite illogical. While Earl Browder offers himself as a candidate for the highest office in the land, Attorney General Jackson rejects a plea for suspension of a deportation order against his wife on the ground that it is doubtful whether she is eligible for such lenient treatment. She would be unconditionally deportable if it could be shown that she advocates overthrow of the Government by force or violence. Is she, therefore, unconditionally deportable as one who believes in the aims of the Communist Party?

It appears that Mrs. Browder's testimony has been unsatisfactory both as to her Communist leanings and her political opinions in general. She may move to reopen the hearings, but the Attorney General's opinion does not offer her much encouragement to do so. For he points out that outstanding decisions of the Federal Courts have held the Communist Party to be an organization advocating forcible overthrow of the Government.

The Browder case emphasizes the importance of deciding what is to be our policy in dealing with Communists. Present methods are vacillating and ineffective; designed to harass a few individuals, while leaving the mass of really dangerous agitators free to carry on their activities.

New Field For Radio

The licensing of 15 stations for commercial "FM" broadcasting should give a new impetus to the radio business, which has been hampered in some instances by disputes over innovations. Television, once hailed as a "new industry" of great promise, still awaits agreement among manufacturers and sanction by the Federal Communications Commission before it can operate commercially. It is a new phase of sound broadcasting which has obtained right-of-way.

It may well be that frequency modulation, later on the scene than television, will make a substantial contribution to reemployment. If the expectations of its sponsors are realized, the manufacture of transmitters and the necessary new receiving sets should recall many workers to factories.

Manufacturers' hopes of popular demand for "FM" are based on the freedom from static and high fidelity claimed for this new type of broadcasting. Another desirable quality is said to be the elimination of interference because the weaker of two signals never reaches the loud speaker. This advantage will affect the public indirectly as well as directly, for it greatly simplifies the problem of granting broadcast channels.

Available frequencies under this new system are practically unlimited. It remains to be seen what will be the final effect of this circumstance on the duties of the FCC. It was the terrible tangle in the ether during the period of unregulated broadcasting that necessitated establishment of Federal control. The power of the FCC has since been extended over other phases of radio.

In the case of "FM," however, Chairman Fly of the FCC has said that the chief initial task is to insure that the majority of broadcasters will cover the natural retail areas of their cities. The FCC also wishes to make certain that each station in a given city will serve the same area as its competitors. Some few rural stations of greater power are contemplated. With these factors in mind, the FCC is moving as fast as it can to consider the other 36 applications pending.

On The Defensive

President Roosevelt began his address last night by acknowledging the strength of his opposition. "Many conflicting interests, many irreconcilable social outlooks, many fundamentally opposite economic attitudes," he said, "have been thrown together under one political roof." Every student of politics knows that such combinations are formed only when there is widespread dissatisfaction with the administration in power.

From the President's viewpoint, the cooperation of John L. Lewis with the numerous and varied groups that are supporting Wendell Willkie is an "unholy alliance." He sees in that "alliance" a threat to the future of democracy in this country. That line of reasoning seems the more difficult to follow because the President apparently saw no such dangers to the welfare of the Nation, when many of the diverse groups of which he speaks were supporting the New Deal.

The President makes a serious mistake, when he assumes that there is no common ground upon which these factions can unite, "unless it be their common will to power, and their impatience with the normal democratic processes . . ." The fact is, of course, that most of the diverse elements working together in the Willkie camp have been united by their opposition to a third term. That one issue has been sufficient to bring men of numerous political views into the G. O. P. leader's crusade.

It is significant that the President last night dropped the pretense of speaking only to clear up campaign "falsifications." If he had held to that purpose, he probably would not have felt free to declare that for three years after the economic crash of 1929 "the American Government did nothing to help." Nor would he have said: "You all know the history of recovery, beginning in 1933, and progressing ever since." Had he been interested only in setting the record straight, he might have recalled the severe depression of 1937 from which the country has not yet fully recovered.

Certainly if his interest had been centered in fair presentation of facts he would not have gone to an unnamed Philadelphia lawyer to find "the true sentiment of the Republican leadership."

The chief weakness of the address, however, centers in the fact that the President was on the defensive. He based his appeal for continued power largely on the social gains of the last seven years. Those gains have unquestionably been substantial. But the President offered no convincing evidence that these social gains would be in jeopardy if he should not be returned to the White House. And, more important, he failed to show how these gains can be preserved for any length of time under his policy of piling up the national debt higher and higher every year.

At one point in his address the President looked toward the future and expressed hope of new progress. But he concluded with the declaration that he is "fighting to keep this Nation prosperous and at peace." For millions who are still unemployed the conception of prosperity implied in that remark leaves much to be desired.

The sorry fact is that the American people cannot look back at any part of the last decade with any substantial degree of satisfaction. That fact now works to President Roosevelt's disadvantage just as certainly as it smoothed his way to the White House in 1932.

Sectional Regularity

In this Presidential election year, little effort has been made by candidates to woo the voters of the Southern States, with the outstanding exception of Wendell Willkie's incursions into the border States of Kentucky and Maryland.

Despite the importance of the issues before the country, the South is expected to stand with customary solidarity for the Democratic Presidential candidate. This means, undoubtedly, that many votes will either represent a blind allegiance to party loyalty or else will be cast for a candidate with whose views the voter is not in agreement. Certainly that holds true for a considerable number of the Southerners in the House and Senate who have been among the most bitter critics of New Deal policies.

As voting time approaches, party labels apparently gain the ascendancy in the Southern States. That also appears to be the case in the stalwart Republican States of Maine and Vermont. For they, together with Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, and South Carolina, have remained in the same camp in every Presidential election since 1912. Four other Southern States have a record of only one defection. That occurred in 1928 when Alfred E. Smith ran for President.

It is impossible to believe that the voters of these one-party States are less individualistic, less inclined to differ over national issues, than their fellow Americans. Yet the party bonds that hold the majority together are exceptionally strong—stronger than intellectual convictions that otherwise would, from time to time, cause a shift of allegiance after the fashion of the great majority of the States.

Unwavering partisanship is unfortunate both from the national viewpoint and from that of the States concerned. For it impairs the value of the vote as an expression of the popular will. Furthermore, the quickening influence of discussion of live issues is largely lost to communities impervious to arguments reflecting upon the party to which traditional allegiance is given.

Union Initiation Fees

When a man feels free to join a union or stay outside, as he chooses, the cost of becoming a member is not a matter of public concern so long as the funds are used for legitimate union purposes. However, the size of initiation fees and the amount of membership dues become matters of grave public concern when collective bargaining agreements call for a closed shop in establishments engaged on Federal defense orders.

Complaints are now widespread that men seeking jobs on Government construction projects, unskilled as well as skilled workers, are being compelled to pay large initiation fees to unions. Westbrook Pegler excoriated the practice in his column of October 30 as a form of racketeering. From scattered sources come reports that initiation fees required by some carpenters' unions run as high as $75 and $80. A letter to the editor published today in The Post likewise asserts that exorbitant initiation fees are demanded by local unions from applicants for defense jobs.

When men apply for work, knowing jobs are available, they have every reason to feel aggrieved when they are forced to pay tribute to a union as a condition of employment. Naturally indignation mounts as the size of the levy increases. But the problem presented by these exactions will not be solved by castigating the unions and denouncing their officials.

With collective bargaining rights guaranteed under the Wagner Act, the pressure upon workers to join unions has greatly increased. Indeed, where collective bargaining results in closed shop agreements, union membership becomes mandatory for all employes. The result is that many unions are now in a strategically strong position to force compliance with their membership demands.

If such unions abuse their power by charging exorbitant fees to newcomers, public resentment is certain to be aroused, especially under present conditions. For such practices prevent the rapid recruitment of labor on defense projects, inflict great hardship on men in search of work, and indirectly add to the cost of defense projects. If the unions are not careful, demands will almost certainly arise for governmental regulation of their membership requirements—demands which would constitute a major threat to independent unionism.

Conscripted Services

The white stork, subject of superstition and fable, ordinarily makes its home in Belgium, Holland and parts of Germany, which at present is to say that it makes its home entirely in German-controlled territory. In fact, it is supposed to be the old German superstition—that a stork often passed over a house before a birth within—which gave rise to the fable that storks bring babies.

Whatever it brought in the past, however, the stork at present is a carrier of news. On their annual 7,000 mile migration south this year, the birds have carried messages from residents of the Netherlands to inhabitants of South Africa. According to a dispatch from Johannesburg, one letter found attached to the leg of a stork read: "We inhabitants of Bergenop-Zoom tell you German occupation is just hell." Another read: "The Dutch people are dying under injustice."

Of course, the carrier pigeon has long been a bearer of messages. But this is a new role for the stork. Like so many human beings, this majestic bird, once a symbol of new life and hope, has become the unwitting bearer of tidings of death and despair. Will the storks be sent to concentration camps, on their return, for thwarting the Gestapo? It can scarcely be said that such a symbolic gesture would be out of keeping with Europe's tragic mood.

"We are treading on sacred ground by kicking labor in the face," Murdock said. —Detroit Free Press. And we aren't being any too kind to metaphors, either.

Not So Gaudy

From the Des Moines Register.

Registration day was past and 17,000,000 young men had their names on the dotted line before it came out that, once in uniform, they will be wearing what Lieut. Col. Vere Painter described as "a pinch of orange, a dash of canary yellow, a drop of old rose, the same of Alice blue, a jigger of brown, and a bit of lavender."

But don't worry, conscripts Those dainty colors aren't going to show.

Those are the colors a manufacturer had to blend to get the olive drab specified by regulations for the training camp uniforms.

It does seem a lot of bother—all that mixing—to get a color which past experience demonstrates will run the gamut from pale ivory to chocolate brown six weeks after the supply sergeants have passed out the uniforms.

But that's really what goes into them—old rose and lavender—for fighting men!

Disagrees With Miss Thompson

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Miss Dorothy Thompson has explained in her usual lucid style her reasons for supporting Mr. Roosevelt for a third term. However, it seemed to me that her reasoning is rather labored in some respects.

In the first place, she says: "the campaign . . . has demonstrated . . . a deep, spiritual, internal health." If by that she means clean politics she is closing her eyes to several blots on the Democratic Party's escutcheon which have thus far not been obliterated. To mention only a few: would anyone but a politican tolerate the support of the Kelly-Nash machine of Chicago or the still more disreputable "strong man" of Jersey City, Mayor Hague?

Secondly, Miss Thompson states that "The President knows the world. He knows it, in the most particular minutiae, better than any other living democratic head of a state . . ." So he does. It is true that he has made an honest effort to convince the South American republics that they are democracies. He has demonstrated that we are more than ready to meet them half-way in mutual protection. But everyone knows that all of the countries to the south of us, with two or three exceptions, are under the domination of dictators who rule with an iron hand. It is rather late to help those poor people.

Mr. Roosevelt's efforts have not been as sincere and frank in the Far East. Why haven't the people or Congress, at least, been taken into his confidence as to what our fleet is doing in the Pacific? Surely, the fleet is not there to protect the small volume of trade that we have in that region. Our business with the areas of contention amounts to less than $40,000,000 a year. It would cost many times that amount to conduct a war in the Far East.

Lastly, I criticize Miss Thompson's defense of the appointment of Messrs. Stimson and Knox. Mr. Stimson's record as Secretary of War under President Taft and as Secretary of State under President Hoover was not particularly outstanding and I believe a younger man could have served the War Department more ably. It might be added that these appointments veered slightly in the direction of an effort to ensnare Republican votes.

In conclusion, I fail to see why we should return to the Presidential office a man who has saddled us with a debt of $50,000,000,000, who gaily brushes aside all consideration of the mounting expenses of the Government while creating hysteria over a nonexistent crisis in the Far East.

No More Speeches

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "It Is Later Than You Think" is a bugle blast which should arouse the Nation. I know, from many years' travel in Europe and South America, that every word of warning you can write is true.

A mad dog is loose in the world. America is confronting it with a barrage of words, and even that barrage is not aimed at the dog.

Urge everyone who has a yen for mouthing to get busy for U. S. A. and use such force as they have for this country.

No necessity for more speeches by anyone. The people know how they are going to vote.

Majority Usually Right

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Wallace says the Nazis are supporting Mr. Willkie and are anxious to have Mr. Roosevelt out of the White House. How utterly ridiculous and typical of Mr. Wallace to say that. Anybody with a little intelligence should see that if the Nazis wanted a particular candidate elected, they would give their support to the other.

Mr. Irvin S. Cobb points out that both Hitler and Mussolini were elected thrice before assuming their roles of dictators and he suggests that Mr. Roosevelt may do the same. How absurd, and how unlike Mr. Cobb to lose sight of the fact that this is a country full of Americans and that it would take a man 20 times the man Mr. Roosevelt is to dictate to the American people.

My letter is only intended for a few. At least, I hope there will only be a few who will worry about the future of the Nation, be it Mr. Willkie or Mr. Roosevelt who is the next President of the United States. No one man can break or even badly bend this country. So, don't worry too much. Listen to all who have something to say. Weigh their arguments and examine the record. Analyze the candidates, not their voices, not their appearance, but their character. Draw your own individual conclusions and then work for what you believe to be right.

But if there are more Americans who believe that you are wrong, take it the North American way. Remember that there will be other elections and that the majority of the people are usually right.

Punch And Judy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The national political campaign, now happily drawing to its close, reminds one more and more of the tale told by an idiot, "full of sound and fury, signifying nothing."

Except for the clash of rival personal ambitions, there is not enough difference between the two major political parties—at least none apparent to this one wearied mind—and the "issues" at stake, to be worth all the shouting.

Even Dorothy Thompson, that indispensable and omniscient woman, and original Willkie man, gives as one of her reasons for switching back to Roosevelt that "short of giving them Capitol Hill, he has complied with every reasonable demand of the industrialists," whom she greatly admires.

Not even Mr. Willkie can promise fairer than that.

I am not much of a prophet, but since prophecies are the order of the day may I venture to predict that whether a Democrat or a Republican is the next occupant of the White House, the capitalist profit system will continue for at least a while longer, under which the rich will continue to get richer, the poor poorer, huge private fortunes will be greatly augmented under the name of defense, big business will get bigger and little business will be squeezed closer and closer to the wall.

But it's necessary and stimulating to have these periodical campaigns, for the great uninitiated public dearly loves a Punch and Judy show.

Initiation Fees

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Regarding Mr. Westbrook Pegler's column in The Post of October 30, "Laborers' Union," I truly hope that you will give the following statement careful consideration and attention. Being a victim of the laborers' union in Washington, D. C., I am familiar with the true facts.

On Monday, October 28, four non-union men asked for jobs as laborers on the new buildings being erected for conscripts at Fort Belvoir, Va. These men were told by the superintendent of the job to go to the laborers' union, 523 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, get fixed up with a permit or union card, and he would put them to work Tuesday, October 29, as he needed men. However, joining the union was the first part and condition of employment.

To acquire one of these precious cards in the Laborers' Union, No. 74, Washington, D. C., one must pay $25 as the initial payment and a balance of $33 within 60 days, making a total of $58. This includes three months' dues. Thereafter the dues are $2 per month. With this badge of servility and oppression the proud owner is allowed to go forth and sell his labor at 80 cents per hour or $6.40 per day.

A union card in the carpenters' union costs the victim $25 down and a balance of $27, making a total of $52. With this precious ticket one can earn on the same job $13 per day, providing he can use a wood wrench and gauge. This is all in honor of the boys in the national draft.

A UNIONEER.

Mr. Kennedy 'Helped'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A good many voters must have swung to Wendell Willkie upon hearing Ambassador Kennedy's address in behalf of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The general situation today is undoubtedly this: By far the greater body of Americans are in principle opposed to shattering the third-term tradition; but millions of them are honestly preparing to sacrifice that tradition because they believe that an emergency exists which only Mr. Roosevelt can meet.

But now comes Ambassador Kennedy unwittingly to upset and quite demolish this favorite third-term argument. He dwells at length upon the peculiar nature of this war, its savage defiance of international law and all diplomatic conventions; time after time he declares that all that counts is the meeting of force with force, and that diplomacy has no place in the world today! This, from Mr. Roosevelt's own ambassador.

Well, it helps a lot. Exit "the indispensable man." Now, let us stick to our time-honored tradition—and vote for Wendell Willkie.

'Carry On'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
While politicians bicker and partisans scream hate,
Through dark, uncharted waters rides our Ship of State.
Our pilot guides its course, undaunted, unafraid.
Though foes without and foes within against him are arrayed.
His courage is the beacon that lights it on its way;
Shines down the path of Liberty for all the world today.
Though many kingdoms crumble and democracies decay,
We'll "carry on" with Roosevelt and conquer, come what may.

Design For Thinking

ONLY LAST JUNE Emily was promoted to high school, but in so short a time the days have already fallen into a design, especially the walk home in the autumn afternoons.

Emily divides the walk into three parts. The first is the distance from school to the corner of Main and High Streets. The second part is the remainder of the way home, taken in either of two ways, the long walk or the short walk. The third part is subjective; it is Emily's thinking. In classes Emily's attention sometimes slips away from the recitation. It is then that she plans what she will think about on the way home.

The day was Friday. The crowd scattered at the corner and Emily went on alone. At the library she jumped on the low wall, to walk there as she had been doing since she was a little girl. She still permitted this souvenir of childhood to herself, because by walking on the wall a certain feeling sometimes came to her. This was a queer sensation of stepping outside her everyday self, half a kind of joy and half wonder, as if she were a part of something which went on into infinity.

It was while walking on the wall that she first began to think that the figure, "zero," which she used in "math," could not possibly be true, only a convenient way of reckoning. She was sure that there must always be something at every point in time or space. Emily would like to talk to her best girl friend about all this, but she has learned not to talk about "math" even to her best friend because popular girls must talk about parties and clothes and beaux.

When Emily had walked the length of the wall she stepped back onto the sidewalk and went on thinking. This thought was of a dream which she once had about a box of colored geometric forms, cubes and cones. There were just seven of them. Someone said, "These are the days of the week." They were jumbled in bright confusion, and she could choose the day she wanted instead of waiting for it to arrive by the calendar. Monday was a cube, harsh red like the paint on her grandfather's barn. Tuesday was colored olive-green. Wednesday she could not remember, but Thursday was a kind of a crescent in hyacinth blue. Friday was an irregular form of red-gold color like the autumn leaves which Emily was now scuffling with a pleasant scrunching sound. She had chosen Friday, and now she was experiencing one, colored all red and gold. There was a sharp scent of smoke in the air. Emily munched a crimson apple scented like an almond. She liked October. She tried to remember the form which had represented Saturday, but it eluded her. She could, however, remember the Sunday form. It was a pale yellow sphere, translucent like a topaz. Next to Friday's form Emily liked the Sunday one. She wished that it were true that all days came together and that one could take one's pick of rose or smoke colored days.

She began to think how glad she was that she had taken the long way home. This led along a street with houses on only one side. On the other, sheer rocky banks led up to open country. Following a little, one could see cliffs. When she was [illegible] had seemed very formidable at their base at night she had sometimes looked straight up and seen the stars above a black escarpment. There was a feeling that went with that experience, different from the one she felt while walking on the wall, harder to put into words.

Emily remembered that she had planned to think about music. They have real music in high school. The teachers were already holding auditions for orchestra and chorus and solo candidates. Emily was sure she would not be chosen, except perhaps for the chorus. She would like even that. Today the teacher had talked about symphonies, and then he had played parts of one composed by Beethoven.

The reason for thinking about the music was this: Emily had realized that morning during the playing that she was experiencing the identical feeling which she knew at night at the foot of the cliff. She had never understood before that one can do things like that with music. This seemed convenient to Emily. If one could play this symphony one could reproduce the strange feeling without waiting for a moment in which to stand at the foot of the cliff and to gaze up the dark surface until one saw a star. This would be like having the box of days in one's hand.

Emily skirted the cliffs in the warm October light. She frankly dawdled to make the way longer. She still had subjects which she had decided in class should be thought about. Her best girl friend had been absent from her thoughts, crowded out by more immediate concerns, by newer impressions, yet Emily realized that in a way she was always thinking about her friend. Now she began to think consciously of her, about something special and unique which she might give to her at Christmas. This opened up a whole line of thoughts: Thanksgiving, the Christmas holidays, with skating and hiking in the country roads under lowering skies, in the background an awareness of dark hills and woods, frozen rivers and a chill, menacing wind.

These thoughts lasted until she came to her house and sat down on the steps. There seemed to be no hurry and she sat a little longer. She took a book from her satchel. The book was "First Principles of Chemistry." Emily was beginning chemistry this year. She was the only girl in the class. It was not "popular" to take chemistry.

Emily opened the book. A thin gold light washed over its pages. Emily was oblivious to the autumn beauty.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

From A Bystander

HAVING REMAINED in the sidelines in this campaign, I hope I am not taking myself too seriously if in this, the last article to be published before election, I state the reasons which have led me to stand aside. They have seemed to me to be good reasons, once it was established by Mr. Willkie's nomination and acceptance speech that no fundamental question of foreign policy and national defense was at issue between the two Presidential candidates.

Yet but for one special circumstance—that as a resident of the District of Columbia I am unable to vote—the reasons could not have been sufficient reasons. For if I had a vote, I should certainly cast it and, of course, if as a citizen I were participating in the election, as a newspaper writer I should say so. But being unable to vote, there has been for me no conflict between my duty as a citizen and my feeling that as a journalist I did not have the time, the strength, the nervous energy or the heart to go campaigning and at the same time to attempt to write about the awful complexity of America's vital interests in the world as it is today. The two assignments are beyond the powers of any newspaperman, and that is why few of my colleagues have attempted to cover the campaign and also foreign policy and national defense. For the individual writer is not a public personage, or at least ought not to be, nor is he a public institution, nor is he the repository of "influence" and "leadership;" he is a reporter and commentator who lays before his readers his findings on the subjects he has studied, and leaves it at that. He cannot cover the universe, and if he begins to imagine that he is called to such a universal mission, he will soon—if I may paraphrase an old saying—be saying less and less about more and more until at last he is saying nothing about everything.

ALL THIS DOES NOT mean that I do not have strong feelings about this election. I do have them and I have had them for the past two years. I regard this election, which has been in the making for two years, as having been an important cause in preparing and in intensifying the disaster which has befallen us and the rest of mankind. My overshadowing concern, therefore, has not been personalities, parties or campaign issues but how the election campaign, which happens to come at so unfortunate a moment in history, could be passed through without precipitating an irreparable disaster. I think it can be and I believe it will be, though only if in the heat of the partisan struggle no irreconcilable divisions are created in the nation.

Two years ago it was the month after Munich, and in that month it was made plain that Hitler had not been appeased and that Great Britain would prepare to resist. Unless the Allies could make themselves so strong that Hitler would not risk an encounter, or so weak that they would surrender, war was then inevitable. It was apparent, too, that the Allies could not make themselves impregnably strong unless they had access to the industrial resources of this country and promptly made plans to draw upon them; it was equally evident that, unprepared or not, great empires like the British and the French would not surrender without fighting. If there was any hope of peace during the winter of 1938-1939, it lay in giving the Allies access to American industry; if that was not sufficient to have impressed the moderating influences in Germany, then it would at least have greatly improved the chances of French and British resistance on the continent of Europe.

IT WAS THE SHADOW of the coming election which prevented the United States from making this one great contribution within its power to maintain peace, or, failing that, to insure the Allied resistance. In the development of America's armament industry very nearly a whole year was lost, and it was lost because politics prevented a revision of the Neutrality Act. The Republican leadership in Congress, with some notable exceptions, decided to stigmatize the revision of the Neutrality Act as the road to war, having decided, as it has again decided in this last phase of the campaign, that it was a smart trick to label the Democrats as the war party. The Democratic leadership, with the election campaign in prospect did not know how and did not dare to deal with this political issue; at the same time the party was divided and bedazzled in that fatal winter of 1938-1939 by new grandiose schemes for lending and spending and vote-catching.

Thus, with this election impending the politicians on both sides provided another tragic example of how democracy can be paralyzed by partisanship. They interfered with any effective move to avert the war, or to prepare this country or the Allies sufficiently against the consequences of the war. So we drifted lazily, divided, distracted, and doped with propaganda and with propaganda about propaganda towards the immeasurable disaster of the war which began in September a year ago. Long before the primaries and the conventions and the campaigning of this summer and autumn, the election played havoc with the destiny of men. And that is the reason why I have wanted not to contribute to the bitterness, but if I could to assuage it, and to think without partisan attachments, since I was not a voter, about the state of things when the votes will have been counted.

I HOLD that there is a paramount national interest at stake in this election which overrides all the contentions of the partisans. It is that this campaign should be so conducted and so concluded and so transcended that at once,—in fact and in the eyes of a world which is watching intently,—the American nation will prove by its unity that the free can be strong. We cannot afford to emerge from this campaign a divided and embittered people; we cannot afford in the course of this campaign to impugn the good faith of the next President of the United States, whoever he may be, or to cast doubts upon the courage and the resolution of the nation. For if this democracy is divided and frightened, or even if those who do not know our ways think we are divided and frightened, we shall precipitate an irreparable disaster for the very long future.

The voters will make their choice: if it is Willkie, he will need not merely the nominal but the full-blooded support of those whom he now denounces; if it is Roosevelt again, he will need somehow to gain the support of the very energetic people who now distrust him. These things have to be remembered. The safety of the people depends upon remembering them when political passions are most likely to make us forget them. For national union is not to be achieved by pronouncing the words but by practicing it, and there can be no unity when men become so fanatical about their views that they say things which, if sincerely spoken, would be unforgivable and if seriously meant, would be irreconcilable.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Semisacred Group

SO THERE CAME a time in the Republic of the United States when the people went to the polls to elect a President, so confused in their emotions that they did not all realize that they were choosing between a leader in the European sense of the title and a constitutional President—between Americanized naziism and their old republican form of government.

President Roosevelt, in two terms, had followed the course of European leaders, but with variations so cleverly improvised and disguised that many of the people honestly and passionately resented warnings against his course.

As abroad, high party leaders became a semisacred group, with special privileges. But so dazzled were the President's following that when this fact was demonstrated many of them angrily denounced the evidence itself as a disgraceful insult to a great and good man. The man had become more sacred than the office, and two sons of his who had denounced princes of privilege were openly acknowledged to be princes of privilege with special rights derived from their father.

"GRAFT" WAS DEFINED in the best dictionary of the time as "acquisition of money, position, etc., by . . . taking advantage of a public office or any position of trust to obtain fees, perquisites, profits on contracts or legislation."

The party leaders reckoned that the people had been so badly corrupted that they wouldn't object to graft by the big men of the party. In this belief they teamed up with the most notorious corrupt machines in the country to win New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Chicago. They held the intelligence and decency of the people in such contempt that they even called this alliance with the politico-criminal underworld "The Party of Humanity."

In New York the local dictator, named LaGuardia, joined forces with a man whom he personally often had denounced as a political corruptioneer. And when an ordinary citizen of Detroit taunted him about it LaGuardia physically attacked the citizen, and when the people arrested the citizen, instead of the Mayor, it didn't even occur to the people that this was the wrong way around. That shows how far gone they were.

AGAIN, a few days later in New York, the New Deal's chief political censor had trouble getting through a crowd and, in the brutal spirit of power which now possessed the President's personal circle, kicked a Negro policeman. It was a foul kick—the dirtiest kick known to men who fight fair.

The cops would have locked up any ordinary citizen for this vicious assault on a fellow officer. But the President's men were now above the law, and LaGuardia was commander in chief of the cops. They didn't dare arrest his fellow party leader.

The Presidency went after the labor bosses in the same cunning way that it had rounded up the crooked political machines. The labor machines were greedy, brutal and badly infested with criminals. But the President was spending billions on defense, and he permitted union chiefs so inclined to extort millions from ordinary citizens who wanted to work. To work on national defense a citizen had to buy a temporary work license for $20, $60 or $80 from union bosses who naturally came out strong for the party because this graft was theirs to steal or spend as they pleased.

Marriage Rush Drops Sharply Since Oct. 16

The recent high interest on matrimony vanished abruptly in Washington since Registration Day, October 16.

The marriage license registry at the District Court showed Thursday that 595 couples filed applications in the first 16 days of this month. Only 359 applications were filed in the remainder of the month.

Nevertheless, the October total was 954, compared with 531 in October, 1939.

"ALL THIS TALK . . . DOESN'T CONFORM TO THE FACTS . . ." Mr. Roosevelt, at New Haven, was reassuring Yale students as to his opponents' charge he wants to get us into war. But there is one "alleged misrepresentation," says Mark Sullivan, to which the President has made only "a passing allusion." It deals with his fiscal policy

Readers' Campaign Views

Excerpts From Letters To The Editor

Said Something

It seems to many of your readers that both Presidential candidates have been wasting much time in stating over and over the assurances that they will not lead the United States into war. No one supposes for a moment that either has any desire to bring on war. But they both have reiterated it till we are tired of it. We all know they would not unless we are attacked, and then both candidates would be a unit in thought. Many years ago Abraham Lincoln made his noted Gettysburg speech. He used few words, and the speech was uttered but once by him. Yet it is still alive, and just because Lincoln when h spoke said something.—Pierre L. O. A. Keller, Washington.

Crisis Here

Mr. Roosevelt seeks reelection for a third term on the ground of an existing crisis, referring, of course, to the war. There is, indeed, a crisis and a grave one, but as far as this country is concerned, it is right here in the United States, not in Europe. And it stems from the ambition of neither Adolph Hitler nor Benito Mussolini, but from that of Franklin D. Roosevelt.—James Quarles, Staunton, Va.

From Missouri

In his campaign Mr. Willkie has conducted a veritable blitzkrieg. His bombs of unjust accusations and criticisms have been flung far and wide, bursting with a brief brilliant flare which we hope will flicker out before he reaches the White House. I am from Missouri. In not one single instance has he shown me that he is capable of taking over the reins of government at this critical time or any other time.—The Missourian, Elsah, Ill.

"Telling The Truth"

Mr. Wendell Willkie is now touring the country telling the people the truth in a courageous and fearless manner. Crowds follow him to hear the truth. Now, my Americans, why not give Mr. Willkie a chance, after thinking over the occasions when the truth was told you and you would not heed it.—A Loyal American, Washington.

Those Who Are Opposed

Almost without exception the third term traditionalists are opposed to the New Deal. The great protagonist of the third term tradition, for example, is the isolationist Hiram Johnson. Naturally those who are opposed to the Roosevelt policies would like to have the people deny themselves the Constitutional rights to sustain these policies.—Richard Franchot, Washington.

"Our Last Hope"

Three forces are left in the world—communism, fascism, and democracy. Today, fascism is holding the cards with her conservative preparedness, her industrial production. Now comes Wendell Willkie, our last and only hope for democracy—Willkiecrat, Washington.

Mr. Lewis Again

Says John L. Lewis, you will defeat President Roosevelt, or else! Oh, yeah!—A C. I. O. Worker, Washington.

Mr. Willkie's Pronunciation

Your correspondent, Mrs. McMichael, seems sadly distrait over Mr. Willkie's "illiterate pronunciation of the word "government." Perhaps Willkie considers that "gov-munt" for seven years has been such a travesty upon what government should be that his illiterate pronunciation is levied in tribute to that fact.—Dan K. Miller, Mount Rainier, Md.

Nazi Technique

I wonder if the Republican Party realizes it is employing the German technique of waging war psychologically. I wish to quote this passage from the book by the German author, August Banse: "It is essential to attack the enemy at its weakest spot to undermine and to convince it that it is being deceived, misled, and brought to destruction by its own government in order that it may lose confidence in the justice of its cause, and that thus the opposition at home may raise its head and make trouble more successful than before."—C. Carvel, Washington.

Change Of Slogan

A change of administration is always like the coming of spring; a renewal of faith and hope, new promises to watch materialize, a change in the old monotony. And this will be doubly true with the election of Mr. Willkie. His great capability combined with a confident, willing business and a busy, hopeful citizenry will be doing their united best to change that fearful slogan "It is later than you think" to "There's still time."—M. A. B., Washington.

Fills The Bill For Him

I am an old man 70 years of age, eligible for old-age assistance but as yet have not received it. I do not blame the President. In 1940 the people of the United States need Mr. Roosevelt more than ever. I hope and pray to every true American to vote for him if they want to save the country, for I honestly believe him to be the only living person that can fill the bill.—E. C. Wilson, Washington.

Medicine Chest Metaphors

We think Miss Thompson would better not draw overmuch on the medicine chest for metaphors, as they might have a rebound. One might wonder the purpose of the New Deal's carpetbaggers in smearing Mr. Willkie with eggs of various condition was to relieve his throat, or even suggest, to carry out the metaphor, that Miss Thompson shows symptoms of a severe attack of hyperacidity of the cacoethes loquendi.—Galen Hiett Swimley, Bunker Hill, W. Va.

Country's Name

Each time Willkie makes a speech he mentions America anywhere from 20 to 30 times. And that word, which is so dear to every man, woman and child throughout our Nation, is pronounced Amawrka by the Republican candidate for the Presidency of the United States. It must grate on the nerves of every true American as it does on mine each time he utters our country's name.—T. H. Cullan, Upper Darby, Pa.

"While London Burns"

While London burns, the indispensable man, with the pleasant voice, reads us flowing phrases and measured periods prepared by others. That we are fooled by fallacy indicates that we, too, may have grown tired of self-government. Instead of more abundant life and national security being just around the corner, the fatal road with the fatal turning yawns before us.—J. H. Bilbrey, Takoma Park, Md.

"From The Post"

I admire the President for consenting to run once more, for the country needs him, whether Mr. Willkie has discovered this or not. The alarming condition in the world today requires that we elect our strongest man, and Mr. Roosevelt is no doubt that man. Surely it is no time to experiment with a novice—there is too much at stake to be caught napping. This is no time to squabble over foolish traditions—such things come to us from the past.—A Republican, Greenbelt, Md.

"Omen Of Danger"

There is not, nor can there be such a person as the indispensable man at the head of this, our free-thinking, free-acting, free-choosing American Republic. To believe there is is to fail to see an omen of danger to the perpetuation of our form of government.—Fred D. Jacobs, Alexandria, Va.

"Back To Bleak Days"

I am a working man and I travel with working people and I know what gains we have made since President Roosevelt came into office. All that Willkie is running his campaign on is the third-term tradition. I want to say that when the world is in the condition that it is today we have to have the best man in the White House, regardless of tradition. We can't let our country go back to the bleak days of '32.—Robert Marius, Washington.

Defense Appropriations

Every year for seven years Roosevelt has tried to get money appropriated for battleships, a larger army and equipment so that this country could defend itself against invasion, but the pacifists and isolationists in Congress outnumbered the progressives. Now that danger is near, these same people are screaming revenge on Roosevelt.—Mrs. C. Moore, Forest Glen, Md.

Important Questions

Just why does President Roosevelt ignore Mr. Willkie's repeated requests to answer certain important questions? Aren't the American people entitled to know why the Chief Executive finds it necessary to become affiliated with "Boss" Flynn, for instance, who according to Mayor LaGuardia "is as low and vicious as Croker or Tweed."—Edmund K. Goldsborough, Washington.

Is It?

It is known that the Senate will be Democratic for at least four to six years and the House in all probability for four years. What will a Republican President do for us with a Democratic Congress coming right at a time when we will need every ounce of our energy to turn the foreign war situation back to a civilized and advancing cultural intelligence.—Independent Voter, Washington.

Greatest President

Mr. Roosevelt is not seeking further honors, for already his name will go down in history as America's greatest President. He has no desire for dictatorship, for he loves too much democracy.—Leonora C. Davidson, Washington.

Another Light Brigade

If President Roosevelt is not reelected, supporters of his government power projects probably will declare him the victim of the latest "Charge of the Light Brigade."—Edward Ferris, Washington.

Labor's Vote

It is an old saying, "lie down with dogs and get up with fleas," and Mr. Lewis' influence over labor by his switch to the foes of labor will be very inconsequential.—Square Dealer, Washington.

Clouding The Issue

Why can't this campaign be carried on in a dignified manner, without so much mudslinging? It seems to me that both parties are simply clouding the issue.—Ann Beck, Washington.

Roosevelt's Reply

By Mark Sullivan

Allusion To 'Misrepresentations'

WHEN President Roosevelt, two weeks ago, announced that he would make five political speeches, he said the purpose was to reply to "misrepresentations," to "tell the American people what these misrepresentations have been and in what respect they are false." To several alleged "misrepresentations" Mr. Roosevelt has replied—whether convincingly or not, whether squarely meeting the issue or not, is for the public to decide.

There is one alleged misrepresentation to which Mr. Roosevelt so far has made only a passing allusion. The alleged misrepresentation in question is that which says that because of Mr. Roosevelt's borrowing and spending, his increase in the public debt, his failure to balance the budget year after year—because of all that, holders of life insurance policies (and also beneficiaries of social security) are likely to receive, when their time of payment comes, dollars which will have a much lower purchasing power. The charge amounts to saying that Mr. Roosevelt's fiscal course is likely to lead to inflation.

It should be made clear just what this charge is. The charge is not that policyholders may fail to get the number of dollars they are promised. There is no serious reason to fear that. The fear, the charge, is that each dollar will have a much smaller purchasing power, that dollars will become, in their purchasing power, 25-cent pieces, or even less. In this form the fear is expressed by economists and scholars of the highest standing, persons who have no faintest political motive.

TO THIS charge, Mr. Roosevelt's only allusion so far was in a brief speech at Hartford, Conn., home city of several insurance companies. The gist of Mr. Roosevelt's scanty allusion was merely that: "On the part of these men who are trying to instill fear in the policyholders throughout the United States, it is the most dastardly and the most unpatriotic action of any Americans I know of."

It will be observed that Mr. Roosevelt did not deny the charge. He did not defend his fiscal record. He merely, so to speak, created an atmosphere of denial, without actually making specific denial. Yet, if the New Dealers know how to meet this charge, in some way more convincing than epithets, it is practically certain they would do so. The persons likely to be disturbed by the charge, holders of some 60,000,000 insurance policies (and also the many millions of social security beneficiaries) include a large partlof the American electorate. For the insurance policyholders, some New Dealers have a phrase. Radicals who favor some degree of collectivism, speak of the insurance policyholders as "the yeomanry of the individualist system." Decidedly, if the New Dealers knew a way to appease or otherwise assure the policyholders, they would do so. Possibly they may attempt it yet, late as it is in the campaign.

THERE IS one reason why Mr. Roosevelt and the New Dealers should feel embarrassed to discuss this charge directly. They would be obliged to review the record of Mr. Roosevelt's fiscal course. In doing that, they would be obliged to begin with utterances made by Mr. Roosevelt during his first campaign, in 1932. In that campaign, over and over, scores of times, Mr. Roosevelt painted the disaster made likely by the brief three years of deficits under President Hoover. While Mr. Roosevelt did not mention "inflation" by name, or at least did not emphasize it, nevertheless inflation was implicit in the disaster he warned against, when he said that "for three long years the Federal Government has been on the road to bankruptcy . . . "; and "too often in recent history, liberal governments have been wrecked on rocks of loose fiscal policy—we must avoid this danger."

Mr. Roosevelt believed that. He acted on that. During the first few months of his Administration, he made a really heroic effort to reduce Government expenses, cutting many salaries 25 per cent. Then, however, he abandoned economy. He began the borrow-and-lend policy. But always he kept the hope and intention of balancing the budget. Each year until 1939 he expressed the expectation of balancing the budget the following year. But never was the budget balanced. By 1939 Mr. Roosevelt could see the end of his second term with the budget never balanced. To the three years of Hoover deficits, was added eight years of Roosevelt deficits. The Hoover national debt of some 20 billions had become the Roosevelt debt of some 40 billions, with more in sight, with the statutory limit of 45 billions about to be exceeded.

In this situation, Mr. Roosevelt seemed to abandon hope of balancing the budget. He now took a different attitude. In his 1939 message to Congress he took a line which seemed to justify the borrowing. What had formerly been called Government spending he now called by a new name "Government investing."

To explain the implications of this phrase, and to say whether and how the budget is ever to be balanced, is what the New Dealers will have to do if they are to meet the charge of those who fear inflation, or other disastrous effect of the New Deal's fiscal course.

Books And Things

Neglected Hero

TWO HUNDRED and eighty-seven years ago last Tuesday a prisoner of the Mohawk Indians, naked as a beggar, with only a knife and hatchet in his hand, walked out into the forest, as if to cut firewood. He ran; he did not stop or eat, and by nightfall next day he reached the Dutch settlements. That was the beginning of the career of Pierre Radisson, who has waited long enough for a biographer to give him his proper place among the romantic heroes of America. Stanley Vestal rescues him from the specialist historians in "King of the Fur Traders" (Houghton, Mifflin, $3.50).

What a man! He had gone to Canada, a boy of 15, in 1651, and a year later, while hunting in the woods, he was captured by a band of marauding Mohawks. His two companions were scalped. Radisson, who laughed when the Indians cut his hair to a topknot, and fought back when an Indian bully harassed him, won the Indians' favor; he had qualities they admired. Once he escaped, along with an Algonquin fellow prisoner; he and the Algonquin killed the three Mohawks who were with them, and reached the St. Lawrence before they were overtaken. The Algonquin was killed in their canoe; Radisson, though tortured, threw all the blame on his dead companion, and again escaped alive. Adopted as a Mohawk, he led a band into the Erie country, and returned with scalps as trophies. He went with the Indians into Fort Orange (Albany) and was there recognized as a Frenchman; the Governor offered to ransom him. Radisson refused. Two months later he returned, without ransom. . . . And after all that he was not yet 18 years old!

HE LEARNED Indian life in that year with the Mohawks; all the rest of his life he was a success whenever he had to deal with Indians or worked in Indian territory, and at a disadvantage only when he attempted to function in a white man's world. He understood Indian warfare and Indian psychology; he knew how to live in the woods—and he loved the great lake-filled forests of the North.

He returned to France in 1654, and was restless; he was back in Canada in 1655; and in 1657 accompanied a party of Jesuits and Huron Indians into the Onondaga country. All the Hurons were slaughtered; the Frenchmen might have lost their lives except for this Indian-minded lad whom they at first despised. He offered his deceptive Onondaga allies a great feast, and understanding that Indian etiquette forbade them to refuse anything, he stuffed them until they fell asleep. Then he tied a pig with a bell around its neck to the gate of the fort, to maintain the illusion of activity there, and led the French party to safety in the night.

In those days the roving Mohawk warriors surrounded the French settlements on the St. Lawrence and cut them off from the interior fur trade. Radisson, with his brother-in-law, De Groseille, accompanied an expedition up the Ottawa; attacked by Mohawks, all but these two turned tail and fled. Radisson and his brother-in-law paddled on into unknown regions, portaging over to Lake Nipissing, made famous in our day by the Dionne quintuplets, and down to Georgian Bay. Probably on that expedition he reached the Mississippi, years before Joliet and Marquette, or LaSalle.

That Electric Light Cord

It seems to me there is nothing quite
So exasperatingly, fatiguingly elusive
As the insignificant, mocking little pull-cord of a light. . . .
But the facts are all conclusive,
When you stand there in the empty dark just groping,
Fanning convulsively with your arm and hoping
To contact finally with a wisp of waving string,
That the all-powerful, blasted thing
Is never in its designated place . . .
Somehow within a moment it is able to efface
Itself without a trace.
If ever you felt superiority
It will simmer to mediocrity, to inferiority,
Before the dictatorial might
Of the string of a light.
No matter how much you cuss and fumble
In the dark a string can make your humble.
—S. T. Herrick.

"BRINGING IN THE SHEAVES"
KNOWLES SHAW

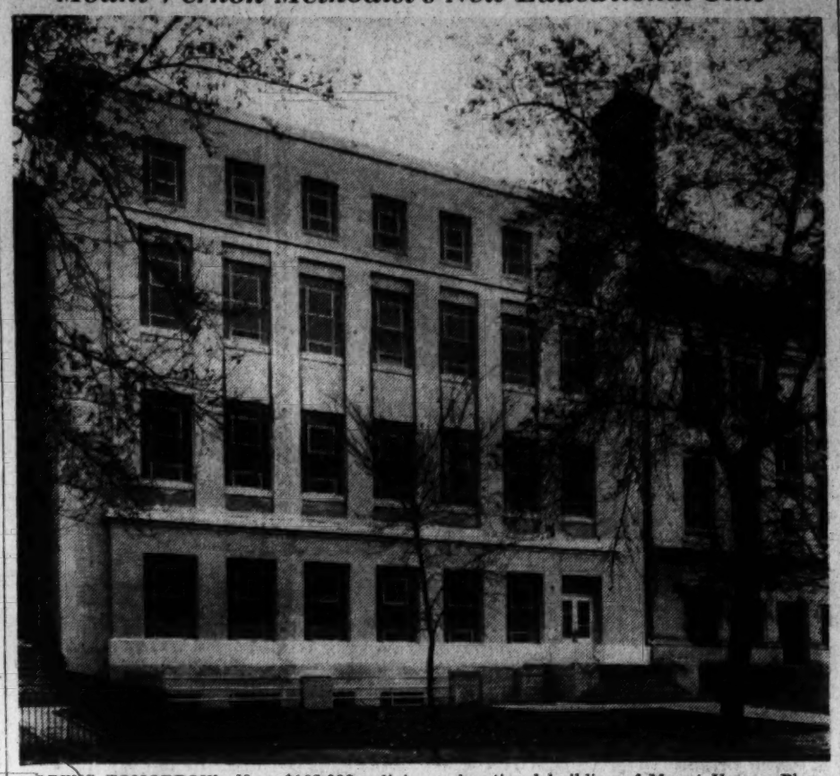

Sowing in the morning, sowing seeds of kindness,
Sowing in the noontide and the dewy eve;
Waiting for the harvest and the time of reaping,
We shall come rejoicing, bringing in the sheaves.

This popular harvest hymn was inspired by the 126th psalm "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy . . . he that goeth forth and weepeth bearing precious seed shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."

Visiting Nurses To Have Chic Becoming Hats

DURING her World War nursing days, the Army equipped Gertrude Bowling with a hat which apparently dated back to the previous century. Her friends would hoot rudely at it when she went to the Riviera on leave. But her superior, a lantern-jawed lady with convictions, was of the opinion that becomingness is not essential to a uniform. So ever since Miss Bowling became director of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society here she's done what she could to improve the girls' outfits. "It must have been a reaction," she says, "but I hated to buy those flat sailor hats. Now the girls can select their own headgear, so long as they stick to brims and tailored bands. I don't think they should look like Robin Hoods, but there's no reason to disfigure them just because they're nurses. Gone also are the black ribbed stockings and the old-lady shoes of the earlier uniform.

Gertrude Bowling

Don't get the impression, however, that the I. V. N. S. consists of mere clotheshorses. All graduate nurses, they also are storehouses of information on the district which they serve; they are diplomats when persuading a family that a mental case requires institutional care; they are child psychologists, luring little boys from alley crap games to settlement house gymnasiums.

FASHION NOTE—The patriotic motif in accessories may be news but it certainly isn't new. A Washington girl rooted through some of her mother's jewelry recently and found a sparkling American flag pin similar to the novelties on sale now. When anyone asks her, "New pin?" she merely snaps it open to reveal the motto inscribed therein: "To Hell With Spain—Remember the Maine."

Two women who have an apartment in Southwest Washington experimented during the summer with what proved to be a highly successful vacation idea. They invited their maid—a white woman who lives in their community—and her three small children to accompany them to the World's Fair. All five of them spent a week-end at the Taft Hotel and did the town in style. The tale has a sequel, for on their return one of the friends described the experience at a club meeting. Soon afterward a member who heard her talk obtained from her the name of another family in the community, and entertained them at dinner to celebrate her birthday.

A man reporting to the local WPA office gave his name as Smith Peyton. The worker in charge looked through the files for his card but could not locate it. "We don't seem to have a record of you," she said. "You DID say 'Smith Peyton,' didn't you?" "Yes, ma'am," he assured her. "It used to be Peyton Smith but the Government changed it."

Try Baking Beets

Have you ever tried baking beets? This saves a lot of watching and the beets have a fine flavor. Wash the beets and trim, leaving an inch stem on each to prevent bleeding. Bake in a moderate oven until soft when tested with a fork. Peel off the skins, slice the beets and season with salt, pepper, a dash of sugar and butter.

The hand-stitched gloves came from New Zealand, while the British pipe is of Algerian briar, the military brush set from Ceylon. The Post Fashion Editor.

THE PROBLEM of what the fashionable man is going to do now that foreign imports grow scarcer is both a fascinating and a baffling subject. The men themselves are finally showing a little concern over whether they are to get the quality wools, silks and leathers which have in the past been exclusively imported from the British Empire.

MARSHALL ADAMS

The British navy has heretofore been the greatest factor in insuring a steady flow of Dominion raw materials to the British Isles—where the bulk of smart men's wear has been produced. Just how crippled this importation actually is and what the immediate future for men's luxury fashions is have been answered by a Washington haberdashery which has long imported men's fashions from all corners of the globe. Their purchases have been made so far in advance that they are intended for promotions in the fall of 1941.

Price Rise Not Large

The status is this—that until these imports are completely exhausted, the fine British tweeds, etc., will continue to be bought, at prices not much higher than they have formerly been. There is a Dominion 20 per cent war tax for air-raid and marine insurance, but since purchases were made before the start of the blitzkrieg in April and since, being bought direct, there is no "middle man" "to eat up profits, the Washington prices are actually cheaper than those of Hamilton, Bermuda, where most Americans look for British "bargains."

The plucky British are still getting their goods "through" into New York's musty old warehouse receiving districts. Here is a line-up of the British products still available, though in limited quantities now.

FROM CHINA come bristles from the wild or semiwild bear for Kent of London brushes—the world's best. Siberia and Russia also produce these bristles, all refined in England. Satinwood brush handles come from Ceylon and the East and West Indies; ebony, also used in handles, comes from the East Indies.

FROM SOUTH AFRICA come goat skins used in the British manufacture of the world's finest leather accessories. Other leathers are brought to England for tanning from the Galapagos Islands, Iguana and the Argentine. Pecaries (pigskin) come from Paraguay, buck from China, sheep from New Zealand and crocodile from Brazil. To show how farstretching is the still long-arm of the British navy, raw materials needed for English tanning come from Mangrove, Central America, India and South Africa.

FROM ASIA MINOR come some of Britain's finest woolens which Scottish mills translate into the world's most celebrated tweeds. Asia Minor and South Africa produce angora goat, Northwest India, the Kashmir goat for cashmere sweaters and socks, the Peruvian and Chilean Andes the rare wild Vicuna llama, Australia, the Merino sheep which makes that wondrous soft lamb's wool for socks, and from the Chinese Bacterian camel, the camels-hair which makes robes, coats, etc.

FROM INDIA comes the fine silk scarves and Choppah handkerchiefs printed and tie dyed in the ancient manner by the natives, while from Algeria comes shell-briar, and from Corsica, rootbriar for the world's luxury pipes. Also from another part of Great Britain's empire come Scotch Aberdeen steer horn for shoehorns, bottle openers, etc. All in all, a sizable array of produce which the man of elegant tastes must soon replace with domestic fineries—which will certainly not be lacking.

Develop Your Potentialities

A REVEALING experience to take stock of yourself, ask that reflection in your mirror, "Just what sort of person really am I?"

In our hearts we all have a vision of the woman we'd like to be—the girl whose date book is never empty, the wife whose husband brags about her at stag dinners, the mother whose children rush to greet her after school.

But just how close do we come to being this luminous woman? That we often falter, that we are apt to let life defeat us, Fannie Hurst, understanding woman author of "Lummox" and "Four Daughters," knows well.

Her own experience has been deep and wide—and from it she has written the arresting booklet, "Today Is Ladies' Day." In it she urges women to stand up and start fighting, to get out and be that glamorous person we hold as our ideal. "Make no mistake," she says, "frustration and defeat, realization and success are more with in the command of the individual than nine out of ten of us realize."

Do you sit at home wishing men liked you, envying other girls their popularity? You can create "likability" in yourself by building the various components "just as surely as the parts of an automobile, when harmoniously assembled, will create a going concern of a vehicle."

Or do you feel that something has slipped out of your marriage, that all isn't the golden dream you visualized when you said "I do?" Perfect marriages don't merely happen, Fannie Hurst has found. "They need to be babied . . . analyzed, worked out."

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Today Is Ladies' Day," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Meat Loaf With Potato Frosting

PRETTY as a picture and as stalwart as a great oak is a meat loaf with potato frosting. A meat loaf is a dish that plays easy on the budget. Top it with a frosting of mashed potatoes and put it on your best silver platter and it is a dish that you will dare serve to your husband's boss or to your best beau. Make it this way:

Meat Loaf With Potato Frosting

Combine 1 pound of beef ground (¼ may be pork), with 1 egg yolk, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 tablespoons bread crumb, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon salt, and ½ teaspoon onion juice. Wrap the loaf in waxed paper and place it in a pan. Bake it in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 1 hour. Pour over it and baste it with vegetable stock or tomato juice.

Place the loaf when baked on a heat proof platter and cover the top and sides with hot mashed potatoes, about 4 cups. Make diagonal ridges in the top with a knife and insert alternate strips of cooked carrot and green pepper. Pour over all ¼ cup melted butter and bake in a hot oven until light brown. Garnish with cooked peas and whole onions.

Reader Says Only Smugly Protected (And Ignorant) Would Hold Instinct Provides Emotional Control

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In The Post of October 16, I was interested to see you had stirred up quite a controversy by your advice to an unwed mother not to marry the father of her child if she didn't love and respect him. It is not my purpose to take sides in this discussion. Rather, my comment is directed at certain unfounded statements made by one of your dissenting correspondents, who signs herself, "Mrs. D. V. S."

In the second paragraph of her letter, she says: "No girl in the world (motherless or not), except one who is mentally unbalanced, needs to be told the facts of life. Instinct supplies such knowledge. She cannot excuse herself on the ground of ignorance." (It seems the girl, who was orphaned at 12, had explained she knew very little about sex, having no one to talk with confidentially about the facts of life.)

This statement of Mrs. D. V. S., I am sorry to say, reflects the old, careless, self-satisfied viewpoint of the woman who has been lucky, or so carefully guarded that she had no opportunity to meet temptation. To say that instinct supplies self-protective knowledge of sex is ridiculous; just as ridiculous as it would be to say that instinct should stay a 3-year-old child from stepping in front of a speeding car. The urge to reproduce (which we term "sex") is fundamental as a functional drive in all forms of life—and the means of holding it in check, on the human level, are those that come from constant training.

If Mrs. D. V. S. could come in contact with the thousands of adolescents who enter our high schools every year, and could know from this contact their utter ignorance of sex hygiene, she might withdraw her statement. To say that "knowledge of the facts of life is instinctive," is to say that the hundreds of thousands of foolish boys and girls who become illegitimate parents (to their sorrow), and the millions who acquire social diseases, have done so deliberately and callously—with malice aforethought, as it were. Year after year, the number of babies born out of wedlock increases, and so does the ratio of venereal infection.

No, Mrs. D. V. S., the girl is not so much to blame as you think. If you will check the facts and figures, you will find that the responsibility lies elsewhere. How many of your friends who are parents have an adequate knowledge of either the physiology or hygiene of reproduction? How many of those who possess this knowledge (and their small number would astound you) are trying indefatigably to give it to their children?

Any honest survey of honest answers to these two questions will certainly put the blame for adolescent sex tragedies on IGNORANCE! Ignorance on the part of both parents and children. As you love the truth, Mrs. D. V. S., do not try to excuse the adults at the expense of the youngsters. Track down and destroy that deadly enemy of human happiness namely, Ignorance! Very truly yours, D. M. B.

82-Year-Old Man Gives an Opinion

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It may interest you to know that one old man, 82 years old, reads your column with much interest, although he no longer has any love or domestic problems to worry him. I am that man. I read The Post very thoroughly, commencing with the war news, continuing on through the editorials and political columnists and ending with your column, which I find very interesting. Each day, I wonder what the problem will be and how you will treat it. I am constantly amazed that there can be so many different types of problems (truly your column is an "eye-opener" on life), and your handling of these problems is always most intelligent.

I was especially interested in the problem of the girl, "Unhappy Eighteen," who had a baby out of wedlock and who refuses to marry the father. I think you handled this case extremely well, but one suggestion occurs to me—Why not advise the girl to marry and give her son his father's name? Then, if she cannot live happily in the marriage, she may obtain a divorce later on. It seems to me they should do what they can, while there is still time, to remove the stigma of bastardy from their son's life. Otherwise, it will follow him to the grave.

Incidentally, a business man friend of mine (head of a big banking institution), told me recently that he gets his mind off of business at night by reading good books. He asked me if I had read any of David Grayson's books. Until then, I hadn't. But now I am finding them very interesting and different from most books. Thought you might appreciate this information. Yours very truly,

H. M.

Who Says Women Invented Marriage?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For once, I can't understand you. All these years, I've been reading your columns with absorbed interest, seeing eye-to eye with you on your analyses of human problems. But how can you say, as you did in your column of October 17, that marriage is a woman-made institution?

I'm married. I dearly love my husband, and I find many compensating joys for the tedium of housekeeping. But I gather, from what you say, that I might lose my husband if I relaxed my interest in pleasing him, and that it would be my fault. Well, I won't lose him; don't worry, because I won't relax my interest. But only because I want him, not because I think marriage is to my special benefit.

In modern marriage, a woman helps pay the bills. She goes to offices, she cooks the meals (or hires a cook out of her own earnings), she bears children, she denies herself clothes that she took for granted in her unwed days—and what does "her man" contribute? His salary and his dear presence. The comforts of modern marriage are man's. Why shouldn't a woman expect fidelity in return for her total investment in the partnership?

MRS. J. F. F.

It's All a Mistake; We're in Agreement

DEAR MRS. J. F. F.: But we aren't in disagreement. What I actually said (which you here indorse, with indignant emphasis), was that woman is insistently monogamous, where marriage is concerned, whereas man is by instinct polygamous—although gradually being "civilized" to woman's viewpoint. We were discussing emotional trends, rather than social institutions. Sorry I almost lost your vote of confidence. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Women's Page.

Swimming Is Effective Exercise To Develop Bust, Tone Muscles

By Ida Jean Kain

WHAT used to be the fashionable boyish form is now merely a flat chest—and no girl wants to be flat-chested!

If this is your problem, stop thinking of the solution as a specific one. There is no magic lotion or ointment that will make the slightest improvement. Not even specific calisthenics can be guaranteed to beautify this contour. To be effective, the measures must be much more general, for body tone, vitality, posture, and sometimes weight, are the factors to be reckoned with.

You might not suppose that getting out and walking for an hour a day could possibly affect the bust measurement. But vitality, muscle tone and, to some extent, posture, depend on a certain amount of regular out-door exercise.

Swimming Is Good

If you really want a good figure go to your Y. W. C. A. and swim regularly this winter. Swimming is a marvelous conditioner—it not only affords the exercise for general muscle tone, but the cool water acts as a stimulant to improve circulation and skin tone.

Inasmuch as they tend to fill out the chest and to straighten rounded shoulders, specific exercises are a great help. The calisthenics should not be restricted, however, to the chest and shoulders. You also need stretching, twisting and bending—a program of all-around exercise that will arouse the circulation and act as a general tonic.

If you are in a more or less run-down condition, it will take a little time to build up your figure, for you must go at the business of increasing your vitality—and you must do it in a thorough manner. You will need more outdoor exercise to improve the assimilation, and a better diet which includes more milk, eggs and other nourishing foods and perhaps less of the rich foods. One of the results of such a program will be a much lovelier figure.

Posture Has Final Say

Even then you may not have a full bosom, for glands and ancestors figure in that. You may have inherited a slight frame and a naturally small bust, but with weight that is normal for your structure, excellent body tone and a proud posture, you won't be feeling sorry for yourself!

Your posture always has the final say about the figure you cut. When you let your head poke forward the shoulders are rounded and you have a shallow chest. But when you hold your head high the shoulders hang right and the chest is naturally lifted.

After you have done everything else—brought your vitality up to par, and your weight to normal and acquired a superb posture—and you still lack the fashionably full bosom, you can wear a pair of "gay deceivers."

Dumbarton Oaks Research Library Opens on the Blisses' Estate

Scores of Notables From Social and Educational Ranks Attend Preview Of Collection at Brilliant Gathering

By Hope Ridings Miller

ONE OF THE MOST distinguished gatherings in Washington this season had a preview of an unusual library and art collection last night given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss in their Georgetown home. The occasion was the inauguration of the Dumbarton Oaks Research Library and Collection, housed in two recently completed buildings adjoining the Bliss residence.

Scores of notables from out of town and a sizable section of social and official Washington were on hand to enjoy the event.

The exhibition is beautifully arranged and carefully thought out, and guests commented on the fact that both the library and the collection comprise one of the most complete displays of medieval culture in this country.

Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Bliss were Dr. James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard, and Mrs. Conant, who, like many others in the company, came to Washington especially for the event. Mrs. Bliss was gowned in mauve Chinese brocade, fashioned with puffed sleeves, a fitted bodice and a full skirt. A corsage of orchids accented her ensemble.

As is usually the case when a topflight function goes on the calendar many of the guests last evening came on from dinner parties. Some of the notables from out of town were entertained at a dinner at the 1925 F Street Club, while another group was feted at the Carlton. Miss Mabel T. Boardman was a dinner hostess at her home, and Mrs. Truxtun Beale also had guests to dinner.

Lady Palmer, of London, who recently arrived in this country, was in the dinner company entertained by the British Charge d'Affaires and Mrs. Nevile Butler, whom she is visiting. Others dining with the Butlers included the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard Casey, and Gaillard Lapsley, an American and a former Don at Trinity College, Cambridge, where the Butlers met him.

Lady Lindsay came down from New York to attend the reception. She is a house guest of Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting, who has opened her home here for the winter. The Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz were among guests as were the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun, the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, and the Canadian Minister, Loring Christie.

Dr. Alexis Carrel Among Those Present

The Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel de Fryre y Santander, chatted with the Yugoslav Minister and Mme. Fotitch, as the three made a tour of the library. The Greek Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulos had a word—a very complimentary one—for all the objects of art, particularly those of Byzantine persuasion. Devoting as much attention to looking over the books as in surveying the art collection was the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki.

A center of much attention was Dr. Alexis Carrel, another on the long list of notables who came to town especially for the reception. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, of Boston, were there also; as were Miss Eileen Tone, of New York, and President John Stuart Bryan of William and Mary College.

Still others seen in the throng were Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett, Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles, Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, Mrs. Arthur Woods, the Misses Anne and Mary Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Brien.

Many Notables From Out of Town

Mrs. Vernon Kellogg and her daughter, Miss Jean Kellogg, were being welcomed back to Washington by friends on all sides. Mrs. Cordell Hull arrived with Mrs. J. Butler Wright. Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed were among those present, as were Mr. and Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, David Finley, director of the Mellon Art Gallery, and Gen. and Mrs. William Crozier.

Still other Washingtonians there included Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, president of Georgetown University; Mgr. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University; Duncan Phillips, director of the Phillips Memorial Gallery, and Mrs. Phillips, and John Ellerton Lodge, director of the Freer Gallery, and Mrs. Lodge.

From out of town came an outstanding group of college presidents, museum directors, curators, college professors and authorities on art, including President Harold Willis Dodds of Princeton; President Aurelia Henry Reinhardt of Mills College, California; Francis Henry Taylor, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art; William Milliken, director of the Cleveland Museum of Art; Edward Forbes, director of the Fogg Museum of Art at Harvard; George Edgell director of the Boston Museum of Art; Lawrence Roberts, director of the Brooklyn Art Museum, and Mrs. Roberts, and Prof. Henri Gregoire, who recently arrived in the United States from Belgium.

The library, on view for the first time last night, contains well over 16,000 volumes, and the collection of objects represents thirty years of interest in art on the port of Mr. and Mrs. Bliss. The display includes jewelry, textiles, sculpture, mosaics and carved metals of the late classical, early Christian and Byzantine periods.

Last evening's reception is only one event in connection with the inauguration of the library and collection. At sessions this morning, this afternoon, tomorrow morning and tomorrow afternoon four outstanding authorities on art of the period spanning the centuries from the fifth century to about 1500 A. D. will discuss aspects of the periods represented in the museum. Admission will be by invitation only.

Are Symposium Begins Today

This morning at 10:30 Prof. Henri Focillon of the College de France and Yale University will speak in French on "Pre-History and the Middle Ages." Prof. Michael Ivanovich Rostovtzeff of the Yale University faculty will discuss "The Near East in the Third and Fourth Centuries at 2:30 this afternoon.

Prof. Charles Rufus Morey of Princeton University will speak on "Early Medieval Art in the Eastern Empire" tomorrow morning, and "Byzantine Art in the West" will be the subject of Prof. Wilhelm Koehler's lecture tomorrow afternoon. Dr. Koehler is Marquand professor of art and archaeology at Princeton.

After tomorrow the museum will be open to the public on Mondays and Thursdays—under certain conditions. Application for admission must be made in writing; letters to be addressed to the curator of the Dumbarton Oaks Research Library and Collection at 1703 Thirty second Street Northwest.

Ward—Murphy Wedding Date Set

The wedding of Miss Rosemarie Ward and Dr. Thomas W. Murphy will take place next Saturday at Sacred Heart Church.

Diplomats, Officials and Cave-Dwellers Among Those at Tea in Sulgrave Club; Mrs. Williams Gives Dinner for Deb

Dr. Fernando de los Rios, former Spanish Ambassador to this country, is in Washington and is at the Willard. Since the fall of the Loyalist government the former envoy has been teaching at Columbia University in New York.

Yesterday Dr. de los Rios was guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga. Others in the company were the Mexican envoy, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, the Ambassador from Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Minister from Uruguay, Dr. Jose Richling; Dr. Luis Quintanilla, Minister Counselor of the Mexican Embassy; Dr. Pedro de Alba, of the Pan American Union, and, from the Cuban Embassy Staff, Dr. Jose Baron, Dr. Roberto Mendoza, Dr. Alberto Muxo and Dr. Raoul Herrera-Arango.

Starting promptly at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Miss Margaret Lansdowne, daughter of Mrs. John Caswell, was launched as a debutante on a wave of parties which will keep right on until late tomorrow, with hardly enough time to change costumes between each.

The first festivity in her honor was the tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Caswell. The party took place at the Sulgrave Club and was attended by diplomats, officials, and many cave-dwellers who have known the deb since babyhood.

The staid Sulgrave Club was transformed into a florist's dream. Large clusters of white chrysanthemums were massed against the walls and on pedestals, alternating with festoons of smilax. The long staircase was banked with ferns, which also massed about the lofty fireplace in the oval room. There the trio received.

The many bouquets sent pretty Peggy Lawnsdown were placed on small tables at either side of the fireplace, and in baskets on the floor. The tea table was centered with a long, low arrangement of white chrysanthemums and other white flowers with green foliage and smilax. Similar arrangements decorated the ballroom.

Traditional white had been chosen by the deb for her gown. Of taffeta, it was fashioned with a full, bouffant skirt, a bodice lightly quilted in gold, bracelet-length sleeves, and a V-neckline. A tiny stand-up collar completed the costume. Miss Lansdowne carried Mr. Caswell's bouquet, a muff of white orchids.

Mrs. Caswell Wears Stunning Frock

Her dark-haired mother, who has a flair for dramatic clothes, wore a floor-length gown of beige crepe with a cascade of beige and taupe ostrich feathers from the waist to the hem. She accented her ensemble with a corsage of purple orchids.

Miss Carryl Casselberry, of Dundee, Ill., who is week-ending with Miss Lansdowne, was among those assisting. The Washington debs in this group included Kitty Hill, Elizabeth Stewart-Richardson, Louise Stillwell, Sita Finkenstaedt, Laura Blair, Elizabeth Fish, Isabella Hagner, Anne Conyers Bryan, Margaret Tuckerman, Mary Lord Andrews and Elaine Darlington.

Alternating at the tea table were Mrs. Hiram Bingham, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, Mrs. L. W. Robert, jr., Mrs. William B. Mason, great-aunt of the debutante; Mrs. George T. Pettengill, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, Mrs. Randall Hagner, Mrs. Jasper DuBose, Mrs. William P. MacCracken and Mrs. Eldridge Jordan.

To Be Feted at Luncheon Today

Later in the evening Miss Lansdowne was guest of honor at a dinner given by Mrs. John R. Williams. She wore her debut frock and then went on with the party to the first of the Friday Supper Club dances.

Today Mrs. Jouett Shouse will entertain 26 young people at a buffet luncheon for Miss Lansdowne, and this afternoon Ralph Snowden Hill will give a cocktail party for her. Tonight, Mr. and Mrs. F. Moran McConihe are entertaining at dinner for Miss Lansdowne, later taking their party on to the Chevy Chase Club for dancing. Tomorrow the debutante and her guests plan to attend the Redskins football game after a small luncheon at the Caswell home.

Miss Lansdowne is the daughter of Lieut. Comdr. Zachary Lansdowne, who lost his life in the crash of the U. S. S. Shenandoah in 1925.

A number of other parties are being planned for the deb later in the season. Rear Admiral and Mrs. George T. Pettengill will give a dinner for her December 13, before the third of the Friday Supper Club dances, and Miss Nancy Leiter will entertain for her on December 21. As soon as Senhora de Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, returns from Brazil, she is planning to give a small dance for Miss Lansdowne.

Dr. Rowe Given Pan American Society Insignia

Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, was presented yesterday with the gold insignia of the Pan American Society, Frederick E. Hasler, president of the society, made the presentation. Members of the society, which has headquarters in New York, witnessed the ceremony.

Several ministers and ambassadors of the Latin-American republics attended the ceremony which took place in the patio of the Pan American Union Building.

In his presentation speech Mr. Hasler lauded Dr. Rowe's contributions to the cause of Pan American good will during his 20 years' service as director general of the Pan American Union.

Only four other Americans have received the gold insignia. They are former President Hoover, President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles.

The Pan American Society is a private organization devoted to the promotion of friendlier relations and better understanding between the American republics.

Mrs. Davies Fetes Wisconsin Friend

Mrs. Emlen Davies entertained at an informal luncheon for a few friends yesterday at her home on Massachusetts Avenue.

Guest of honor was Mrs. Frank Jacobs who is visiting here from Madison, Wis. Mrs. Jacobs is stopping at the Hay-Adams.

Kitchen Shower Given For Peggy Turner

Mrs. T. Ray Palmer, who will be one of the bridesmaids at the wedding of Miss Peggy Turner to Frank Heller on November 16, entertained with a kitchen shower for Miss Turner at her apartment on Hamilton Street Northwest, last evennig.

As Mrs. Palmer is a Kappa Delta Sorority sister of Miss Turner, the sorority colors and symbols were used for the party. The decorations of flowers and refreshments were in white and green. A large crepe paper white rose was placed in the center of the room to receive the many gifts received by the bride-to-be. White rose mints, a large cake with white rose decorations, white rose ice cream molds and diamond shaped cookies were served.

Friday Supper Club Dance Opens Season

Invitation List Pared Down By About 200

The number of those invited to subscribe considerably streamlined this year, the Friday Supper Club series got off to the season's start with a dance last night at the usual place, the Sulgrave Club.

With souvenirs of jam sessions, in the literal meaning of the word, at previous Supper Club affairs, the committee pared down the list by about 200. So there was plenty of room. Another innovation was a simpler menu, the money thus saved going to aid war relief.

High spot of the evening was the appearance of Miss Patricia Prochnik in her first program in Washington since signing up with Meyer Davis' orchestra. Her singing was received with great applause by her many friends among the dancers.

Mrs. George T. Pettengill, wife of the Commandant of the Navy Yard, entertained at a dinner beforehand for her niece, Miss Peggy Wagner. Mrs. John R. Williams, chairman of the Supper Club series, was hostess in honor of Miss Peggy Lansdowne.

Guests of Mrs. Williams included the Misses Carryl Casselberry, Kitty Hill, Betty Stewart-Richardson, Elaine Darlington, Sita Finkenstaedt, Louise Stillwell, Laura Blair, Nancy Leiter, and Mr. and Mrs. F. Moran McConihe.

Also entertaining at dinner before the dance was Mrs. William T. Mann. Her guests were Mr. and Mrs. Aldace Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Walter White, Mr. and Mrs. Gray Foster, Fred Roy and Dorsey Fisher.

Mackintoshes Dinner Hosts

Mr. and Mrs. Earl M. Mackintosh entertained at dinner in the Lounge Riviera, Hotel 2400, last evening in honor of Miss Mary Ellen Corby and Charles Channing, jr.

Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Bones, Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Bones, jr., Mr. and Mrs. George Calvert Bowie, Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Channing, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Corwin, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Dove, Mr. and Mrs. Hilleary Hoskinson.

Still others there included Mr. and Mrs. Raymond A. Heist, Mr. and Mrs. J. Thilman Hendrick, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard May, Mr. and Mrs. George Scharf, Miss Nancy Heiskell, Miss Dorothy Johnston, Miss Elizabeth McDowell, Miss Barbara Mace, Miss Joan Wiss, Calvert Bowie, jr., Edward Caster, Karl Corby, Clarence Dodge, jr., William Escavaille, Harry McGinniss, Frank Morse and Martin R. West.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

Piedmont Fox Hounds held the opening meet of the season yesterday morning at Grafton, the home of the Master of Hounds and Mrs. Archibald Cary Randolph near Upperville. About 10 o'clock those who planned to join the hunt arrived. White coated butlers passed sherry, port, hot coffee and biscuits around. Among those out were Mrs. George Garrett, Mrs. William Beverley Mason, jr., Mrs. Laurens Hamilton and Mrs. Newell Ward.

A great many parties in Warrenton this week have centered around Miss Anne Harrison Byrd, of Upper Brandon on the James River and James Keith, of Warrenton and Fairfax Court House, who will be married today.

Howze, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Scott Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. Melville Bearns, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Greene, Mrs. Taylor Keith, Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Many toasts were drunk from the old English silver tumblers that have been in the family for generations. Among those attending were John S. CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

JUST BEFORE Ambassador Kennedy left London on his current visit to the United States, he arranged with the State Department for a system of leaves to be rotated among the entire staff of the embassy in London. Thus Washington friends may hope to see some of these men within the near future, because most of them will come to the Capital at one time or another during meir time at home.

The details are now being worked out, but I understand Herschel V. Johnson, who succeeded Ray Atherton as counselor there, will probably be the first to get the coveted trip away from the Luftwaffe's playground. He is probably more at home in Washington than any other member of the present London staff, having taken an active part in the social life here during the four years he was chief of the Division of Mexican Affairs in the State Depaftment, from 1930 to 1934, when he went to London.

RUDOLF E. Schoenfeld is another who has many Washington ties, including a brother who lives here and a host of friends made during his tour at the department from 1932 to 1936. Then there is Vinton Chapin, who served as assistant to the Undersecretary of State from 1932 to 1936 and who used to live in the charming house in Foxhall Road which is now occupied by Robert Coe.

Col. Martin F. Scanlon, the Army's air attache in London, was in command of Bolling Field a few years ago, between stations in Rome and London. Unlike most of the embassy wives, Mrs. Scanlon has insisted on staying in London and her friends here hope she and her husband will take time out from the war long enough to get a change of scene in the Capital.

MRS. James E. Brown, jr., has been patiently waiting here for months at the home of her parents, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Alfred W. Johnson, in the hope that her husband would get permission to join her for a vacation. Mrs. Walton Butterwofth got wind of the plan on her way through Washington en route to New Orleans, where she was taking her children to visit their paternal grandparents, and decided to wait and see how soon her husband might be expected.

Theodore C. Achilles is another diplomat with so many friends in Washington that he may be expected to spend all the time he can here.

THE EXODUS from London includes members of the rapidly increasing staff of the British Embassy here. A late arrival at the embassy is Gordon Etherington-Smith, who was ordered to Washington on very short notice.

In the few days he had to get himself ready, he ordered some suits from his tailor, and they were to be finished the morning he was to sail. On his way to the station to take his boat train, he stopped by the tailor's shop, only to find the street roped off at the corner. The bobby on duty was sympathetic but firm. He understood the gentleman's difficulty, but a time bomb had planted itself just in front of the shop and no one was to be allowed inside the roped-off space until the bomb went off or was rendered harmless.

Mr. Etherington-Smith had nothing left to do but to sail with a meager wardrobe. There is a happy ending, however. The time bomb did not go off and he got his suits by the next ship.

I KNOW a woman who is recuperating in a hospital and who whiles away the time listening to the political speeches on the radio. She is recovering beautifully from her original illness, but she wakes up every morning as hoarse as a crow. Her doctor thinks it is a sympathetic ailment contracted from the poor, tired speakers.

Inter-American Group Leader Arrives Here

Underwood & Underwood

Senora de Martinez Guerrero (right) of Buenos Aires, chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, is shown with Miss Mary E. Winslow, United States representative, who met her in New York on her arrival, accompanied her on a trip to Detroit and returned to the Capital with her yesterday. The commission will convene November 11.

B Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

Uniting the women of the Americas in support of the democratic way of life will be the immediate objective of the Inter-American Commission of Women, Senora de Martinez Guerrero, the chairman, declared yesterday on arrival in Washington.

"The women of this hemisphere think and feel the same way," said Senora de Martinez Guerrero, who is the Argentine government's representative on the commission and was appointed chairman a year ago by the governing board of the Pan American Union. "The commission can be the implement to unify them in complete cooperation without distinction of race or creed."

As one of two women members on the Argentine Action Committee formed last June to combat the Fifth Column, she is convinced that immediate action is imperative to unite the sentiment in this hemisphere.

The Fifth Column, or "Sixth Column," as it is sometimes referred to there, does not concern itself with pro-Nazi or pro-Fascist propaganda, she said. Instead, it spreads anti-British and anti-North America propaganda.

Senora de Martinez Guerrero, with Victoria Campo, noted writer is serving on the committee with 50 men. She has organized the women of her country—15,000 since June—into a band of propagandists for the democratic way of life and government. They distribute literature on the streets, hold meetings, address factory workers and speak over the radio.

Through the delegates to the meeting of the Inter-American Commission of Women at whose sessions she will preside here the week of November 11, Senora de Martinez Guerrero believes that similar work can be done throughout the American Republics awakening their citizens to an appreciation of the freedom they enjoy and a determination to stand together to preserve it. Both men and women must work toward this end, she asserted.

Asked as to the interchange of students in the various countries, she declared, "that is important but it is for the future; the other is immediate."

Another objective of the commission will be to urge that Spanish be made a compulsory subject in the schools of North America and English compulsory in the schools of the Latin-American countries.

A chic, attractive woman herself, Senora de Martinez Guernero thinks the women of North America "are delicious." She feels so much at home, she says and only the language reminds her that she is not in her own country.

Although the women of Argentina do not vote, there are many in the professions as teachers, lawyers, physicians and scientists, she says. There are also 3,000 charitable institutions, established and maintained by women.

Wednesday, Senora de Martinez Guerrero will address one of the provisional members' courses at the Junior League and Thursday she will visit Children's Hospital to see the volunteer work done there.

Her first address in this country was before the closing dinner of the National Council of Catholic Women in Detroit attended by 1,000 persons. She also spoke at a metting of the Detroit League of Women Voters Thursday.

She was met in New York on her arrival by Miss Mary E. Winslow, United States representative on the Inter-American Commission, who accompanied her to Detroit. Her daughter, Anna Rosa de Martinez Guerrero is with her as are Senorita Fernandez Biero, a noted painter, who will remain in this country some time, lecturing on art, and Senorita Magdalena Pena Salas, an attorney. The latter is commissioned by her government to inspect the penal institutions for women in this country.

Last night the visitors were guests at a dinner given by the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil. Among other social affairs on the calendar are the dinner being given in honor of the inter-American delegates Armistice night at the Washington Hotel by the Women's Joint Congressional Committee; the concert and reception at the Pan American Union November 12; a reception at the White House, where Mrs. Cordell Hull will receive them on November 13, and a tea at the headquarters of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Senora de Martinez Guerrero will speak in New Rochelle, N. Y., November 18, on a program with Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, and on November 25 at the Women's Centennial Congress in New York City.

Lafayette School Celebrates Halloween With Mothers,' Children's Luncheon

HALLOWEEN CAME a day early at Lafayette School this year and was celebrated with the annual mothers' and children's luncheon.

Mrs. Leslie H. Whitten, chairman of ways and means for the Parent-Teacher Association, was in charge of arrangements in which Miss Margaret Pepper, the principal, and all the members cooperated. The success of the party—that's what it was with all the trimmings—may be judged from the fact that 615 children and 280 mothers were served and the net proceeds amounted to $244 plus a happy time for everybody.

The children were served first from long tables arranged down two corridors. Mrs. Fulton R. Gordon was in charge of one and Mrs. Robert L. Cochran of the other.

The 25 mothers who assisted as waitresses, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Scott Flippin, wore Halloween aprons. All of the decorations were in Halloween colors and designs. There was even a goblin face made of cottage cheese.

Eight kinds of sandwiches, nut bread and home-made cakes, milk and chocolate milk were included on the menu, at 5 cents per item.

The children, from kindergarten up, had their nickels ready as they passed down the line and "shopped" with care and discrimination for the kind of sandwiches and cakes they liked best.

After they had been served the mothers and teachers had their party in the auditorium, seated at a great U-shaped table. There were placards bearing the names of the various teachers, and mothers whose children were in the same rooms sat together.

Laura Arnold Flippin, dressed in a red, white and blue costume, stood beside the flag and sang "God Bless America."

Equipment for the school such as pictures, radios and phonographs for the different rooms, will be purchased with the proceeds.

SUPPLIES ARRIVE—Washington contributors to the shipload of sheets and other hospital supplies sent to Palestine by Hadassah, Women's Zionist organization, last spring, will be happy to learn that they have arrived after a long sea voyage via Cape Horn.

The local chapter is now collecting blankets for Hadassah institutions in Palestine. Mrs. G. I. Kass has been appointed chairman of blankets to work in conjunction with Mrs. B. I. Wilner, chairman of Palestine supplies. Mrs. Robert J. Rothstein gave the first blanket.

The need is great because of the influx of refugees from Europe. Moreover Hadassah, which functions as the Red Cross of Palestine, is trying to provide supplies for possible extension of the war in the Near East. It has already placed all its hospitals and clinics at the disposal of the British government in case of war.

Hadassah women also sew and knit for the refugees and other needy persons in Palestine. Mrs. Philip Cooper is chairman for materials and instruction.

TIME FOR DUES—Cards have gone out, announcing the fall meeting of the First Needlework Guild of Washington on Friday at the new headquarters, 1702 Rhode Island Avenue. The fact that dues are due was not included in the notice but Mrs. L. W. Eugster, the treasurer, 3620 Macomb Street, is receiving them from the members just the same.

Mrs. William E. Safford is president and Mrs. William Wheatley, corresponding secretary of the organization, which was formed many years ago and functions under the wing of the National Cathedral. It distributes only new garments and gives them directly where cases of need are reported.

VISIT GADSBY'S—The Children of the American Revolution who helped restore some of the rooms in historic Gadsby's Tavern, in Alexandria, are now enjoying visits there. The Dick Anderson Society held its meeting there a week ago and had members from the Fredericksburg Society, Keystone Society of the District and the Gov. Richard Bennet Society of Montgomery County as its guests. Mrs. Robert Reese took them all on a tour of the tavern.

Woollcott Calls Willkie 'Mr. X.'

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Alexander Woollcott, writer and commentator, personally engaging the facilities of Station WABC in New York, tonight said he would vote for President Roosevelt, because "Roosevelt is hated by a class something like the 'Cliveden set' of England."

On other stations of the Columbia Broadcasting System the program was sponsored by the Democratic National Committee.

"I like the company in which I find myself this election," said Woolcott. "Even if I were able to believe all the good things . . . Mr. Willkie . . . has said, I would find it uncomfortable to be walking to the polls arm in arm with John L. Lewis, Father Coughlin and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. Yes, and with every pro-Nazi from coast to coast.

"As an alternative to a Democratic candidate of great experience and courage, the Republicans offer us Mr. X—an unknown quantity. As that once sagacious politician, Al Smith, used to say: 'Let's look at the record.' All right, let's look at Mr. Willkie's record. A blank. A blank, my Lord . . .

"The dictator we don't want here is Adolf Hitler. That's why I'm voting for Roosevelt."

Novelist Scoffs at 'Dictator' Charge

Madison, Wis., Nov. 1 (AP).—Sinclair Lewis, author of a novel about dictatorship in America, declared in a radio address tonight that there was "no man in the world less likely to want, or to be able, to become a dictator" than President Roosevelt.

"It should be obvious even to politicians that if he (Roosevelt) wanted to be a dictator, he would not have to sit back and let this election, which just might throw him out of power, go on peacefully," he said.

Lewis, part-time lecturer in the English department of the University of Wisconsin, announced a few days ago he would support President Roosevelt for reelection.

Church of the Week

St. Paul's to Honor S. A. Leech, H. M. Forker, Music Leaders

20 YEARS AT ST. PAUL'S—Samuel A. Leech (left) and Harry M. Forker, will mark 20 years as organist and soloist, respectively, at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, near Washington Circle

By Robert Tate Allan

The congregation of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, near Washington Circle, on November 14 will honor Samuel A. Leech and Harry M. Forker for two decades of musical service there.

Dr. McCallum

The testimonial will be in the nature of a parish party for Leech and Forker, church choir director-organist and bass soloist, respectively, who began those duties just a few weeks apart in 1920.

While Leech began as organist at that time, his connection with St. Paul's goes back much farther—to the days when, as a member of the choir, he sang a solo at the consecration ceremonies for the late Bishop Alfred Harding in 1909.

One of the satisfactions of his career at St. Paul's, the organist said yesterday, has been aiding a number of "his boys" who developed into accomplished singers.

"Pupils" Made Good

Raymond Asserson, who has sung in light opera, symphony orchestras, and on the radio, is a product of St. Paul's choir, as are John Sikken, well-known local thespian; Richard Turner and others. William Dulin, who once sang in the choir, is a capable local organist.

St. Paul's choir of men and boys, organized about 50 years ago, is one of the oldest such groups in the city, and was one of the first vested choirs here. The parish gives annual awards to the choir boys. Recently honored were Robert O'Neill, general excellence medal; William Hoover, attentiveness and deportment medal, and Richard Gravely, highest musical ability medal.

Leech said yesterday that among the high spots of his years at St. Paul's was the dedication of the new organ in 1934 and the organ console dedication in 1939. The total cost of the equipment was more than $10,000. Each summer Leech accompanies the boys for a week's outing at Colonial Beach.

Diamond Jubilee Near

St. Paul's Parish, located at 917 Twenty-third Street Northwest, and which in October, 1941, will celebrate its diamond jubilee, has had many distinguished men and women affiliated with it, among them the late H. L. Rust, sr., for many years senior warden and active worker in the Washington Cathedral enterprise.

His successor as senior warden is Thomas H. Taliaferro, dean of the faculty at American University and long-time member of St. Paul's. Other vestrymen are George B. Hooker, junior warden; Wales H. Jack, treasurer; Maj. Gen. Walter C. Baker, chief of Chemical Warfare, U. S. A.; William B. Sinnott, Harry W. Starr, Lamar D. Munroe and Col. Harry F. Cunningham.

Among other organizations and leaders are the Altar Guild, Mrs. George A. Randolph, president; church school, L. J. Prendergast, superintendent, and the Junior Auxiliary, Mrs. Nagel Haskin, president.

World War Chaplain

The Rev. Arlington A. McCallum, who came to St. Paul's as rector in 1924 from St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Lebanon, Pa., did his theological work at Seabury-Western Seminary, Minneapolis, and at one time was chaplain of the University of Minnesota.

He served in the World War as chaplain of the Rainbow Division, of which he is now local chaplain. He recently served as chaplain in the 260th Coast Artillery during the First Army maneuvers in New York.

He and Mrs. McCallum have four children. One, Janet, was recently married to the Rev. Robert Kell, rector of Anacostia Parish; Dougall is a student at Maryland University; Margaret attends Wheelock School in Boston, and Mary is a student at Woodrow Wilson High School.

Universalist Program

All Souls' Sunday will be celebrated tomorrow at the Universalist National Memorial Church, where Dr. Seth Rogers Brooks, pastor, will speak at 11 a. m. on "Whose Music Is the Gladness of the World," and conduct the Holy Communion. The adult class will be led by Mrs. Brooks. The church school will also meet at 10 a. m., and the Young People's Christian Union meeting will be at 7 p. m.

Dr. McCartney to Speak

"The Time Is Later Than You Think" will be Dr. Albert J. McCartney's sermon theme for tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, as a "Day of Appreciation" is celebrated for the recently finished church improvements.

Rituals Mark All Saints Day In District

Holy Communion, Masses Held Throughout City

Masses in Catholic churches, Holy Communion in Protestant churches and other services yesterday commemorated All Saints' Day—honoring saints without any special feast days.

Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, rector of Epiphany Episcopal Church and Senate chaplain, conducted a Holy Communion service in the morning, and in his sermon paid tribute to 80 departed members and friends of the parish, including the late Senator William Borah.

Borah, while not affiliated with Epiphany Church, showed much interest in it, recalled Dr. Phillips, citing their close friendship.

Worshipers of St. John's Episcopal Church attended Holy Communion in the morning, and later in the day gathered at St. John's Orphanage, 1922 F Street Northwest, to help celebrate its seventieth birthday with a reception, open house and tea.

Mrs. J. S. Flanery, president of the ladies' board of the home, received with Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn, wife of St. John's rector, and Miss Mary H. Lewis, home superintendent.

Among the other guests were Dr. Glenn, Coleman Jennings, Community Chest president, and Lynch Luquer and Harry Grant, home trustees. Those who poured included Mrs. A. B. Houghton, wife of the former Ambassador to Great Britain, Mrs. Walter Heiberg and others.

The Protestant observance of All Saints' Day also was centered at St. Thomas', worship place of President Roosevelt; St. Paul's, near Washington Circle; St. Agnes', St. Columba's, the Washington Cathedral and in additional Episcopal churches.

Services were held in all Catholic churches, which today will celebrate All Souls' Day, when mass will be said for the souls in purgatory.

Inland Naval Reserves Given 'Stand-By' Order

Great Lakes, Ill., Nov. 1. (AP).—A spokesman for the Great Lakes naval training station said tonight the unit had received "stand by" orders from the Navy Department for all training vessels in the ninth naval reserve district, which includes 13 States.

He declined comment when asked if the training ships, about 20 in number, would be ordered to Atlantic ports shortly for duty as patrol boats, stating that no definite information was available. The spokesman said additional details would be announced tomorrow.

The unit's training ships include four sub-chasers, 110-foot boats from St. Louis, Milwaukee, Peoria, Ill., and Green Bay, Wis., about 10 or 12 yacht patrol boats, which are 75-foot cutters, and three gunboats.

Drug Saved Four From 'Chronic Pneumonia'

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—Sulfapyridine brought about the recovery of four persons suffering from "chronic pneumonia" in the first reported use of the drug for this disease, the Journal of the American Medical Association said today.

Dr. Saul Solomon, of New York, who made the report, said that although the results were "still inconclusive" sulfapyridine was the "most promising" treatment yet advanced for the lung infection, which causes from 1 to 3 per cent of all adult cases of acute pneumonia.

The disease, known as chronic friedlander pneumonia, is caused by a different kind of bacillus than the usual pneumococcus germ and has both an acute and chronic stage, the latter lasting months or years.

Retreat League Hears Shrine Director

Memorial Mass Scheduled Tomorrow For Fr. McDonnell

Christians' failure to set a good moral example for those outside the church hinders the spread of Christ's message, the Rev. John J. Reilly, new director of the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University, declared yesterday.

Father Reilly addressed the first Friday luncheon of the Washington Section, League of Laymen's Retreats, at the Willard Hotel, where plans were announced for tomorrow's annual memorial mass for the Rev. Frances Perkins' Chauffeur Accused Bath, Me., Nov. 1 (AP).—A warrant was issued in Municipal Court today charging William J. Delaney, of Arlington, Va., chauffeur for Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, with reckless driving.

Miss Perkins was shaken but, like the others involved, not injured.

Miss Perkins said she was "very much surprised" at the turn of events and declared she had told Delaney to report to Bath authorities at once.

The warrant was issued at the request of State Highway Patrolman Harry L. Thompson.

D. C. Hit-Run Killer Faces Life Sentence

Nestlerode Found Guilty; Verdict First Of Its Kind Here

Convicted of killing two persons as he sped through traffic last June 22, Richard S. Nestlerode, 27, last night faced a maximum prison sentence of life.

Nestlerode was convicted of manslaughter for running over and fatally injuring Mrs. Edna Mitchell, 34, colored. The maximum penalty is 15 years.

For killing Joseph Nappon, 57, in the course of his 65-mile-an-hour flight from the scene of the first accident, Nestlerode was convicted of second degree murder, for which the penalty is 20 years to life imprisonment.

A District Court jury deliberated an hour and 35 minutes before handing up the verdicts to Justice James W. Morris.

Nestlerode was the first man ever prosecuted for murder here for an ordinary traffic death. District Attorney Edward M. Curran praised his assistants, Arthur B. Caldwell and Maurice McInerney for their handling of the case.

"They have performed a fine service to this community," said Curran. "Such a verdict will awaken the people of the District to the realization that careless, reckless and negligent operation of automobiles must not be tolerated."

The Government evidence showed that Nestlerode drank about half a pint of liquor before starting his ride. He attempted to show that he drank a pint and a half more, and testified that he was unconscious throughout the ride and did not regain his faculties until more than a day afterward.

Justice Morris, however, told the jurors that "drunkenness is not a defense."

Four Children Hurt In District Traffic

Four children were hurt, one of them critically, on Washington streets yesterday, while in nearby Maryland four District residents were injured in an automobile crash.

Kenneth Thompson, 4, of 1321 Orren Street Northeast, was the traffic victim most seriously hurt. After being struck by an automobile in the 1300 block of Neale Street Northeast, he was treated at Casualty Hospital for fractures of the skull and thigh.

Another 4-year-old, Thomas Davy, 731 Eleventh Street Northeast, suffered head injuries and bruises to the left leg when hit by an automobile in the 1100 block of H Street Northeast. He was treated as Casualty Hospital.

Thomas Mann, 10, 66 K Street Northwest, was treated at Sibley Hospital for injuries to the left side of the head after being struck while playing near his home.

Girl Is Struck

Ann M. Wells, 9, of 4418 Greenwich Parkway Northwest, was struck by an automobile in the 1600 block of Forty-fourth Street Northwest, and treated at Georgetown Hospital for contusions above the right eye and abrasions to the left knee.

A Washington woman was injured seriously and three companions were hurt when the automobile in which they were riding crashed against a culvert yesterday on the Baltimore Boulevard, near Laurel, Md.

Pinned in the wreckage half an hour, Mrs. Rowena Haje, of 940 New York Avenue Northwest, was extricated by Maryland State troopers. At University Hospital in Baltimore she was reported suffering from head injuries, a fractured right arm and fractures of both ankles.

Nelson Haje, 30, her husband; Mrs. Betty Zerega, 32, and her husband, David Zerega, 42, all of the New York Avenue address, were treated for arm and leg fractures. Police said Haje told them he was blinded by lights of an approaching automobile.

Central 'Y' Extends Drive For Members

Seeks 397 More To Attain 1,350 Goal by Thursday

With a total of 953 new members enrolled, through yesterday, the Central Young Men's Christian Association last night extended its current annual membership campaign, which was to have ended Monday, until next Thursday. Workers seek 397 more members. The goal is 1,350.

Results of the campaign thus far were announced last night at a meeting of campaign workers in the "Y" building, 1738 G Street Northwest. The meeting was featured by an address by "Bill" Werber, star third baseman of the Cincinnati Reds, who told of keeping in condition by training at the "Y" out of baseball season. The Y. M. C. A., he said, is important not only in conditioning a person physically, but mentally.

Stressing the importance of condition in succeeding in any line of endeavor, Werber said Jimmy Wilson, not regularly an active player, had been able to become the "hero of the World Series," in which he caught, after Lombardi, the regular catcher, had been injured.

Ray Michael, sports announcer and commentator of the National Broadcasting Co., introduced Werber. Leonard W. DeGast, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., announced that money paid in by new members will be refunded to them if they are called into military service. A membership in the "Y" here, he explained, is honored in Y. M. C. A.'s everywhere.

McCarran Ill, Unable to Hold D. C. Hearing

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, will not be able to hold hearings on the District reorganization bill passed by the House, it was learned yesterday, as he plans to return to Nevada to recover his health upon leaving Naval Hospital.

While employes in his office knew nothing of the disposition of the District legislation, they declared the Senator will not return to the Capitol after the recess. It was said that he is recuperating steadily.

Although prospects for favorable action on the House bill by the Senate before the expiration of the Seventy-sixth Congress are slim, Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, said he will urge that the Senate District Committee consider it as soon as Congress resumes quorum sessions.

It is expected that he will ask Chairman King to appoint a new chairman of the subcommittee of five to which the Kennedy bill was referred, in view of McCarran's inability to serve.

Two changes in District personnel may alter the attitude of the Commissioners toward the legislation, it was indicated, as the city heads awaited action by the Senate District Committee.

Since the measure was referred to the McCarran subcommittee, Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, chief critic of the legislation, died, and Elwood H. Seal, former corporation counsel and its principal sponsor at the District Building, resigned.

The Commissioners are on record as indorsing the House bill although they, with Maj. Donovan, questioned the claim that the reorganization would effect any municipal economy.

First Families Move Into Fort Dupont

Rents Range From $11 To $33, According To Tenant's Income

The vanguard of 326 families who will ultimately occupy the Alley Dwelling Authority's new low-cost housing development at Fort Dupont—Anacostia and Ridge Roads Southeast—moved into completed sections of the project yesterday. By nightfall, seven families were ensconced in their new quarters.

The dwellings are being made available as each group of houses is finished, John Ihlder, Alley Dwelling Authority chief, explained. With rents varying to fit individual income, prospective tenants may select anything from a one-room apartment to six-room house.

The project, which will cost $1,345,500, is expected to be completed within the next few months. A total of 767 applications have been received for the 326 units, Ihlder said.

The finished group of buildings contains 52 dwellings, of which 3 have been reserved for authority employes who must live on the property. Eighteen of the remaining 47 have been assigned and will be occupied by the end of next week, it was announced.

The family of Lawrence G. Mohler, unemployed former street railway worker, was the first to take up residence. The Mohlers have five children and occupy one of the six-room houses.

Rents range from $11 to $33 a month, according to the tenant's income. Applicats must now live in substandard quarters, must have been a resident of Washington for two years and must have an income of less than $1,321—unless there are three or more dependents

Archbishop Curley Backs Chest Drive

Prelate Sends Letter To Be Read Tomorrow in All Catholic Churches

Urging "the greatest possible generosity" in responding to the Community Chest appeal, the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Washington and Baltimore, has asked a special letter to be read at all masses here tomorrow.

Addressed to the clergy and laity of the Archdiocese of Washington, the letter follows:

"The Washington Community Chest campaign will take place from November 13 to November 26. The Catholics of Washington are so well aware of the benefits our charitable organizations and institutions have derived from participation in the Chest during the past 12 years that no special urging is needed to induce them to respond to this year's appeal with the greatest possible generosity.

"While our minds are filled with the tragic sufferings of the victims of war abroad, we must not be blind to the distress of the victims of poverty here at home. Rather the consciousness of the blessings which we ourselves enjoy in such times as these should spur us on to greater zeal in the fulfillment of our duty to our own people who are in need. Let our charity rise as a prayer to God that He may continue to bless us with His peace.

"In the past I have urged our people in making their contributions not to fail to designate our Catholic organizations as the recipients of at least a portion of their gift. This I would ask them to do again, in order that there may be some indication of the strength of the support that upholds our agencies of Catholic charity.

"Once more let me urge all to be as generous in their contribution as their means permit. Give in the name of Christ and in the spirit of Christmas Charity for the sake of Christ's poor."

"Wishing priests and laity God's choicest blessings, I am,

"Sincerely your in Christ,
"Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington."

Rothschilds, on Visit Here, Tell Of Eluding Gestapo by Minutes

ESCAPED THE GESTAPO—Dr. Walther Rothschild, former Berlin publisher, and his family, who have found true Liebestraum in America after many adventures in Germany and England. The picture was made at St. Moritz, Switzerland, in a happier day before Hitler's purges drove them from their native land. Left to right—Dr. Rothschild; Claudia, 20; Mrs. Rothschild; Maria, who was 16 yesterday

Adventures that might stump Superman have beset Dr. Walther Rothschild, former Berlin publisher, and his family since they slipped out of Germany 10 minutes ahead of the Gestapo, but now they can stretch out in bed and have lights at night.

Dr. and Mrs. Rothschild are visitfriends in Baltimore. Dr. Briefs, 4 Kenilworth Drive, North Chevy Chase, Md., and their daughters, Claudia, 20, and Maria, 16, are with friends in Baltimore. Dr. Briefs, now a professor at Georgetown University Law School, was associated with Dr. Rothschild in the publishing of the Manual of Politics and Government in Berlin prior to 1938.

Dr. Rothschild was prominent in a group in Germany which was advocating closer relations between Germany and England and through his activities became a suspect for the Gestapo.

Escaped by Accident

Dr. and Mrs. Rothschild escaped the fury of the secret police purely through accident. They had arranged to visit their daughters who were attending school in Switzerland and had secured the necessary credentials and permissions. They left their home on November 10, 1938, and started by train for Switzerland. Their train was the last one through and it was with difficulty that they managed to get past the border, even with their credentials in order.

Friends managed to inform them that 10 minutes after they left their home, the Gestapo agents arrived seeking Dr. Rothschild to place him in a concentration camp. The Rothschild family remained in Switzerland until friends managed to smuggle some of their belongings to them and they could arrange flight by plane to England.

Slept in Shelter

Arriving in England they were unfortunate enough to select Middlesex for a residence and within a short time were given three weeks to move, for the section had been declared a protected area. Dr. Rothschild was interned for three months while English officials checked on his antecedents and then was released with a clean bill of health.

Meanwhile, the family was visiting friends near London. They "slept for weeks and weeks in a bombproof shelter," Mrs. Rothschild explained yesterday as she sat in the North Chevy Chase home. "Americans cannot realize what has happened in London."

"We had just five minutes to pack and get out," she said, "when a delayed bomb fell outside the home where we were staying. The bomb weighed a thousand pounds and A. R. P. workers feared it might explode. Several days later they allowed us to go back for our belongings. The bomb still was there in a deep crater when we left. The English said it was a 'dud'."

Mrs. Rothschild paid tribute to the British people. "The shops on Oxford Street had all of their windows bombed out, but they had up signs, 'Business as Usual,' and the British people went shopping," she said.

Submarine Sighted

When they boarded a boat at Liverpool, the ship was held in the Irish Sea all day before it joined its convoy. The passengers did not know what was in the cargo. They boarded the ship after it was loaded and left at Quebec before work of unloading was started. "We went by way of Iceland and Greenland in a convoy of 24 ships. The radio operator said a submarine had been sighted, but it dived too quickly and they did not find it. When we reached Quebec it was the first time in years that we saw lights at night. It was wonderful."

Dr. Rothschild was loath to discuss political political subjects, but said the English do not expect America to come into the war.

"They do not need men," he said. This is a war of materiel and not of people. The English are determined to fight on until the war is won. They say they can lose all the battles, but in the end the British will win the war, even if they have to move to Canada."

He explained that the British believe they will be superior in the air if the United States continues to send planes, and that entry of the United States into the war would mean that America would concentrate its war materiel for its own use instead of sending it to England.

Nazi Germany is not the old Germany, he said, his voice breaking a bit. "In the last war my soul was German, but now it is no longer so."

Using School Land for Street Fought

Randle Highlands Citizens Object To Site Between Fairlawn and P

The Randle Highlands Citizens Association last night objected to the District Highway Department using land for a new street off P Street between Fairlawn Avenue and Eighteenth Street Southeast on the grounds that the District secured the land for school purposes by condemnation proceedings.

The regular meeting of the group was held at the Orr School, Twenty-second and Prout Streets Southeast.

"Unruly conduct" of Anacostia High School students on public buses was protested in a resolution adopted by the association.

Committee chairmen named at the meeting included C. H. Layne, membership; M. H. Clarke, schools; Frank Updike, highways; Eli Busada, lights; A. B. Hanson, laws and legislation; C. A. Barker, public reservations; J. F. Soresi, police and fire; H. M. Frazier, publicity; J. H. McCall, reception; A. W. Lee, zoning; O. W. Rickard, celebrations; Mrs. E. H. Lynham, auditor; A. W. Lee, bridge, and G. E. Pray, T. Paul Mudd and A. W. Lee, members of the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations.

Chillum Heights

David W. Gabelein was re-elected president of the Chillum Heights Citizens Association for the third term at a meeting held last night at the Keene School, Blair Road and Riggs Road Northeast.

Other officers reelected included O. P. Solem, vice president; Mrs. L. Jane Hayden, secretary; Mrs. M. S. Finan, financial secretary; William G. Lang, treasurer, and Michael S. Finan and William A. Olson, delegates to the federation.

Congressional appropriation of funds for landscaping of District school yards was requested by the association. It was pointed out that the District budget has never provided for such an item.

It was recommended that the District Testing Laboratory be taken from the Bureau of Standards and returned to its former quarters under District government control.

Chinese Waiter Freed of Blame For Man's Death

Chin Wing, 41-year-old Chinese waiter, was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday after an inquest into the death of Samuel Cook, 59, of 1121 Fourth Street Southwest, who died at Casualty Hospital Wednesday.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ordered an inquest when an autopsy disclosed Cook suffered head injuries Tuesday night after being ejected from a restaurant in the 900 block Fourth Street Southwest.

Witnesses testified that Cook was intoxicated Tuesday night and had been ejected from the eating place by Wing. Cook apparently lost his balance and fell, striking his head, it was said.

The jury decided the death was accidental.

Blocker Denied New Slaying Trial

Justice F. Dickinson Letts, of the District Court, yesterday refused a new trial to Clarence Blocker, colored, who recently was convicted of murdering Park Policeman Ivan W. Thompson last June 14.

Blocker was remanded to the District Jail to await a death sentence. Meanwhile, Attorney George E. C. Hayes, who was appointed by the court to defend the man, planned to take the case to the United States Court of Appeals here.

Liquor Stores, Row Houses Among Pet Peeves Of Michigan Park Citizens Association

This is the thirty-fourth article in a series about citizens associations in the District of Columbia and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

New School One Of Group's Proudest Achievements

The northeastern corner of Washington, according to members of the zoning-minded Michigan Park Citizens Association, is virtually a paradise of private residences, children, big yards and garden-tending citizens.

And they hope to keep it that way. For 18 years the association has taken the lead in opposing apartments, row houses and business developments in its area. One of the biggest fights it has waged was to get the entire sector rezoned as a residential area for detached and semidetached homes.

Liquor stores are another thing. "We hold to the theory that liquor stores have no place in a residential area and that they are detrimental to a community," President John J. Hurley said.

After heading the citizens' unit for five years, Hurley has no fault to find with the District's government. He believes it is absolutely free of graft and thinks the only trouble with it is that "Congress does not give us enough money."

"I think the Commissioners work hard," he said recently, "some of them too hard. I do not believe in suffrage for the District. Our budget difficulties are serious, but they cannot be traced to our form of government."

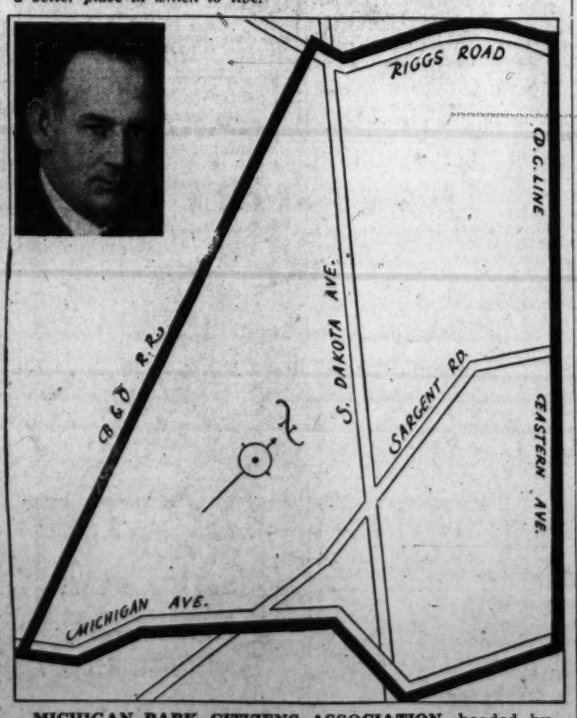

Hurley is a member of the staff of the Federal Reserve Board, is a native of Long Island, N. Y., and came to Washington in 1918 after serving in the Navy during the World War.

Typical of the friendly spirit of his association is the annual Christmas party, held for the past 12 years—usually in the hall of the Franciscan Monastery. Baskets for needy families and toys for all the community's children are distributed each year.

A major accomplishment claimed by the body is the new school at Fourteenth Street and Michigan Avenue Northeast, which opened this fall. The association had been driving for its construction since 1926.

Also begun at the instigation of the association, it reports, but not yet completed is the playground on Michigan Avenue between Tenth and Eleventh Streets Northeast. Members hope to see its completion this year.

Heading the Michigan Park body are President Hurley, of 4318 Tenth Street Northeast, and Secretary Dorothy Parkhill, of 4325 Thirteenth Place Northeast. Meetings are held on the first Monday of each month in the Bunker Hill School.

Parley Hears Political Speakers Outline Party Plans for Youth

Declaring that "youth wants a chance to vote," Roger Robb, vice chairman of the Washington Willkie committee, told an audience of nearly 300 young people last night that "we've got to have private enterprise and private industry to give youth jobs."

He addressed the opening session of the second annual youth conference held at the Y. W. C. A. under the auspices of the Washington Youth Council. Four representatives of political parties discussed "What My Party Plans for Youth."

Robb said that "the social programs of the New Deal are not going to be junked" if Willkie is elected, and that "no Government social gains are worth a nickel unless the Government is solvent."

Supports President

The Democratic Party "inherited a Republican depression," Russell Balderson, chairman of the Democratic Central Committee of the District, told the audience.

Emphasizing that the Democratic Party "has given youth all its benefits," Balderson urged support of President Roosevelt as the founder of a "Utopian order."

Dr. Albert E. Blumberg, executive secretary of the Communist Party for Maryland and the District, said that the only difference between the two principal candidates is that "Willkie says he could have done it better . . . I doubt if a man of Mr. Willkie's ability could have done a better job of bringing us to the brink of war than has Mr. Roosevelt."

Assails Draft

Miss Marjorie Ewing, secretary of the Washington Committee for Thomas and Krueger, declared that "conscription is similar to fascism" and that the Socialist Party has been "consistently against war."

Other speakers included Jack McMichael, national chairman of the American Youth Congress, and Dr. Doxey Wilkerson, of the American Federation of Teachers.

John Darnell, chairman of the National Student Federation of America, will speak at a session today at 9:30 a. m. Committee discussions will be held this afternoon beginning at 2:30 p. m. following an address by Mrs. M. O. Lorenz of the Voteless League of Women Voters, at 1:30 p. m. The sessions end tomorrow.

Wife Kills Self By Gas; Note Protects Husband

Mrs. Juliet P. Smith, 46, an employe of the Internal Revenue Department, was found dead of gas by her husband, Sydney H. Smith, late yesterday in the kitchen of their home at 3521 Hertford Place Northwest.

Smith, an employe of the Navy Department, told police he found a note pinned to a lamp in front of the kitchen door when he returned home from work yesterday. The note read: "Please do not come into the room with a lighted cigarette."

He entered the kitchen and found his wife's body on the floor. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

'Too Many Girls,' at RKO-Keith's Is a Rollicking Campus Frolic

Youthful Cast Makes Whoopee in Song, Dance and Comedy; New "March of Time"

"TOO MANY GIRLS." George Abbott's picturization for RKO-Radio of musical stage hit by George Marion, jr., with music and lyricss by Rodgers and Hart, adapted to the screen by John Twist, featuring Lucille Ball, Richard Carlson, Ann Miller, Eddie Bracken, Frances Langford, Desi Arnaz and Hal LeRoy, with Libby Bennett, Harry Shannon, Douglas Walton, Chester Clute and Ivy Scott. Directed by Mr. Abbott. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

For the enlivenment of those who enjoy fun for fun's sake, it is a good thing there is a George Abbott whipping around the contemporary theater. Otherwise, there would not be "Too Many Girls" currently on the screen at RKO-Keith's to baffle the pundits, enthrall the collegians and jiggle the jitterbugs.

BELL

Transplanted from stage to screen without loss of speed, diminution of comedy, change in lunatic viewpoint or impairment of Rodgers and Hart's familiar score, "Too Many Girls" is not quite like any other screen musical you ever have seen. The "plot" makes high-pressure entertainment without making sense, the musical numbers are plopped around indiscriminately, whether they belong right there or not, and the whole merry business takes on the aspect of an adventure in the crazy house—but it is nice going for the carefree and frivolous, who don't give a tinker's so-and-so about form, logic, rationality or the rudiments of "drahma." All that is to be found here is a welcome release from theatrical convention.

It seems that an opulent Mr. Casey had a willful daughter, Connie, who couldn't get along at a regular college and had to have a corps of professional bodyguards to keep her out of mischief. But she was smarter than they were, so papa engaged four young, all-American football players to watch the gal when she enrolled at Pottawatomie, dad's alma mammy out on the New Mexican desert. Nobody knew at the time that "the man"—a brilliant young author—lived only 8 miles away from the institution of revolutionary lower learning.

There is practically no use in going on from there, for there never was a school like Pottawatomie—worse luck! The rules are something to warm the heart of any collegiate or coed. Everybody majors in adolescent love, songs a little spicier than the customary college anthems, dances that will knock your eye out and the than-whichest football that ever yanked a tail-ender up into the national lead. You'll find out!

Abbott has assembled a characteristically youthful cast for the principal roles in his roistering romp. Lucille Ball is the Connie Casey, unfaithfully kept under amorous surveillance by the "Four Horsemen," Richard Carlson, Eddie Bracken, Hal LeRoy and Desi Arnaz; a new, svelte and fiery Ann Miller aids Master LeRoy in sparking the gatling-gun dances, Frances Langford joins Miss Ball in banging over the best of the Rodgers and Hart songs, Eddie Bracken pumps out most of the comedy and Senor Arnaz pounds th daylights out of an aboriginal tom-tom to lend a devilishly torrid quality to the most inflammatory of the ensembles. The way "I Didn't Know What Time It Was" is tossed around through the entire group is something to see and hear. So are "Love Never Went to College," "Heroes in the Fall," "Pottawatomie," "Look Out," "Spic and Spanish," "You're Nearer" and "Cause We Got Cake."

The supplementary attractions add up nicely, too. The new issue of the "March of Time," dedicated to "Mexico" and her "Good Neighbors Dilemma" sheds a new light on latter-day United States-Mexican relationships and clarifies what it is that President Cardenas, Almazan and Camacho have been shooting at—both literally and figuratively. It appears that things aren't so bad for us below the border, here of late. A new "Information Please" also is shown, with Elmer Davis helping out the Messrs. Kieran, Adams and Levant in solving the puzzlers tossed to them by Clifton Fadiman. The Pathe News, devoted in its entirety to the Presidential candidates and the drawing of the first numbers in the draft, completes a bill that offers nothing whatever to worry and sprout gray hairs about.

How Do You Mean, Too Many?

ANN MILLER

one of the feminine sparkplugs in George Abbott's picturization of his musical stage hit, "Too Many Girls," now on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, with a cast of ebullient and talented youth. Miss Miller is teamed with Hal LeRoy to insure the superlative quality of the giddy picture's dancing

Bing Crosby Still Is Head Man In Earle's 'Rhythm on the River'

By Richard L. Coe

"RHYTHM ON THE RIVER." Paramount picturization of a screen play by Dwight Taylor from a story by Billy Wilder and Jacques Thery, co-starring Bing Crosby and Mary Martin, with Basil Rathbone, Oscar Levant, Oscar Shaw, Charley Grapewin, Lillian Cornell, William Frawley, Jean Cagney, John Scott Trotter and Ken Carpenter. Songs by Johnny Burke, James V. Monaco and Victor Schertzinger. Directed by Mr. Schertzinger. Reviewed Friday afternoon, At the Earle Theater.

Genial Bing Crosby, delectable Mary Martin, smarty-pants Oscar Levant and suave-as-silk Basil Rathbone have been gathered together by Paramount for one of those films to which the Crosby chap brings his engaging informality. "Rhythm on the River" is its title and Earle audiences yesterday found it likable, mind-at-ease entertainment.

In his customary fashion, the bubbly Crosby sets the pace of the piece. He has several pleasant songs to offer, the charming Miss Martin to sing them with and that Pigwiggen of "Infirmation Please," Oscar Levant, with whom to exchange insults. For the past several weeks the town has been whistling its tunes—"Only Forever" (top spot on the 'Hit Parade!"), the title song and a grand number for the Martin girl, 'Ain't It a Shame About Mame?"

It is the story's uncomfortable notion that a popular song writer, his muse having deserted him, has been employing a ghost lyricist and a ghost composer—unbeknowst each to the other!—and paying them beer-and-pretzel wages while he lives off champagne and caviar on their music's profits. In life's cheerful shuttle the two pawns get together.

Such a tale allows a string of related sidelights. There is a scene in a music publisher's office, in which the publisher seems to be doing everything but listening to the Crosby-Martin audition he is conducting, although he really hasn't missed a note. There is a glimpse into the home life of a successful composer, with Levant playing Rathbone's man Friday, a character named Starbuck. It is Levant's amusing duty while playing this fellow to be caught reading a book titled "A Smattering of Ignorance," by one Oscar Levant, a book he finds exceeding dull.

John Scott Trotter, whose orchestra accompanies Bing on his radio hours, also has a part in the film; Lillian Cornell chants a tune early in the footage and Charley Grapewin, as a retired ferry boat captain, is given a chance for homely philosophizing. To be sure, all this talent might conjure up thoughts of something stupendous, what with Levant's fabulous reputation, but "Rhythm on the River" remains the unassuming Crosby's and to the many who enjoy his style that will be sufficient.

The Earle stage revue is nothing outstanding, just one of those neatly-woven "little shows" that have become a rule of the house. The Milt Herth Trio headlines—electric organ, piano and drums that have been popular night spot entertainers here as well as recording favorites throughout the country. They offer some of their more familiar numbers, with Herth himself rippling through "Whistler and His Dog;" a new pianist and the same blond drummer boy who seems to want to lead a band.

Johnny Woods got a solid hand at yesterday's first show for his radio mimicking, which ranges from fine to weak. The Del Rios, tumbling with the nonchalant fellow on the bottom, as usual, provoking amazement. The Roxyettes open with a rhythmical "Double Tom Tom" routine and close to the "Ferryboat Serenade." Eileen Ritter again includes a quartet spot for "Sweet Adeline" in her "Sing-a-Song-with-Mike" specialty and the gag's still fun. So's "Rhythm on the River," in not too hilarious a fashion.

James Cagney-Ann Sheridan Battle 'City for Conquest,' at Met

Many-faced Manhattan is the old champion that meets all the young comers in "City for Conquest." It is Manhattan that slaps the youngsters down, knocks the wind out of them, fouls them in the clinches, has them walking on their heels—unless they're champions, too, and have luck in the breaks.

Jimmy Cagney, playing Young Samson, fighter of championship caliber, beaten through criminal strategy, uses more character shading than he's devoted to recent roles. He changes from an easy-going young truck driver to a savage fighter, later a blind man, with uncanny realism, especially in the nervous mannerisms of the blind. It's the best Cagney role in seasons, merits another part of similar, or greater, opportunity. No one can play a tough part like Cagney, but his acting ability is largely wasted in merely tough roles.

"City for Conquest" is no Pollyanna yarn. Most of the characters come to no good end. Even the final reconciliation of Cagney and Ann Sheridan finds him the almost-blind keeper of a newsstand and her a dancer who's lost out in her profession. At that, it's a triumph of character if not material success.

Ann Sheridan scores beautifully again, but in a different metier. She's no "oomph" girl, just a beautiful and ambitious young dancer, essentially a very simple sort of person. This interpretation should end all controversy about the Sheridan ability and versatility. There's probably not another young Hollywood actress, except Ginger Rogers, who could have done the part so well.

"City for Conquest" is now going into its second downtown week at the Metropolitan and belongs on the "must list" of all moviegoers who don't want to miss the more significant pictures.

Conscription angles with pictures of young men holding the magic number 158, shots of the War Department fire and those Two Men give the newsreel exciting quality.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Nov. 1.

Warners have had a great deal to say about the "build-up" they gave Ann Sheridan, and her ingratitude in walking out just as she was scheduled to start "Strawberry Blonde," because she didn't get the raise she wanted. But no one, so far, has come to Ann's defense. A recent statement says an offer was made to double her $600 a week salary if she'd come home and be forgiven. But Ann, the little redhead, says if it has, she hasn't heard about it.

HOPPER

The unfortunate part is that the fuss has pulled the lid off our "build-up" system. Such exposures of movie methods cause the public to say—"So it's all phoney, eh?"

Sonja Henie planed back to New York pronto when she heard that a man named Stanlon is coming up with a law suit. He claims to have been her agent and wants 10 per cent of all earnings. This may postpone her tour, which was to have started November 21. She has to return here by New Year's to start her picture, "Sun Valley," but are her skaters keeping their fingers crossed, hoping the tour won't be cancelled!

Greta Garbo, Baylord Hauser, and Rouben Mamoulian went to and from San Francisco incognito, but they didn't remain that way during the football game . . . The new Powell-Loy picture is called "Mr. Co-ed." It will also feature Marjorie Main. And if you missed her performance in "Wyoming," with Wally Beery, it's your own fault. She's terrific.

William Boyd, known to millions as "Hopalong Cassidy," wants a certain scene reshot in "Magic in Music," in which his wife, Grace Bradley, plays a burlesque queeen and does a strip-tease. Seems Bill okayed Grace's film comeback without reading the script, and now his Western chivalry's boiling over.

Even though Spencer Tracy wanted to play opposite Greer Garson in "Blossoms in the Dust," his next will be "Men of Boys Town," with Rooney, and Bobs Watson as "Pee Wee" again. They're calling it "Men of Boys Town," but what are they going to do with Rooney? He hasn't added an inch since the last one.

That's a nice gesture, speaking of Western stars, that Charlie Bickford, Leo Carrillo, Buck Jones, and Dick Foran made to the late Tom Mix. They knocked off work in "Riders of Death Valley" to petition studio executives to call the famed old "Western street," down which Tom rode at breakneck pace a thousand times, "Mix Avenue." The execs said yes.

Lowdown on why Paul Muni didn't want to do the story "High Sierra" for Warners was that (with a sigh) it "had no message."

Irene Crane, voice coach to Mary ("My Hear'—" you know it as well as I do) Martin, was singing lustily in Mary's dressing room the other day when Horace Heidt, the bandmaster, happened along, barged in and said, "I know you're not Mary Martin, but who are you?" Irene introduced herself, sang a couple of ditties, and now is off to fame on "The Pot of Gold."

Flyer and dance director LeRoy Prinz has waited years to get even with Director Bill Wellman, and the other day saw his opportunity. Billy became a daddy for the fourth time. LeRoy was teaching a dance routine to 25 kids, half of them colored. When the news of Wellman's blessed event reached his ears, he rushed all the kids over to Wellman's set, and they went into their dance screaming, "Oh, Daddy, how you can love!"

THE NEXT IMPORTANT presentation of privately-owned paintings to public museums will be made by Mrs. Felix Warburg, in commemoration of her late husband's seventy-sixth birthday . . . Paderewski, now en route to this country, was enabled to be released from Spain through the intervention of the White House. Nazi officials had asked Franco to keep the former Polish official from going to America and making propaganda speeches here . . . Special Prosecutor Amen is preparing a grand jury investigation because he had sent to New York Police Commissioner Valentine the names of 103 police officers he wanted penalized, and nothing happened . . . Wendell Willkie wrote an article for the Nation, but ordered it yanked at the last minute, because the editors made reply to it in the same issue.

BEACH CONGER, the New York Herald Tribune's correspondent who had to move from one European capital to the other, finally was set in Athens. He waited there three months—but nothing happened. And so his editors told him to come back, and he arrived here this week, just as the fireworks started there . . . He tells of the rigid censorship imposed by the Greek ministry of propaganda throughout this period. The censors listened to all telephone reports made by the American correspondents, and at the mention of "Italy" or "Rome," the censors cut them off . . . The American correspondents were able to get their dispatches through—for instead of using the words "Italy" or "Rome," they merely described the place of worry as "Big Mulberry Street."

JOHN McCORMACK, the famed singer, has emerged from his retirement in Ireland, and is singing to troops via BBC . . . Al Siegel, who discovered and coached many singers, Wednesday night signed his MGM contract to coach Shirley Temple for $500 a week . . . Morris L. Ernst, who was John L. Lewis' lawyer, will reply to him via the air. And Marian Anderson and Bill Robinson will be the Democrats' reply to Joe Louis' stumping for Willkie . . . When Abe Lyman, in introducing Max Baer at the New Yorker, asked the heavyweight: "Tell us, Max—when are you going to fight Joe Louis again?" the former champion confessed: "Again? I haven't really fought him yet."

BAER IS ENTERTAINING his co-members of the cast of "Hya Gentlemen," by permitting them to punch him. Fred Finklehoffe, who wrote the show with John Monks, jr., hit Baer five times, with roundhouse swings, connecting each time. Baer merely walked away, and said: "It's lucky for me that you missed" . . . The next day, when Baer arrived at rehearsals, the 5 foot 3 Finklehoffe whaled in and, at close quarters, began throwing punches into Max's midsection. Baer pushed him aside and shouted: "Will someone please take this woodpecker away?"

WHEN CHARLIE CHAPLIN visited Sing Sing recently, he surprised the prisoners by bringing with him "The Great Dictator," to show it instead of the movie originally scheduled . . . Chaplin visited the Reuben Bleu and told Paula Lawrence there: "I'm not in the habit of acting as an agent, but when I get back to Hollywood, I guarantee a job for you" . . . The newspaper men covering Wendell Willkie now like him more, because he refused to appear at the Fordham-St. Mary's game, as announced, until the reporters who had been with him throughout his entire trip also were permitted to come and see the football game . . . Katharine Hepburn agreed to be guest of honor at Cleveland's swankiest Hermit Club last week, and take the badgering for her New Deal support.

NOEL COWARD, now in Australia, had been there last during his round-the-world trip a few years ago. He met a Japanese official who assured him a good time . . . At each stop off in Nippon, Coward found a welcoming committee, who insisted upon making speeches of welcome. This occurred more than 20 times. And so when the train arrived at Kobe, and Coward looked out the window and saw a welcoming committee, he donned his robe, rushed out, and presented his card to each greeter assembled there. Inside the train, Coward's companion fought—with a Japanese who was holding an urn—insisting that he'd accept it in behalf of the playwright. The Japanese refused to relinquish it, and an interpreter finally managed to explain—that this committee knew of no Noel Coward, but was assembled there to receive an urn containing the ashes of a distinguished man who recently had died in another city.

CARLETON SMITH, the music critic and columnist for Coronet, received a letter from the daughter of Brazil's President Vargas. She asked him to write her about the U. S. In two days, Hecht has finished more than the first act.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Philadelphia, Nov. 1 (INS). Tonight's the big night for Ty Power, who is appearing personally with "The Mark of Zorro" before the home folks in Cincinnati, with previews being held in Hollywood and New York, but just as Tyrone scores in his most swash-buckling role comes word that he'll go modern again as the star of "The Great American Broadcast," with Betty Grable as his vis-a-vis. This completes Power's next year's schedule for Twentieth Century-Fox with "Blood and Sand," "Down to the Sea in Ships" and the big radio picture now lined up for him.

PARSONS

Since both "Blood and Sand" and "Down to the Sea in Ships" are more or less costume stories, I think Zanuck is wise in sandwiching in a modern yarn for the popular Tyrone. Don't be surprised, either, if Kate Smith and her entire radio troupe are transported to Hollywood to appear in "The Great American Broadcast." She'll be on the coast around November 22 to talk about this picture, a cavalcade of radio, which will feature the biggest stars on the air.

Fritz Feld isn't superstitious about postponing a wedding, even when it's his own. When Ernst Lubitsch offered him the comedy role in "That Uncertain Feeling," Feld was all for turning it down on account of he's scheduled to get married this Sunday to Virginia Kraft. "I'll make you a deal," bargained the wily Lubitsch, who usually gets his way. "You work in my picture—I'll be best man at your wedding 10 days from now!" P. S.: Lubitsch won—and now the Feld-Kraft nuptials are scheduled for around the fifteenth of November.

Just before we left New York, Joan Crawford telephoned me at the hotel. Never thought a staunch Hollywoodian like Joan would rave so about New York. She is living in the country and maintains an apartment in town. Joan says her baby grows cuter by the minute. Unless she hears to the countrary, she will be in Hollywood in 10 days to make tests for "A Woman's Face," her next picture. And for the first time in her life Joan isn't eager to return to work!

Snapshots of Hollywood and New York collected at random: I know this is where we all came in—but the Bruce Cabot-Liz Whitney romance is hotter than ever. Liz is in New York at the Pierre and Bruce is expected tomorrow. It wouldn't surprise friends if they marry; Addison Randall, who was in New York last week, was at the House of Murphy last night with Pat Gardner, the model. Her jeweled turbans are the talk of Hollywood.

Bob Cobb is planing out to New York and Chicago on a two or three-week jaunt, hoping to forget his rift with Gail Patrick; Eleanor Boardman's husband, Harry D'Arrast, is having his troubles getting out of Barcelona. He wants to join her in Hollywood; Frances Neal and Vic Orsatti at the Hollywood Tropics; Madeleine Carroll left Montreal last night for New York where she'll take the next Clipper to Portugal; it looks like love with Lew Ayres and Tina Thayer; the first player actually signed on the dotted line for "The Man Who Came to Dinner" is Mary Wicks who played the nurse in the Broadway show with Monty Woolley. She'll play the same role in the picture.

Walter Wanger has joined John Bennett back in Hollywood after traveling 32,000 miles, visiting 22 cities in the United States and three in Canada and 800 theater owners, plugging "Foreign Correspondent." That's what I call meeting the people.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Group Health, 3 Years Old, Plans to Expand Quarters

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Group Health Association yesterday noted the third anniversary of its founding with the largest membership it has ever had.

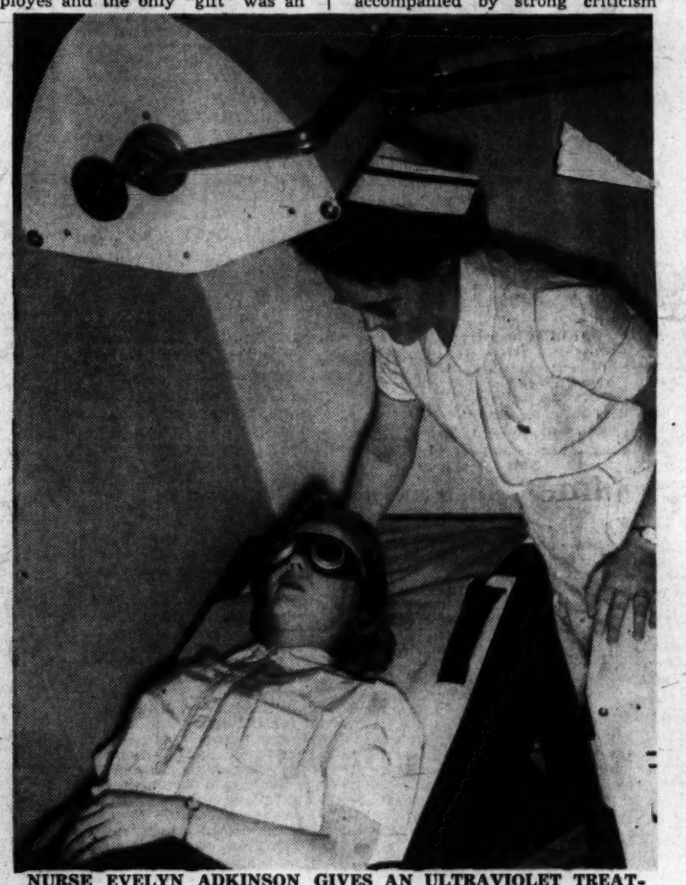

There was no celebration of the occasion at the medical care cooperative for Government employes and the only "gift" was an announcement in New York that GHA has been certified by the Group Health Federation of America.

Cameron G. Garman, president of the association, which led a stormy career during the first year of its operation, said last night:

"We are pleased at the progress which has been made during these three years. Right now space is our greatest problem and plans are in the making to provide expanded quarters."

The main, and original, GHA clinic is at 1328 I Street Northwest. At 1422 K Street Northwest is the annex, opened just a year ago, housing the eye, ear, nose and throat, physiotherapy and business departments.

Launching of Group Health Association on November 1, 1937, was accompanied by strong criticism on the part of the American Medical Association, which construed the project as a step toward socialized medicine. The barring of GHA staff physicians from Washington hospitals led to an investigation by the Department of Justice which resulted in the indictment of the A. M. A., District Medical Society, two other medical groups and 20 affiliated physicians for alleged violation of the antitrust laws.

Can't Wait No Match for Challedon in Special

W. L. Brann Ace Captures 2d Straight

Margin of Victory Is Two Lengths; George Woolf Rides Pimlico Winner

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 1.—Challedon all the way and jogging. That tells the story of the 1940 Pimlico Special. In fact, Chelledon was pulled. However, there's no cause for alarm or an investigation. The W. L. Brann star was just so much superior to Myron Selznick's Can't Wait that Jockey Georgie Woolf did not have to release his strong grip on the gallant son of Challenger II and Laura Gal.

Two lengths, about the margin he held around the track, was the finish call of the test of a mile and three-sixteenths that simmered down to a match race after eight horses had been invited. Can't Wait, at even weights of 126 pounds, simply was outclassed by the Frederick express. Jockey Alfred Robertson conserved the son of Victorian for a one-run challenge, but his mount was unequal to the task. Can't Wait came over the finish line under a hard drive with Challedon in turf parlance "laugning" at him.

The fourth Special and second straight won by Challedon was conducted over a slow track and through a light drizzle that blew in from the southeast just before the two rivals left the paddock. The time of 2.03 1-5 was the slowest of the Specials but it was apparent that it was far from Challedon's true effort even over the slow track.

Crowd Is Disappointing

The disappointing crowd of 13,000 was strictly Challedon from the start of the wagering. The Brann star was 1-to-4 in the opening line, 1-to-3 at one stage of the wagering and paid a $2.40 mutuel or 1-to-5. The betting on the race also fell far below expectations. Only $20,214 was put into the tote and the British Relief Fund received $1,-687.32, representing the profits on the race.

On the winner-take-all basis, Challedon galloped into $10,000 and boosted his earnings for the year to $70,625 and his all-time money-winning mark to $322,860. Owner W. L. Brann also received $5,000 as breeder of Challedon while G. D. Cameron, who succeeded Lou Shaeffer as conditioner of Challedon this summer, took down $1,500 as the trainer.

Over the same track where he won the Preakness last year and where he turned back C. S. Howard's Kayak II, sixth months later in the 1939 Special, Challedon did everything expected today. He was master from the first moment that starter Jim Milton's switch made the electrical contact that released the gates.

Challedon Bounds To Front

Challedon bounded to the front apparently on his own initiative for Jockey Woolf reached down almost immediately to take the grip he was never to relinquish. Jockey Alfred Robertson appeared satisfied to allow Challedon to set the pace. In fact he kept Can't Wait on exactly the same line of the track as the pair came through the stretch for the first time.

Woolf kept Challedon toward the center of the track. Robertson continued to follow in Indian fashion as the rivals banked the clubhouse turn. Entering the backstretch, Woolf had his weight forward against the stirrups while Robertson also had a grip on Can't Wait.

Joe Hernandez, on the speaker system drolled out "Challedon by two and a half lengths and Can't Wait." The same call came time after time. It was as if Can't Wait was a dory tied behind a motor boat so regularly was the distance between the horses.

Crowd Is Silent

The crowd seemed strangely silent. It was waiting for something to happen—a thrill or a chill. But there was no noticeable change. Approaching the stretch, Robertson chose to make Can't Wait's "move." He gave the son of Victorian his head and let him feel the sting of the whip. Up and down flew Robertson's arm. He pointed Can't Wait to the outside so the 5-year-old could close the gap.

Woolf seemed unmindful of any challenge by Can't Wait. He simply held on and guided. In the stretch, Robertson appeared to realize the futility of punishment and went into a strong hand ride. He kicked and scuffled in the manner that has carried him long in

Evidence Lacking To Show Snavely Wig-Wagged Signal

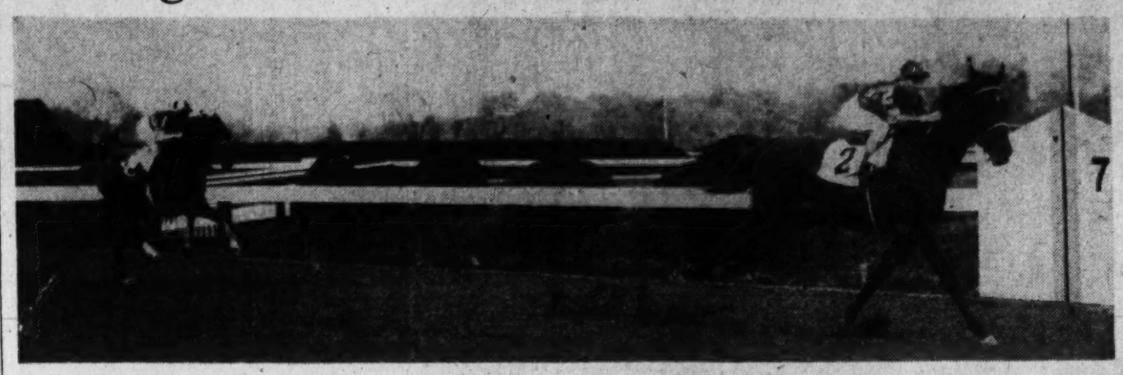

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 1.—Asa Bushnell, who assigns officials for Eastern football games, said today an investigation showed no evidence of Coach Carl Snavely calling signals in last Saturday's game at Ithaca, N. Y., between Cornell and Ohio State.

The reports of the officials "include no evidence of coaching from the sidelines and some definite indication of opinion that it was non-existent," said Bushnell in a letter to L. W. St. John, athletic director at Ohio State.

"In light, however, of your observations, I am writing to the four officials to ask specifically for their further views in the matter—though I am confident they would have inflicted any penalty or penalties due had they believed that the rule against unsportsmanlike conduct was being violated," wrote Bushnell.

Coming Past the Stands the First Time . . . . .

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Wake Forest turned up with two of the Nation's best runinng backs last night and between them—Joltin' John Polanski and Tony Gallovich—they paced the Deacons to an 18-0 victory over George Washington University on a Griffith Stadium turf more suited to mud pies than football.

Polanski, who led the country's backs in ground gaining last season, picked up the downfield yardage and Gallovich, who topped the running statistics this year prior to last week, pulled a pair of end runs for touchdowns. Red Maberry accounted for the third score.

The 9,000 fans who huddled under the covered stands during the two-hour downpour watched the Deacons score first after intercepting a G. W. pass, second on a 7-yard march that consumed most of the third period and last after recovering a Colonial fumble.

Passes Few

Playing conditions were so bad the winners didn't even attempt to pass, while George Washington backs threw nine, but only two found their mark. G. W.'s farthest advance was to the Deacon 33 as the Colonials were held to 102 yards rushing and three first downs by the heavier Deacons.

The victory was ample revenge for the 35-0 pasting Wake Forest received here three years ago, but George Washington was not at top strength. Regular Quarterback Sam Babich wasn't in uniform, while Johnny Picco, the star of last week's victory over West Virginia, left the game early in the first quarter and didn't return. Sam Batson played part of the last three periods, but favored his recent injury.

The game turned into a comedy of errors in the fourth period. The players and officials were completely covered with mud and eight fumbles fell from the slippery paws of the rival backs. When a player was tackled he slid 5 or 10 feet.

Fedora Gains

Fuzzy Fedora made the initial first down early in the second quarter and Murphy Booth plowed through for 17 yards to make it two ip a row, but Center John Prendergast, of the Deacons, pulled his second pass interception in five minutes to halt the G. W. drive.

Polanski took over from here and carried the ball to the 31 and on the next play Gallovich romped 31 yards around left end for the first touchdown. Batson missing a chance to knock him out on the 15-yard line. Predergast missed the extra point as his teammate had difficulty centering the ball.

Tom Grady entered the game just before the half and grabbed a 25-yard pass from Wilamoski, but Polanski stopped him on the 40 at the whistle.

Long Third Period

The third period seemed like an hour to the G. W. rooters as it took nearly the entire quarter for Wake Forest to chalk up its second score. Starting on his own 21 Polanski gained 50 yards in a series of one-man drives through the right side of the line, aided by Paul Waivers, who picked up an occasional first down.

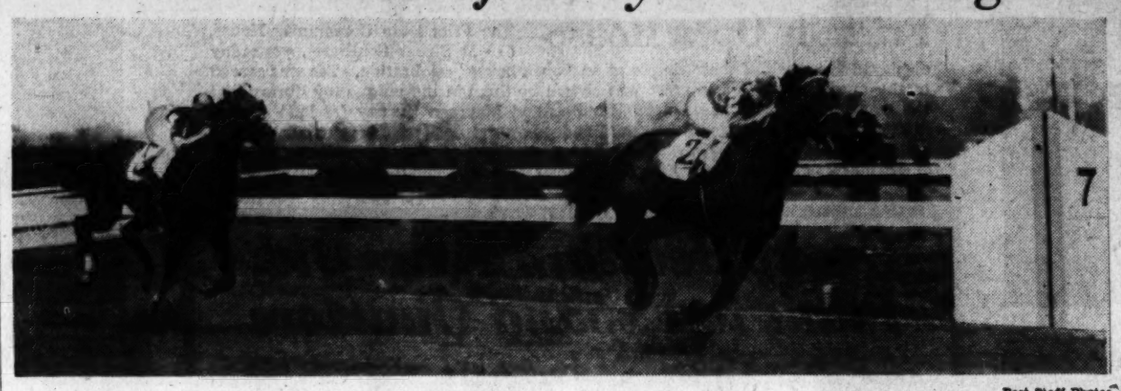

Polanski handed the ball to Gallovich on a reverse from the 12-yard line and with Pendergast supplying valuable blocking, Gallovich romped over on a play similar to the first score.

Pendergast missed the second conversion attempt the same way.

Batson's excusable fumble led to the third score as a punt bounded from his hands as he slipped and squirmed just short of the ball as Pat Geer recovered. With almost a second team in for the Deacons,

Basca Paces Villanova in Rout of Kansas

Halfback Scores Twice In Night Game; 14,890 See 33-7 Battle

By the United Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 1.—Paced by Halfback Nick Basca, the Villanova Wildcats routed Kansas University, 33 to 7, before 14,890 persons in a steady rain at Shibe Park tonight.

Basca passed and ran the Jayhawkers dizzy, scoring twice and kicking three extra points, to lead Villanova to victory after two straight setbacks.

The first score came when Basca went over from the 2 after a 73-yard march. He also kicked the extra point. Villanova's second score came when the Cats went 82 yards in two plays, Basca passing to Collins for 47 yards and a touchdown. Basca went over from the 3 in the third, again adding the point.

Hayden passed to Crowell for Kansas' lone score in the third period. Chet Gibbens added the point on a drop-kick.

Villanova completed the rout in the last period with two more scores. Stress went 21 yards for one touchdown, with Basca converting, and Howlett plunged from the 7 for the final.

Villanova	7	6	7	13	—33
Kansas	0	0	7	0	— 7

Touchdowns—Basca (2), Collins, Crowell, Howlett, Stress. Extra points—Basca (3) (placements), C. Gibbens (dropkick).

Marshall Defeats Morris-Harvey; Hunt Leads Attack

By the Associated Press

Huntington, W. Va., Nov. 1.—Marshall, with Fullback Jackie Hunt on the loose, overran a determined football band from Morris Harvey, 33-6, in the mud before a slim crowd of 3,500 tonight.

Smarting under the disqualification of four squad members on eligibility grounds, the Eagles dug their cleats into the sodden field and held the Herd scoreless through all the first quarter and half the second period, once stopping the Green on the Morris Harvey 2-yard line. A second Marshall touchdown thrust failed when Kuhl, substituting for Daniels, flubbed D'Antoni's pass in the end zone.

Then Hunt got busy. Taking Bill Northern's punt at midfield, he carried the ball seven times in nine plays to go over from the 2-yard line for the first score of the game, and the first of four touchdowns he chalked up in the 60 minutes of play.

His other touchdown trips came on runs of 38, 70 and 18 yards, the latter set up by his own 53-yard sprint.

Overlin Keeps Title After Fierce Battle

Champion Weathers Severe Belting and Beats Steve Belloise Before 13,071 in New York; Ken Gives Foe Boxing Lesson

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 1.—Ken Overlin, the playboy former sailor from Virginia, came up off the floor tonight, survived enough fistic bombs to blow him apart, and retained his middleweight championship by outpointing Steve Belloise in 15 wild rounds at Madison Square Garden. Overlin weighed 158; Belloise 153.

Floored in the sixth by a right-hand smash, and on the verge of a knockout for the last two minutes of that heat as the young Bronx belter threw everything in his book, Overlin came back to administer a classic boxing lesson and win like a champion should.

The Associated Press scorecard gave him 10 rounds, with 4 for Belloise and 1 even. Both judges—George Lecron and George Kelly—voted for the boxing master from the navy. Referee George Walsh called it a draw.

Thrilling Battle

The fight, while a thriller that had a crowd of 13,071 on its feet time and again—some booing and some cheering at the finish—went just like everyone said it would. They said Overlin would outbox the lanky youngster, who still has lots to learn, and that Belloise, who packs a particular wallop in either glove, probably would nail Ken before it was over.

Well, it went just like that. Except for the sixth, which Overlin somehow miraculously survived, and the twelfth, when a right hand uppercut "sucker" punch dazed him momentarily, and the fourteenth in which Belloise again connected with right hand smashes, the 30-year-old champion—recognized as such in this State and California—was a teacher handling a pupil.

In the second round, after a slow first session, Overlin, making the first defense of that section of the world crown he won from Ceferino Garcia, started working on Steve's body with lefts.

"Haymakers" Miss Mark

Through this heat and through the others up to the seventh, Overlin was content to back off, stab with his left, then suddenly dart forward as Steve, brother of former Featherweight Champion Mike Belloise, tried to land "haymakers" from long range.

In the seventh, after being knocked down in the sixth—for no-count, incidentally—Ken came back and took the play completely away from the 22-year-old New Yorker. And through the tenth, he kept right on taking it away.

After the tenth, while Ken was still the boss of the ring-general department, Belloise suddenly shifted his attack to righthand belts to the body. And, at the finish, Overlin's left side, from his shoulder blade to his belt-line, looked like a patch of raspberries—without cream.

Army Battles Strong Irish; Hopes for Best

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 1.—Football's annual "spectacle" game between powerful Notre Dame and weak Army is expected to pack a capacity crowd of nearly 80,000 into Yankee Stadium tomorrow.

Barring such an upset as scarcely comes once a season, the rugged team from South Bend figures to pile up about any score it chooses on the Cadets, but a little thing like that will take no polish off the twenty-seventh meeting of the two colorful rivals. As usual, the Corps of Cadets will parade before the kick-off at 1:30 (E. S. T.).

Notre Dame, with one-sided victories to its credit over College of the Pacific, Georgia Tech, Carnegie Tech and Illinois, has been a 1 to 6 favorite in the betting, with very little betting. Army has beaten only Williams, been tied by Harvard and trounced by Cornell and Lafayette.

The Notre Dame squad of 33 arrived at the nearby Westchester Country Club in time for a limbering-up today, while the Army squad of 40 put up at Knollwood Country Club in Westchester.

Coach Bill Wood of Army said he tentatively planned to start the same line-up, including a sophomore backfield, that started against Lafayette last week. Coach Elmer Layden, of Notre Dame, was expected to give the vast crowd a glimpse of his first eleven at the start, but it was thought he would withdraw them quickly if they threatened to run up a score on the Cadets. There is a lot of sentiment attached to the game.

Quaker Stars Rejoin Squad For Navy Game

Reagan, Mendelson And Frick Are Due To See Action Today

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 1.—Pennsylvania, anxious to redeem itself after last week's defeat by Michigan, takes on undefeated and untied Navy tomorrow in the twenty-fifth renewal of a colorful series. A crowd of 68,000 is expected at Franklin Field for the contest.

The return of Capt. Ray Frick, Frank Reagan and Irving Mendelson, who missed early practices this week because of illness or injuries, will bolster Penn's chances, although Mendelson, star guard, is a doubtful starter. Adding cheer to the Quaker outlook was the squad's noticeably better spirit.

Navy expects to match its powerful defensive game and a strong aerial attack against Penn's superior running attack and kicking ability. The Midshipmen will be without the services of big Jack Harrell, 202-pound blocking back.

Race 'Fixers' Linked With Sox Scandal

By International News Service

Los Angeles, Nov. 1.—Deputy District Attorney William E. Simpson, investigating operations of the $1,000,000 race "fix" organization on California tracks, dropped a bombshell tonight when he announced that the "master minds" of the syndicate were connected with the 1919 "Black Sox" baseball bribery.

Simpson said that it was learned that members of the race group were the same men who bribed the champion Chicago White Sox team to "throw" the World Series of 1919 to the Cincinnati Reds.

"Through this report," Simpson said, "the race scandal takes on national scope." He declared that members of the syndicate operating on California tracks might well have engineered crooked races throughout the country.

With the announcement a subpena was issued for Jack (Doc) Kibo, believed linked to the race racket and declared by Simpson to have been an associate of the group which bribed the White Sox in 1919.

Middies' Hopes High on Eve Of Crucial Battle With Penn

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Nov. 1.—Underdog or favorite, it makes no difference to genial Swede Larson, Navy's gridiron coach.

He said today The Middies are going up to Franklin Field in Philadelphia tomorrow for the Pennsylvania game determined to claim their sixth consecutive victory.

"This contest means a lot to us," he declared. "Unfortunately some of our players are ailing, but we are going up there to do a job and our hopes are high.

"We know, however, that tomorrow's assignment will be by far the toughest the Navy team has faced this season."

Minor injuries within the last week or so have hit the Navy starting eleven, but the second team, ably led by Howie Clark, left halfback, is intact.

Johnny Harrell, regular quarterback, who is nursing bruises, is not expected to start tomorrow. However, Alan Cameron, No. 1 fullback, who also was on the injured list, is slated for a starting assignment.

Bill Chip, reserve quarterback, has been named to take over for Harrell. The other backfield starters will be Bill Busik, ace lefthalf, and Cliff Lenz, righthalf.

In the starting line, Joe Donahue will replace Ken Steen, regular tackle, out with injuries. Lars Wanggaard will continue to play right end since Willis Maxson, regular wingman, still is ailing.

The Navy squad of 41 players will leave here tomorrow at 8:45 a. m., arriving at Philadelphia just before noon. The third battalion of midshipmen, numbering 850, the Academy band and drum and bugle corps also will make the trip.

WASHINGTON, NOV. 2, 1940

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

If Bob Feller has been quoted correctly, it does not require a Gallup Poll to ascertain that the lead in the race for the Cleveland managerial job has swung to Luke Sewell. Feller, in discussing the managerless Cleveland club the other day commented, "I know Luke Sewell well and believe he would make a very fine manager."

POVICH

That sort of a statement by Feller is tantamount to a recommendation for a job on White House stationery. The influence that Feller wields with the Cleveland club is something akin to fantastic. He's only 22 years old, he's an easy-going chap, doesn't attempt to play club politics and prefers to mind his own business. But he is such a transcendant figure on the club with his pitching skill that his words carry tremendous weight.

Alva Bradley, who owns the club, eternally seeks to please his bright young pitcher and the fact that Feller is fond of Sewell may sway Bradley in his appointment of a manager. At least Sewell's chances for the job are considerably brighter since Feller has spoken in his favor.

Despite the defiant silence of both Bradley and Bucky Harris on the negotiations between them, it is known definitely that Bradley did want Harris to manage his ball club and is still considering Harris' demand for a three-year contract. But Feller's words may put a new face on the managerial picture at Cleveland. Sewell is still very much in the running.

Sewell has his supporters, too, in the Cleveland baseball writers, most of whom have been campaigning for him. The Cleveland baseball press, which has made one of the finer arts of the second guess, has played a part in the firing of virtually every Indian manager since Tris Speaker. Now they are trying to hire a manager for the Indians and that man is Sewell.

Sewell was Oscar Vitt's coach and somehow managed to keep clear of the dissension that swept the Cleveland team. Because he did, it was assumed that he was on the players' side. For Sewell, it was an embarrassing situation, but he kept his mouth shut and held his job. Now he is directly in line for the boss' job.

It may not be a happy job for Sewell, if he gets it. The Indians would still be exposed to the taunts of rival players, coaches and managers and Sewell, of course, would be accused of undermining Vitt. The falseness of those accusations wouldn't bother baseball's jockeys. It is the accepted law of baseball that anything that hurts is not only permissible, but great stuff.

In every other point in the league except Cleveland it is apparent that what that club needs is a house-cleaning—action that would divorce the Indians completely from the cry-baby stigma they won last year when they squawked to the front office against Vitt. There are certain Cleveland players whom any self-respecting manager would give the heave-ho, and the appointment of Sewell would hardly presage a house-cleaning. He was everybody's friend last year, including Vitt's, seemingly.

The decision Bradley must make is one between pleasing his players immediately and sweeping clean. The Cleveland club owner may weaken yet in his attempts to bring in a new man who is free entirely from the old order.

One of the outstanding attributes of Bradley in his baseball dealings has been his utter inability to make up his own mind. His wishy-washy wavering between his managers and his players and his sensitivity to criticism of his baseball press made the Cleveland job untenable for his last four managers. Small wonder, then, that Bucky Harris is demanding a three-year contract.

During this week, Bradley was in conference with both Judge Landis and League President Harridge, and the suspicion is that he was asking them to help him make up his mind on the new Cleveland manager. He has gone to Landis before in his troubles, which were strictly none of Landis' business.

Not so many years ago when Walter Johnson was managing the Indians, the easy-going Johnson was constrained to crack down on Willie Kamm, his old third baseman. Johnson accused Kamm of stirring dissension among the team's younger players and suspended him. Kamm squawked to Bradley, and Bradley made no haste to back up his manager. Instead, he referred the Kamm-Johnson row to Judge Landis who promptly dumped it back in Bradley's lap saying it was none of his concern and that he didn't run the Cleveland Club.

There is the possibility, of course, that in his conversations with Landis and Harridge this week, Bradley sounded them out on the possibility of hiring Rogers Hornsby, another candidate for Vitt's job. If that was his mission, the chances are that he didn't get the green light from Landis in any attempt to hire Hornsby.

It was only two years ago that Landis personally ordered Hornsby ejected from a World Series press box at Chicago. The judge simply doesn't like Hornsby. He doesn't like, particularly, Hornsby's habit of betting on the horse races. He probably told Bradley he couldn't hire Hornsby and that would stick even if it didn't please Bob Feller.

Gopher-Wildcat Game Holds Grid Spotlight

Notre Dame Heavy Choice Over Army; 78,000 Expected for Game; Cornell Will Meet Columbia; Navy Faces Test Against Penn

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 1.—You need look no farther than Dyche Stadium at Evanston, Ill., for tomorrow's most important football game.

There Northwestern and Minnesota will play the first episode in a three-team round robin that will settle the Western Conference championship and should have a strong bearing on National championship pretensions. Michigan, the other member of this all-winning trio, is resting up for its home stretch drive in which the Wolverines will meet both the Gophers and the Wildcats.

This will be the day's only game pairing two major unbeaten-untied teams, and it will pack Dyche Stadium to its 48,000 capacity. Elsewhere there will be larger crowds, but it's doubtful that there will be more bone-crushing impact anywhere.

Looks Like Irish Again

Notre Dame and Army, as usual, will take the attendance palm, with 78,000 due at Yankee Stadium despite the fact an Irish victory is almost a foregone conclusion. Unbeaten Navy against once-beaten Penn will bring 68,000 to Philadelphia's Franklin Field; unbeaten Clemson against Tulane will draw 40,000 at New Orleans; 20,000 will see Texas A. and M. meet recovering Arkansas, and on the West Coast pace-setting Stanford will play U. C. L. A. before 55,000.

Cornell, on the other hand, No. 1 team in the Associated Press ranking poll, will have only 12,000 to witness its clash with Columbia, although the Lions gave the Big Red its biggest scare of all in 1939.

Manfully fighting down the memory of last week's surprises, your correspondent fights his way out of his corner thusly (home teams first, probable attendances in parentheses):

Here's the Day's Line-up

Northwestern-Minnesota (48,000) Northwestern will be outweighed, and DeCorrevont is limping. In spite of these omens, a 209-pound Minnesota line and two very fine Minnesota backs, a vote for Northwestern.

Army-Notre Dame (78,000)—Any way you pronounce it, Notre Dame.

Penn-Navy (68,000)—The bookies side with Penn. We'll string along—sink, if necessary—with Navy.

Tulane-Clemson (40,000)—Clemson, and should be close.

Texas A. and M-Arkansas (20,000)—Those Aggie 60-minute men may

Citadel Air Game Defeats Wofford, 7-2

By the Associated Press

Orangeburg, S. C., Nov. 1.—The Citadel's Light Brigade recovered from a rocky start here today and scored with a smart aerial attack to defeat the scrapping Wofford Terriers, 7-2, before an Orangeburg county fair crowd of 5,000.

Hardly had the game started before the Terriers, dangerous throughout the nip-and-tuck contest, drew first blood. Hank Foster, Citadel tailback, dropped back to punt from his own 23 but a whole pack of Terriers sifted through and Tom Martin, big tackle, blocked the kick. The ball bounded high into the air and came to earth behind the Citadel end zone for an automatic safety. This was on the seventh play of the game.

Starting from the Wofford 30 in the second period, Bolduc passed 15 to Kierstead and then, after another pass was knocked down by Joe Robertson, Stellar Wofford center, Bolduc passed to Eddie Lockwood, who took the ball on the 15, broke away from one tackler and racked across the goal line. Gordon Payne placekicked the point.

Eagles Are Tied By Cornwall, 3-3

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cornwall, Ontario, Nov. 1.—Roy McBride, youthful newcomer to the Washington Eagles hockey team, rammed home a goal ten seconds before final bell tonight to give the District of Columbia team a 3-3 tie with the favored Cornwall Flyers.

Washington raced into a two-goal lead early in the second period on young McBride's first score of the game, but the hosts came back to lead with pointers by Foster and Gardner.

Central Comes FromBehind to Beat W.-L., 7-6

Martin Is Star Of Stunning Upset In 'Family Feud'

A mediocre Central High record to date was made a dazzling success, as far as he Vikings were concerned, yesterday when a 7-6 upset victory was scored over Washington-Lee High, of Arlington, at Central Stadium.

It was as much a personal triumph for Coach Hardy Pierce as for his gridmen, for coach of the losers is Johnnie Baker, his brother-in-law. The Little Generals were saddled with their second straight defeat after running up a 15-game winning streak beginning with last season.

Little Generals Score

From the indications during the first half, Washington-Lee appeared headed for its second victory in the city's top "family feud". Last year it beat a more highly rated Viking club, 14-13.

Behind their stellar halfback, Russ Arnaud, the Little Generals registered the game's first points early in the opening period. The kickoff had bounced off Lawler's leg and been recovered by W.-L.'s Gaumnitz on Central's 43. Down the field marched the Little Generals, scoring from the 10-yard stripe on Arnaud's pass to Urbanski.

The placement of Shanty Shepherd, which might have meant a tie later on, was no good.

Vikings Launch Drive

With the start of the second half, the Vikings began an unstoppable march goalward. Harry Martin, fleet quarterback, started the rush by taking the kickoff from his own 10 to the 28. In quick succession Martin got off dashes of 16 and 17 yards, and Fullback Valanos sent the ball to the W.-L. 16 with a 21-yard aerial to Sam Di Blasi.

Down to the 5-yard marker rushed little Mike Denikos. It took two tries, but Martin finally went over from the three. The winning point was booted by Jack Samperton.

Landon Wins As Brawner Stars, 13 to 0

Landon School gridders got on the winning side of the ledger yesterday when they defeated Boys Latin, of Baltimore, by a 13-0 count on the local gridiron.

It was the third victory of the season for the Green, in four previous outings two victories and two losses having been recorded. And to Ted Brawner, husky backfield ace, went most of the credit.

Brawner tallied both his team's touchdowns and sparked the defense. In the first quarter a 10-yard slant off tackle accounted for 6 points and in the third it was a pass from John Sager, good for 40 yards, which turned the trick.

The game's only extra point was scored on a pass from Sager to Paul Baker. Boys Latin's attack was completely bottled throughout and no important threat was made.

St. Alban's Upsets St. Paul's, 13 to 12

D. C. Eleven, Unimpressed by Invaders' Six Straight Victories, Scores in Second and Third Periods and Then Holds Off Marylanders

Unbeaten St. Paul's of Baltimore, ran into a big surprise yesterday at St. Alban's field, when the underdog Saint gridders rang up a 13-12 victory after coming from behind.

Six straight victories the Baltimoreans had achieved before yesterday's game to lead the Interstate Academic Conference. Their record evidently didn't impress St. Alban's, for the locals ran through the invaders for touchdowns in the second and third periods and staved off numerous St. Paul threats thereafter.

St. Paul's first-period lead came as a result of Robertson's interception of Chewning's pass on the 10-yard line and subsequent trip over the goal.

St. Alban's came right back to tie things with a successful Chewning pass, this one being taken by Heiser for a short gain after a 60-yard drive down the field.

A 1-foot plunge by Heiser capped another drive in the third period and gave St. Alban's a 6-point lead, but the most important point was Chewning's successful rush for the extra point. A Robertson pass to Greene in the fourth period was thus nullified for St. Paul when its try for conversion was blocked.

Little Hoyas Defeat Wilson On Long Pass

Eckrich's 45-Yard Toss and Extra Point Win for Prep, 7-6

Putting all the distance and accuracy at his command into a fourth-quarter aerial, Buddy Eckrich, Georgetown Prep fullback, set up his team's second triumph of the year yesterday, 7-6, over Woodrow Wilson High.

Eckrich's pass sailed 45 yards through the foggy Garrett Park air and settled in the arms of Wingman Mike Tobin, who dashed 30 yards to score. Completing the Prep scoring, Eckrich dashed around left end for the extra and winning point.

Special pleasure was taken in the victory by the Little Hoyas because Wilson had previously beaten St. Alban's, which in turn had accounted for the Little Hoyas' only loss to date.

Wilson jumped into the scoring column first, pushing over a six-pointer in the second quarter. George Voight turned the trick from the 3-yard line, after the same stellar back had passed 20 yards into scoring territory.

The losers had another good scoring chance in the fourth quarter, but there another Prep star stepped into the breach. George Ghecas, brother of Georgetown U.'s Lou, brought Voight down after a 48-yard dash on the Prep 12, when it appeared the latter was absolutely in the clear.

Hawse Setter Derby Winner In Field Trial

Virginia Dog Scores Over Beau Curley; Hal's Pall Is Third

Dare Devil, a black-and-white setter owned by Virgil Hawse, of Staunton, Va., captured first place in the Derby event yesterday as the National Capital Field Trial Club opened its twenty-eighth annual two-day fall meet.

Second place among the 12 dogs competing went to Beau Cuvley, a setter owned by Condee Adams, of Hamilton, Va. Henry A. Latimer's Hal's Pal brought home third place for his Bethesda owner.

The all-age stake lead was taken by Beau Essig, a setter, and Brochos Pilot, a pointer. The event will be concluded starting at 8 a. m. today, and immediately following the Shooting Dog Stake will be held. Ten brace of dogs have been entered in the windup event.

Cavaliers to Clash With Gobblers Today at Norfolk

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 1.—The "never-a-dull-moment teams," Frank Murray's Virginia Cavaliers and Coach Henry Redd's Gobblers from Virginia Polytechnic Institute will clash here tomorrow at Foreman Field. The game is expected to attract at least 10,000 people. Weather indications were favorable.

The Cavaliers arrived in Tidewater this afternoon and pitched their camp at the Cavalier Hotel, Virginia Beach, while the Gobblers were scheduled to entrain from Blacksburg late tonight, arriving in Norfolk early tomorrow morning.

Spiders Are Warned For Overconfidence

After Richmond went through a brief drill devoted mostly to pass defense and a rehearsal of plays, the coach reminded the players that the Tigers could be counted upon to display their best brand of football against the Richmonders.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 1.—It'th hard to thay Ithaca without lithping for the retht of the day. But here goesth:

We're up here in Ithaca to see a little more of the best team the East has had in years; maybe the best team it ever had. If it is being coached from the bench, with Carl Snavely's magic baton, it doesn't really matter. Ninety-nine per cent of all coaches violate this rule. The important thing is that the Cornell players have the timing, the ingenuity, the opportunism and the superb manpower that put into brilliant operation whatever Snavely commands from the bench. We can see no difference between a coach's giving some kind of sign from the bench and his sending in a sub to give the same instruction. This fellow St. John, of Ohio State, who blew the whistle on Snavely, lives in a glass house. Any serious investigation of shamateurism or off-color ethics in college football would have to begin at Mr. St. John's school.

CONSIDINE

Columbia is a 5-to-1 underdog around Cornell's beautifully picturesque side-of-a-mountain campus tonight. With no takers. It is generally agreed that Cornell will win its sixteenth game in succession without trouble. Probably so. But if I were Snavely, and I have private information that leads me to believe I am, I'd watch for Lou Little's Lions. Little is the greatest one game coach in the sport. He has denied that this is the one game he wants to win this year. But it's a cinch that he'd rather come away from here with Cornell's scalp than with an advance copy of the results of Monday's card at Pimlico.

You know what he has done, in games for which he has pointed his team especially?

In 1930 Cornell had an outstanding team, with a great fullback named Bart Viviano. Columbia had been beaten 52-0 by Dartmouth three weeks before the Cornell game, and Cornell was the equal or superior of Dartmouth. Lou scouted Cornell carefully and worked out a system of stopping Viviano. He assigned his great center, Bill McDuffy, to do the work. Viviano was stopped like a run-out magazine subscription. Cornell got a touchdown, but Columbia's Ralph Hewitt ran the second half kick-off back 95 yards to a touchdown, and dropkicked a 53-yard field goal to win 10-7.

That was 1930. In 1931, with practically the same team that had been murdered the year before by Dartmouth, Columbia beat Dartmouth 19-6. That was the one game Lou and the boys wanted that year. In the 1934 Rose Bowl game against Stanford, of course, you could name your price if you wanted to bet on Columbia. But Lou figured out how to stop Bobby Grayson and to run around Keith Topping. His great KF-79 play, which features three supposed ball carriers running in different directions, scored the game's one touchdown.

Columbia always comes up well for Cornell. Last year Cornell was unbeaten, untied and considered about the equal of any team in the country. Columbia had won only one game, and that against V. M. I., when Cornell invaded Baker Bowl. Cornell had just whipped Ohio State in the year's greatest game. The Red took a 6-0 lead over the Lions and held it into the third quarter. But Columbia went to the front, 7-6, on Jack Naylor's 91-yard run and kick for the extra point. The Lions were getting better and were well on their way to an astounding reversal when Cornell got the break that saved it. Naylor waited until fourth down to kick, while Columbia had the ball deep in its own territory. Mike Ruddy blocked it and the ball rolled straight back for 20 yards to the goal line. Ruddy picked it up and stepped across for the heartless touchdown that kept Cornell's slate clean.

Well . . . It won't be the football day that it was last week, when Michigan and Penn were clashing at Ann Arbor and Cornell and Ohio State were belting each other around up here. But it'll be good enough. We should know by dusk just how good Navy is. About 70,000 are expected to see the big, unbeaten Tars go against a Penn team that must be terrifically worked up. Curiously enough, this game sets the second best offensive team in the country, Penn, against the second best defensive team. Then there is Minnesota-Northwestern with the Gophers a handy favorite in view of the presence of their great young George Franck (who scored four times against Iowa last Saturday) and the absence of brittle Bill De Correvont. Franck should gopher a couple more touchdowns in this game.

A neck-and-neck race between Eastern and Tech in the Eastern Division of the interhigh football series was foreshadowed yesterday as the husky representatives of the two schools came through with well-earned victories.

Eastern eked out a 7-0 margin over a fighting band of Indians from Anacostia to hold its first-place position. And Tech moved into second place ahead of Anacostia with a 21-6 shellacking of Western, west section leader.

Approximately 5,000 fans witnessed the two exciting battles.

Eastern Wins Third

In taking its third straight victory in the annual schoolboy series, Eastern was a little less than devastating except for its one scoring thrust. That came early in the second period on a 69-yard aerial play from Fullback Eddie Teague to Herbie Adams. The latter snagged the ball at midfield and went untouched the remaining distance. Teague then stepped back and completed scoring with a placement.

Indians Threaten

To the Anacostians, however, went credit for the first real threat of the game. After Knott, left tackle, blocked and recovered an Eastern punt on Eastern's 30 yard line early in the second period, Anacostia was deep in the Lincoln Parkers's territory. Its threat was stopped, however, when Moe Shulman of Eastern intercepted a pass by Bob Nolte on Eastern 19.

Teague picked up 11 yards in two attempts and with the ball on Eastern 31, then threw his scoring pass down the center of the field to Adams.

Later on in the second period Eastern was again striking at the Indian's goal line when Melvin Thompson, lanky Eastern end, intercepted another Anacostia pass on the 10-yard line. Four Eastern passes fell incomplete as the half ended.

Anacostia Checked

Anacostia failed to get beyond Eastern's 35 yard line in the second half. However, Nolte and Hoffman made frequent gains from 5 to 15 yards through the Eastern line.

Eastern marched from their own 30 to Anacostia's 17 on gains by Teague and Eslin in the last quarter. Teague picked up three yards in three tries but his attempted field goal from the 17 was wide.

Raiders Beaten

Though Western's previously unbeaten Raiders made a scrap of their fourth interhigh game throughout, they were a whipped club after the first quarter. Tech and its torrid little quarterback, Jackie Walsh, romped to two touchdowns in the first period, added another in the third, and in the fourth rung up the first field goal by a scholastic team here this season.

Western's only retaliation came in the final stanza when a 55-yard aerial drive was capped by a 4-yard scoring plunge by Bill Marlow.

Raiders Crippled

With their "one-man gang," Jake Hilleary, sitting the game out with injuries the Raiders found themselves without their main scoring threat and Tech made the most of it. Also missing from the Western lineup were regular linemen Bob Mathews and Billy Gray, and End Hal Mitchell was able to compete for only a few minutes.

Despite the damaged appearance of the losers' lineup, Tech took credit for an exceptionally well-played game. Its defense was air-tight until the final period, and the running combination of Walsh and Carlton Smallwood was devastating.

Walsh, one of the highest scoring backs in the city, started the Maroon ball rolling with the most spectacular play of the game. On the second play from scrimmage, he ripped off right tackle, found blockers in the open and went 77 yards down the sidelines to score. His attempted placement was wide.

Fumble Aids Tech

A Western fumble on the 40 set up Tech's second score in the opening period and again it was Walsh who supplied the scoring push after a sustained drive to the 1-yard stripe. This time Substitute Sonny Morisette missed the placement.

After a scoreless second frame, Tech hit the scoring column again in the third quarter when Walsh passed to Brent in the end zone from three yards out. Morisette's place-kick was wide.

His place-kick on the second play of the final quarter, however, was perfect. After Smallwood had plowed a 14-yard groove in the center of Western's line to start the period, Morisette stepped back to the 28-yard stripe and booted perfectly. Tech didn't need the extra 3 points.

Young Clarence Kuldell was on the throwing end of Western's only scoring drive. Starting at his own 45, where a penalty had placed the ball, Kuldell passed to first Buck Herrlein and then Jan Rus to reach the Tech 4. After two line bucks, Marlow went over with space to spare. Kuldell's placement was blocked by Lineman Newsome.

Rough Riders Rally to Beat Monroe, 13-6

Stein Stars as Mates Score Victory; Passes To First Touchdown

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 1.—Roosevelt High School's Rough Riders from Washington came from behind to earn a 13 to 6 victory over James Monroe High here this afternoon.

Trailing 6 to 0 at the half, Roosevelt started its first touchdown march midway the third quarter when, after receiving the ball on its own 28, Quarterback Robert Stein passed to Bernard Kolker, who took it to his own 45. Another pass, Stein to Dick Goodman, placed the ball on the Fredericksburg 29 and on the next play, Stein tossed to Kolker, who raced over for the touchdown. Marvin Kogod kicked the extra point.

Roosevelt added its second touchdown in the fourth period when Stein intercepted a pass on the Monroe 38 and raced over the goal line. Kogod's kick failed.

Monroe, using a brilliant passing offensive, opened the fireworks early in the game by striking three times at the Roosevelt goal line only to be thwarted on the first two. Receiving a Roosevelt kick on its 46, Fredericksburg began its touchdown march with Conroy Snellings, Monroe passer, heaving to Frank Mills twice in succession to put the ball on the 2-yard line. The Fredericksburgers met subborn resistence but finally scored when Snelling passed to Bobby Jones behind the line. Snellings' attempted pass failed to bring the extra point.

Sam Branscome and Snellings played an outstanding game in the backfield for Fredericksburg, while Bernard Kolker, Stein and Carl Sturges of the Roosevelt backfield sparked the team to victory. Good line work was featured by both elevens.

Devitt Loses To Mounts, 6-0; D. C. Boy Stars

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., Nov. 1.—Billy Kemp, a Washington lad, scored the only touchdown today as Mount St. Mary's College freshmen, of Emmitsburg, registered a 6-0 triumph over Devitt Prep, of Washington, on Echo Field. Kemp, who played at Devitt last season, took a blocked kick early in the fourth quarter and raced five yards for a touchdown. The boot was blocked by Belasco and McDonald, Mount linesmen, after the frosh had surrendered the ball on downs on the Devitt 10.

Rain fell during the entire contest, resulting in numerous fumbles and interceptions. The Mountaineers scored in the third quarter, but the play was called back because of an offside penalty. Devitt's offense was bottled up the entire game and the visitors never threatened to score.

Odds Favor Gonzaga Eleven Today in Clash With St. John's

With local colleges either idle or doing battle out-of-town, interest of football fans of Washington will turn today to the twenty-first renewal of the rivalry between St. John's and Gonzaga at Griffith Stadium at 2:30.

The largest crowd of the schoolboy season is expected to witness the town's top Catholic High rivalry Gonzaga's bruising Purple eleven will be favored by odds ranging from 5 to 2 to 4 to 1, but if past performances are an indication, most anything will happen.

A genuinely big-time air will be given the battle by the Johnnie cadet corps of approximately 400, which will march on the field in full-dress uniform. Each school will be represented by a band.

Cadets Won Last Year

Odds against his team worry Coach Gene Augusterfer of St. John's not at all. He remembers last year and the year before when his boys dashed the dope with well-earned decisions. Previous to that the Johnnies had been trampled nine straight times by their foes from I Street.

Augusterfer's main worries will be the knee injuries of Backs Billy Brogan and Tom Chisari. Both will probably be able to play, though not the whole game. Buddy Speiss, sophomore sensation, has also been ailing, but will be ready for action.

Gonzaga's Coach Orrel Mitchell has little to worry about in the injury department. His best blocking backs, Mickey Maguire and Red Murphy, were slightly damaged in the Tech game, but may be patched up satisfactorily. They're the only outstanding casualties, however.

Probable starting line-ups:

Cross Country Takes Anchors Aweigh Purse at Empire City

Stretch Run Sends Victor Home, $4.50

Etruscan Is Second After Holding Lead Most of Way; Third Goes to Dungeon

By the Associated Press

Empire City, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Many a favorite player had an opportunity to lay up "winter money" as the next-to-last racing program of the New York season was staged here today. When N. I. Asiel's Cross Country drove to his second straight victory in the mile and 70 yards of the featured Anchors Aweigh Purse, fifth on the card, it marked the fourth consecutive triumph for heavily backed horses, the previous three at odds-on. Cross Country, a $4.50 for $2 chance, won by a neck in 1:44 flat over a slow track.

Victor Emanuel's Etruscan could not hold a long early lead but managed to be an easy second, six lengths in advance of Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson's Dungeon.

Although small fields dominated the first-of-the-month card, the crowd of 10,221 was in a wagering mood. They poured the money in as form stood up race after race and wagered $102,676 on the headliner alone.

Cross Country, as usual, began slowly as Etruscan, with Don Meade seeking a riding triple, dashed far into the lead. After entering the backstretch, Meade's mount opened up eight lengths of daylight on Dungeon while the favorite was moving up slowly but surely on the outside of the field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHTEN UP, $15.50, $6.20, $4.60; RODIA, $11.30, $5.90; QUIZZLE, $3.30.

BRIGHTEN UP, off in first flight and on outside, wore down RODIA to take command and drew out gradually to win easily. RODIA, first away, drew clear early, and was no match for winner, but was easy second. QUIZZLE worked way to contention on outside and was held safe in closing drive. ROYAL ROBES was off alertly, but could not keep up and was not serious factor after opening quarter.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 1:45. Off 1:45½. Winner, H. M. Babylon's b. f. (2), by Swashbuckler—Becuma. Trained by J. Serio, Jr. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14⅘.

BECOMLY, first away, withstood challenge of JOHN'S STAR approaching stretch, opened good lead, but had to be kept to pressure to end. JOHN'S STAR, off well, moved up nearing stretch, dropped back and was gaining at end under punishment. BLUE STRING raced on outside, loomed menacingly at turn for home and weakened gradually thereafter. PROC raced along rail and tired.

Daily Double, BRIGHTEN UP and BECOMLY, Paid $119.60

THIRD RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; steeplechase; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:16. Off at once. Winner, I. Beavers' b. g. FOREST CHARM forged to front going to first fence, drew far out, recovered from bad landing at tenth and was under drive at end. PERFECT LIAR was closest to pace from start and closed with good energy after having no mishaps. HORNER WOOD was within striking distance, but hung after moving up. TAM O' SHANTER was held safe.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:46½. Off at once. SCROOGE, steadied while close up for half, came to inside to improve position, came through to take command and won easily. JELWELL was closest to pace of AUTUMN QUEST, was carried wide by latter entering stretch and could not resist winner while under pressure. AUTUMN QUEST set good pace and weakened after being displaced. ORINOCO was not a serious factor.

FIFTH RACE—Two miles and 70 yards. Purse, $5,000 added. The Exterminator Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:17. Off 3:17½. SHOT PUT, allowed to race on own courage for mile, came out for racing room, moved up to dispose of NAVY and won with speed in reserve. RUSSIA, a late developer, three quarters, improved position steadily on inside, moved up menacingly under pressure in stretch, but weakened suddenly. MEMORY BOOK was under strong restraint while racing within striking distance, but flattened out when placed to pressure. NAVY was rated for mile, took command and tired badly after being displaced.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:46. Off 3:46½. Winner, Mrs. E. C. Eastwood's br. g. (3), by Saxon—Vagrant. Trained by J. B. Hatfield. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:15.

BROWN SAXON took lead at once, was hard ridden while setting pace and held on gamely to resist CANTERUP. The latter was closest to pace from start and was wearing down winner gradually in final 20 yards. DE ICER was in first flight from beginning and closed with good energy. TROIS PJISTOLES closed gamely on outside. DUDIE was keen factor early and faded.

CONVILLE, within striking distance from start, took command leaving backstretch, was kept to hard drive and withstood repeated challenges of DIZZY B. in stretch run. SIR REG improved position steadily to stretch, but hung. PIRATE SHIP set good pace, but dropped back when displaced.

Selections at Pimlico

Deal Al:

Jockey F. A. Smith, who will pilot Col. Bradley's Bryan Station in the Futurity today, makes no concessions to the probabilities surrounding the favorites. Our Boots and Whirlaway. Smith argues that the Bradley colt is a fit and coming horse, not yet up to his peak and, compared with his leading rivals, a proven winner over the longer route of the Futurity. Strangely enough, this angle was also brought to the point by Trainer Ben Jones, who broached the issue earlier in the week. Jones expressed the opinion that on the basis of his present fitness Bryan Station is the horse that Whirlaway must fear. While nothing exceptional, Bryan Station's time of 1:45 1-5 for the mile and one-sixteenth in winning the Sapulding Lowe Jenkins at Laurel is noteworthy nonetheless because it duplicates the time of Bimelech in last year's Pimlico Futurity and compares favorably with Top Flight's record of 144 4-5, which has stood up ever since the distance was changed from a mile in 1929.

A good deal of interest hereabouts will center upon the outcome of Hash's engagement in the Westchester Handicap today. Trainer John Gaver has stated that if all goes well with the Greentree colt in his race at Empire City he may be considered a certain starter in the Riggs on Tuesday.

Col. E. R. Bradley will be host to a party in the clubhouse at luncheon today, the occasion, of course, being Bryan Station's venture in the Futurity. So far it's been three times a lucky gamble for the laird of Idle Hour who will doubtless recall his double with Blossom Time and Beau Butler in 1922 and 1923 and wonder if Bryan Station in 1940 can be doubled up with Bimelech in 1939.

With Roman and Parasang slated to go in Monday's feature, the Baltimore Autumn Handicap shapes up as a lively engagement between two of the season's outstanding sprinters, not to mention a trackful of able contention. Roman is already on hand and Parasang is scheduled to arrive tomorrow.

The steplechase course opened for the first time for training this morning but only a few of the local jumpers were worked over the brush.

According to Doc Nevins, veteran clocker, there are more better-grade horses working out at Pimlico than he has seen here in many years. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Double Back was only beaten a length by Graeme Cracker in his recent Laurel trial and indicates that he may be back to his best form. Winning Chance was no match for Polymellor last start, but looms as the principal contender in this contest. Bunny Baby has class and could be dangerous.

Second race—Bird Woman set the pace in her last race, being beaten inches by Miss Discovery and Cis Marion. She may stick it out this time. Abbots Maid was victorious over Big Event on an off track at Laurel and might be hard to beat if the going remains off. Haste Back won his last but moves up.

Third race—The Jones-Montpelier entry of Pine Tag and Santi Quaranti form what appears to be the winning combination in the jump event. The former won his last while Santi Quaranti raced well behind Broadside King. Quakerstreet was in the lead when he fell last start. Fatty can better his last.

Fourth race—Nordressa is another which showed a good effort behind Graeme Cracker at Laurel and if he runs back to that race should register in this field. A beaten favorite last start, Lady Infinite may be able to redeem herself. Hazel W. has been showing improvement and figures to be close.

Fifth race—Cherry Trifle dropped a nose verdict to the speedy Tedbriar at Laurel and general form suggests that the consistent campaigner is at his best. Milk Punch raced out of his class in New York, but merits a good chance in this company. Oversight should be close.

Sixth race—Whirlaway, winner of the Kentucky Breeders Stakes last month over Our Boots, figures to be up in time to catch the front-running Bryan Station. The latter won a stake at Laurel in fast time and rates as the chief contender. Our Boots to beat the others.

Seventh race—Beau James just failed to catch Early Morn in a recent New York outing and has a brand of speed which his contestants here should find hard to match. Equistar, after two corking good races at Laurel, is expected to offer stiffest opposition. Cherry Jam showed good form at Keeneland.

Eighth race—Histrionic, competing against $2,000 platers in New York, finished third, beaten a length and a half. Meeting performers of cheaper caliber today, he rates top figure. Strolling By won his last Keeneland race by three lengths, indicating that he will be very much in the running. Crius won at Laurel but was later proven to be stimulated.

Best bet—Cherry Trifle.

Hoyas Worried by Threat of Rain for Syracuse Game Today

Georgetown Faces Test In Syracuse

Weather May Hinder G. U. Offense on Speed; Aim for 22d Without Loss

By Jack Munhall
Post Staff Writer

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Like a harrowing ghost of the past, leaden skies heavy with the threat of rain and treacherous footing, leered down at Georgetown here tonight as the Hoyas girded themselves to extend their 2½-year undefeated football record against dangerous Syracuse tomorrow afternoon at Archbold Stadium.

Ominously reminiscent to Georgetown of last year's upset 13-13 with Syracuse's Orange eleven on a muddy, wind-swept field was the weather man's prediction of "cold and rain" on the tomorrow.

The Hoyas, 2-1 pregame betting favorites, would be rated at no better than 6 to 5 in the event of rain, so dependable is their offense on speed and precision, and so great an equalizer of football teams is Satan Mud.

Given advantageous weather conditions the Georgetown coaching staff tonight expressed their belief that Georgetown would be able to extend its great streak to 22 games without defeat despite the rapid improvement of Syracuse whose latest effort produced a 3-0 upset of Columbia.

Hoyas Are Ready

The Hilltop eleven is ready physically and mentally for what it considers by far its toughest assignment of the 1940 campaign. Any doubts that Head Coach Jack Hagerty and his assistants may have had of overconfidence rearing its ugly head in the Georgetown ranks was dispelled by the team's snappy final workout here this afternoon.

Onlookers at Archbold Stadium where the vale of Onondaga reaches into the eastern sky whistled their astonishment at the spirited antics of the squad of 36 Hoya huskies who whooped and hollered like a tribe of Tarzans as they hurried through their paces.

With a slight wind behind them, the Georgetown punters were getting amazing distance with their kicks. Mike Kopcik, the big junior end; Tackle Joe Daniels, and Backs Lou Falcone, Frank Dornfeld, Bill McLaughlin and Jack Spencer consistently booted 'em 50 yards and more. Several of the wind-tossed efforts of Kopcik soared 75 yards.

Following the 45-minute drill the Georgetown team and coaches looked in on a "blood and thunder" freshman game between the Syracuse and Colgate elevens and several were heard to murmur they hoped the Syracuse varsity wasn't as big as the Colgate Frosh who were kicking the little Orange around to the tune of 13-0 at half.

Both Georgetown and Syracuse are much improved over the teams that fought to the 13-13 tie here last year. The Hoyas bolstered with fine sophomore talent, are full 25 per cent better on offense and in reserves, while the Orange, with almost as many good backs as Georgetown, also boasts a stronger attack.

Still tomorrow's test does not loom as a high scoring fray unless the Hoyas are able to get the jump on the Orange and really pour it on before their foes can regain their equilibrium.

Hold Edge in Line

Certainly Syracuse does not figure to run wild against Georgetown's powerful, three-deep line which held New York University to a total of 11 yards rushing and rushed the Violets' vaunted forward passers so hard they were glad to get rid of the ball anywhere.

Undoubtedly the Hoyas possess a decided edge in the line where their starting seven will average slightly more than 202 pounds per man against 195 for Syracuse. There will be two changes in the Georgetown forward wall that started last week against New York U., big Al Blozis, 245-pound shotput champion, will replace Joe Daniels at right tackle, and 6-foot-5 210-pound Bill Wixted will supplant John Lascari at right end.

Among the notable backs to be turned loose tomorrow are the Hoyas' twin speed merchants, Senior Lou Ghecas and Sophomore Jack Doolan; Jules Koshlap, their crack forward passer and best all-around backfield performer, and Jim Castiglia, battering-ram fullback, and Syracuse's fleet Gerald Courtney, Joe Maines and Leland Morris, and Plunging Leo Canale, who single-handed gained 54 yards in one drive against Cornell.

Maines, who romped 98 yards with the kick-off opening the Syracuse-N. Y. U. game and then was withdrawn with injuries, is back in shape and is expected to make a big difference in the Syracuse attack. Morris, you will remember, is the youngster whose punting and field goal enabled the Orange to upset Columbia, 3-0, last week.

Probable line-ups:

Georgetown	Position.	Syracuse
Kopcik	L.E.	Dye
Fullilove	L.T.	Kinney
Ostinato	L.G.	Condon
Matusa	Center	Tice

Eagle Six Plays Exhibition Tonight

The Washington Eagles are to shift from their Montreal training base to Ottawa, Canada, tonight, where they are to meet the Ottawa Senators in an exhibition game.

Ottawa has twice defeated the Springfield professionals by large scores and will be favored over the Eagles, but not by any appreciable margin.

Coach Mackenzie of the Eagles emphasizes that he is using these matches as a medium through which to test his players and that the results necessarily will not be any criterion of the strength or the weakness of his club.

The Important Thing Here Is De Correvont's Ankle

Northwestern Trainer Carl Erickson looked over Bill De Correvont's ankle in Evanston yesterday and still couldn't decide whether the backfield star will play today against Minnesota. Looking on are Red Hahenstein and Loe Lokang. The latter will play for De Correvont if necessary

Lemerise Rolls 164 Game At Ice Palace

Best Commercial League Set Turned in By Hoyt With 403

Lemerise, Daily News, and Hoyt, City Motors, were the shining lights of the Chevy Chase Commercial meet last night at the Ice Palace. Lemerise took individual game with 164 while Hoyt blistered the mapleways to reach a high set of 403. The Ramblers quintet again led in team high counts with 648-1,783 and are out in front of the pack, with Hot Shoppes the runner-up.

BROOKLAND

Lois Gladding was the star of the Brookland Ladies meet with highs of 137-377 even though her quintet lost the odd game to Gartrell's Champs. Ann Meca, Gartrell's team, had near highs of 129-338. The Gulf Service girls, with Miss Sebastian's 315, took all games from the Willis Esso lasses. Ruth King, for the losers, had a set of 313. The Gulf Service team also took highs for quintets with 502-1,459.

ARCADIA

Mary Hanagan, the Princes, was the leading lady in the Ladies' Independent meet with a game of 139 and set of 382. The Kidwell's Senators won all three games from opponents to go out in front by six games with the aid of Helen O'Dea, who had near-highs of 129-349.

WISEMAN HIGH

D. Wiseman, City Bank, was the individual hero of the Treasury Department meet with highs for game and set of 149-397, respectively. The Chief Clerks took team high game with 597 as Disbursing rolled high count for set of 1,654. Bookkeeping and Warrants and City Bank won all three games.

PENN RECREATION

Slifer, Fidelity and Deposit, had a tripleheader strike at the Insurance bowling to earn high individual game for the evening of 160. Bean, Leroy Mark, was better man, however, over the three games for he took high set with a splendid 394. The Ellett & Short lads took team highs with 582-1,676. Both Leroy Mark and A. H. Baker whitewashed opponents.

Mioland and Hash Pitted in Empire Feature Today

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 1.—New York's first racing season under the parimutuel system of wagering closes tomorrow at Empire City with the $20,000 Westchester Handicap topping a card that includes two other rich stakes.

C. S. Howard's 3-year-old Mioland and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash, both of which declined invitations to run in the Pimlico Special today, are top weights in the mile and three-sixteenths of the Westchester, which has attracted a field of ten. Hash, assigned 122 pounds, has shown so poorly of late that he is given little consideration, but Mioland, alloted 119, figures to be well played along with William Woodward's entry of Foxbrough and Dusky Fox, the Saratoga Stable's improved Volitant and Hal Price Headley's 3-year-old filly, Salaminia.

Volitant also has been named for the 6 furlongs of the $5,000 New Rochelle Handicap and his trainer may choose to send him against such capable sprinters as Little Risk, Parasang and Doubt Not.

Northwestern Tests Greatness Of Galloping Gophers Today

National and Western Conference Title Hopes Of Minnesota Depend on This Game; 48,000 Expected for Battle

By the Associated Press

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 1.—Northwestern's Wildcats tomorrow will test the voltage of another gridiron dynamo from Minnesota—long one of the great power plants of football.

These undefeated and untied elevens collide in Dyche Stadium before 48,000 spectators in a battle which may (1) make or break their National and Western Conference championship hopes and (2) furnish an answer to the question: Is Minnesota laying the foundation of another football empire such as the Gophers built from 1933-1936?

Northwestern has whipped Syracuse, Ohio State, Wisconsin and Indiana. Minnesota has downed these slightly tougher opponents: Washington, Nebraska, Ohio State and Iowa. And some observers already are comparing these 1940 Gophers to those great elevens which galloped for Minnesota in 1934, '35 and '36.

All-Time Gopher Team

Some fans regard that 1934 Minnesota team as an all-time Gopher eleven. It won 8 straight games, scoring 270 points to 26 for the opposition. It placed Frank Larson, end, and Pug Lund, back, on the Associated Press All-America. It played a big part in a Gopher winning streak which reached 21 games and ended with Northwestern's 6-0 upset victory on a muddy field in 1936.

Minnesota apparently has the reserve strength necessary for success next season. In its heavy line, which will outweigh the Wilcat forwards 25 pounds per man, are two juniors who see regular service at the tackles—Urban Odson and Fred Vant Hull. A sophomore, Dick Wildung, has been playing great ball in the line, as has Sophomore Bill Daley, a fullback.

Smith Is Wheelhorse

Minnesota tomorrow will bid for victory with an offense built around Bruce Smith, a second-year man, and George Franck, speedy and versatile senior. They comprise as fine a backfield twosome as any in the Midwest and to win Northwestern must shackle both of these stars.

Northwestern is handicapped because its all-around ace, Bill De Correvont, will not be ready. He may see some service, but limped badly all week on an ankle hurt two weeks ago against Wisconsin.

Pro Badminton Stars in Special Match Thursday

A pair of the world's finest professional badminton players, Ken Davidson and Hugh Forgie, and two of this section's outstanding amateur women players, Wanda Bergman and Patsy Donovan, will team up next Thursday at Heurich gym in a special series of matches.

Davidson and Forgie recently returned from a 38-week engagement at the Palladum Theater in London, where their art was favorably noted by King George and Queen Elizabeth. Mrs. Bergman is a former national doubles champion and runner-up in both women's singles and mixed doubles. Miss Donovan is ranked third among the country's racqueters at present.

Tickets for the event, which will include singles, doubles and mixed doubles, are on sale at all badminton clubs, sports stores and the A. A. A.

D.C. Nimrod Bags 200-Lb. Wild Boar On Tennessee Hunt

By the Associated Press

Tellico Plains, Tenn., Nov. 1.—In the wild and rain-drenched Bald River section of the Cherokee National Forest, H. J. Anslinger, of Washington, D. C., brought down a 200-pound wild boar today in the second day of the bear and boar hunt sponsored by State and Federal governments.

Anslinger, chief narcotic agent in the Washington division, killed the huge tusker with one well-placed rifle shot while hunting with Ralph Oyler, of Detroit, who bagged a boar yesterday.

Virginia Football Spotlight Focused On V.M.I.-W.-M.

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Nov. 1.—A fair cool day was promised tomorrow for Virginia's No. 1 football game of the day—the clash between "Big Six" champion V. M. I. and Coach Carl Voyles' resurgent Indians of William and Mary.

The Indians, who probably will be without the services of Center Bill Goodlow and Sophomore Back Johnny Korczowski, rested today at Natural Bridge, while the Cadets prepared for the homecoming task by a light drill on the parade ground in order to avoid cutting up the wet football field.

Violets Name Center Captain for Today

He was elected by the NYU squad of 35 players, which stopped off here today on the way to the game. The team went through a limbering-up drill at Washington University's Francis Field before entraining for Columbia this afternoon.

Anything Is Possible In Cornell-Lion Game

Big Red Favored, However; Writer Sets Out to Check Stories On Snavely, Strength of East Leaders

By Whitney Martin
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Nov. 1.—We are just about to roll off to Ithaca, where the school is steeped with tradition and the hills are even steeper, and before we return we hope to learn whether it's true what they say about Snavely and his Cornell football team.

We hope to find out if Mr. Snavely really uses a one-if-by-land-and-two-if-by-sea system of bench signals to tell his quarterback that the quarterback hasn't sense enough to call his own plays, and if the Cornell team is great because its members run on every play like they had just heard the dinner bell.

We have been accused of holding Mr. Snavely up as a hero, a guy who can do no wrong, which isn't true. We think he is a good coach; one of the best. We don't approve of bench signals as long as it is contrary to the rules, but it is anything but an uncommon practice and we doubt that in 99 cases out of 100 it would have anything to do with the outcome of a game. Those kids out there know what time it is and probably can pick their plays as well as anybody.

A Saturday Off

Cornell plays Columbia tomorrow, and on the comparative records it should be a Saturday afternoon off as far as the Big Red is concerned, although it had better not be an off Saturday.

The amazing Mr. Lou Little has done some fine things with amazingly little material at Columbia, and he's another Bob Zuppke when it comes to pointing a team for one particular game.

That doesn't mean we expect Columbia to win. In fact, we wouldn't be surprised if Cornell rolled up touchdowns like snowballs. Neither would we be surprised if the Big Red was hard-pressed to win. It's that kind of a ball game, with two extremes possible.

It has been pointed out that Cornell covers the ground because the team gallops as a unit and blocks as a unit, and this co-operative blocking probably is the reason practically any of the backs can take the ball and run, although its likewise true that a ball carrier must have something to gain ground even if he had a mowing machine in front of him.

The belittlers often try to puncture the reputation of a star ball carrier by saying he wouldn't get to the line of scrimmage without so-and-so blocking for him.

They said that about Red Grange, with his Britton. They say it about Tommy Harmon with his Forest Evashevski. Not detracting from the admitted ability of Britton and Evashevski to shovel a path, the fact remains other backs have had fine blocking, yet have been no Granges or Harmons.

Warren Takes Oath of Office As Comptroller

New 'Watchdog of U. S. Treasury' Ends 16-Year Career in the House

Lindsay Carter Warren, of North Carolina, yesterday closed his 16-year career in the House of Representatives, and started a new 15-year assignment as Comptroller General of the United States.

Warren took the oath of his new office, which gives him the professional nickname "Watchdog of the Treasury" before a group of his friends from the Hill, from Government agencies and his home State.

The oath was administered by Associate Justice Fred Vinson, of the United States Court of Appeals for the District. Vinson, former Representative from Kentucky, worked with Warren on the President's reorganization plan, and the two have long been close friends.

Warren declined to discuss any possible new policies in the General Accounting Office, and said simply that he intended to learn the job from the ground up first. To do it, he said, he'll be at his desk every day as long as anyone else in the organization.

The new comptroller general succeeds Fred H. Brown, former New Hampshire Senator, who resigned in June because of illness, after serving actively but eight months, and later appointed a member of the Tariff Commission.

Warren has long ranked as one of the President's closest House advisers, and his stepping into the new office has been a welcome move for chiefs of some of the New Deal agencies who have tangled frequently with Assistant Comptroller Richard N. Elliott, and the first comptroller general, John Raymond McCarl.

Elliott, appointed in 1931, has been acting comptroller general for about four of his nine years in the office.

Warren's major assignment now will be to keep an eye on the way the Government agencies spend the Nation's new defense millions, a job for which he went through extensive training as chairman of the House Committee on Accounts.

Among those who came to see Warren take the oath of office were Gen. Albert I. Cox, Garland Ferguson, Federal trade commissioner; Dr. R. D. W. Connor, archivist, Congressional associates, and division chiefs in the Accounting Office.

With Warren, Dudley W. Bagley, former chief of North Carolina's rural electrification program, took office as second assistant to the Comptroller. Also starting to work with Warren's staff were his private secretary, Leonora B. Kelley, former clerk for the House Accounts Committee, and Rena Harding, who has been in Warren's Washington, N. C., office.

Historic Georgetown Presbyterian Church Opens Its 160th Anniversary Celebration

160TH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION—Miss Lucy Allen, member of Georgetown Presbyterian Church, greets the Rev. Robert M. Skinner, former pastor, as 160th anniversary celebration of church opens in Cissel Chapel. At left are Dr. John Bailey Kelly, present pastor, and Mrs. Kelly.

Historic Georgetown Presbyterian Church last night stirred with memories of other days as past and present members opened its 160th birthday celebration.

While formal speeches were taboo, the Rev. Robert M. Skinner, former pastor, now of Pottsville, Pa., couldn't resist vocally expressing his joy at being back among old friends.

Dr. John Bailey Kelly, who two years ago yesterday came as pastor after serving several years as president of Emporia College, Emporia, Kans., presided at the reception in Cissell Chapel, 3115 P Street Northwest, and read greetings from brother clergymen in Washington and other places.

Robert G. Leetch, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Baltimore, and whom Elder S. A. Swindells, of the Georgetown Presbyterian Church, last night recalled as having once been his Sunday school scholar, was among those who came.

The Rev. Mr. Leetch's brother, Frank, also an elder, and Mrs. Leetch were in the receiving line at the function with Dr. and Mrs. Kelly; the Rev. and Mrs. Skinner, Elder H. A. Spilman, Elder F. L. Knoblock and Mrs. Knoblock, Elder John Reeside and others.

Dr. Alfred Barrows, pastor emeritus of Eastern Presbyterian Church, and Dr. George Cummings, retired local Presbyterian cleric, also were present at the function, for which music was provided by Miss Nancy Poore, organist and choir director, and George Graves.

The aniversary worship service tomorrow at 7:45 p. m. in the church auditorium will draw District Presbyterian leaders. The Rev. Albert Evans, associate pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will read the Psalter; the Rev. William I. Campbell will speak on behalf of the Washington City Presbytery, of which he is president; the Rev. J. Hillman Hollister, pastor of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, for the Washington Ministerial Union, and the Rev. F. Bland Tucker, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, 3238 O Street Northwest, for Georgetown churches. A special musical program has been arranged.

Organized in the fall of 1780 by the Rev. Stephen Bloomer Balch, who served for more than 50 years, the congregation, originally known as the Bridge Street Church, was chartered by an act of Congress, and the charter signed by Thomas Jefferson. It was moved in 1866 to its present site, becoming the West Street Church. Later, when the streets were renamed and Georgetown became part of Washington, its present name was given.

It is the local mother church of its denomination.

Blount Pleads Guilty in Threat On President

Ordered to Jail Pending Sentence; Faces 5-Year Term

Edward DeRoulhac Blount, 30, pleaded guilty in the District Court yesterday to an indictment charging that he twice threatened to kill President Roosevelt.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts ordered the socially prominent Blount jailed pending sentence, which probably will be imposed Friday. Blount has been free on a $5,000 bond.

Attorney James F. Reilly urged the court, in determining the sentence, to consider the views of a psychiatrist who examined Blount, that the defendant is "emotionally unstable" and a "constitutional psychopath." The law provides a maximum penalty of $1,000 fine or five years in jail, or both, for threatening to kill the President.

Blount pleaded guilty shortly after he was arrested, but changed to a not guilty plea when he was formally arraigned on the indictment. He withdrew the not guilty plea to make an attack on the legality of the indictment which was overruled Thursday.

After Blount pleaded guilty when rearraigned yesterday, an indictment charging that he shot a boy here a year ago was dismissed.

Commissioners Appoint D. C. Defense Board

A committee of nine yesterday was appointed by the Commissioners to serve as the District of Columbia Council of Defense to coordinate and cooperate with the National Defense Council.

The three commissioners will serve as ex officio members on the council. Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, was named executive vice-chairman and will be the active head of the local organization.

Other members on the council are Maj. Ernest W. Brown, who will serve as chairman of the civil protection committee; Robert E. Bondy, chairman of the health, welfare and consumer interest committee; John B. Gordon, chairman, housing, works and facilities committee; Guy W. Pearson, chairman, human resources and skills committee; and a person yet to be designated by the Washington Board of Trade, as chairman of the industrial resources and production committee.

Appointment of the council was at the suggestion of Frank Bane, director, division of State and local cooperation, advisory commission to the Council of National Defense. Bane stated he was "fully aware of the fact that the commissioners' problems with respect to national defense were in many ways different from the problems of Governors and that the amount of industry in the District is small."

Bane said the civil-protection committee under the superintendent of police should have as vice chairman a man who would "represent the protectors of civil liberties."

Each committee chairman will appoint a vice chairman and a group of members.

One of the first matters the council will take up is establishment of a home guard for the District, which, according to the corporation counsel, will require legislation.

Cardozo Ties Armstrong, 0-0, Before 2,000

Teams Wage a Tough Battle to Gain Edge In City Title Series

Playing heads-up football before a crowd of 2,000 rabid fans, Cardozo and Armstrong elevens, striving for an edge in the city colored scholastic championship, fought to a scoreless tie yesterday at Griffith Stadium.

Both teams entered the contest confident of victory. Breaks of the game favored Armstrong, but Cardozo fought a determined battle, smeared a score of beautiful passes by Lineberger to "Bulldog" Williams and, with their backs to the wall in the final period, held the opposition.

Outstanding in the game were the diminutive Harry Smith, Cardozo halfback, and Joe Lineberger, Armstrong quarter, whose long passes were a constant menace.

Previously defeated by Dunbar in the championship series, Cardozo, by holding Armstrong to a tie, prevented the final Dunbar-Armstrong game on Armistice Day from being anything but a clear decision. Should Dunbar win that game, the Poets will have the championship undisputed, with two games to their credit. Should they lose, Armstrong will be unrivaled, with a game and a tie to its credit against Dunbar's game and a loss.

Wake Forest Wins Over G. W.

Mayberry and Edwards worked the ball to the 15, stopped momentarily by Tom Grady's fine defensive play, and Mayberry romped around end for the third touchdown. Polansky's kick was wide. Kapriva blocked Wilamoski's punt later in the period but a 15-yard penalty from the 28-yard line ended any scoring notions.

Polanski gained 96 yards, Gallovich 47 yards and Mayberry 36 for the visitors while Batson and Fedora compiled two thirds of the G. W. yardage with 38 and 29 yards, respectively.

Gallovich was the goat of the Deacons play in the first quarter but G. W. failed to take advantage of several misplays. Early in the period the Wake Forest ace dropped deep in his own territory to kick but he apparently thought he didn't have time to get the ball off and he elected to run it back, just making the line of scrimmage on his own 47.

Gallovich then let Wilamoski's punt roll toward the end zone after the Colonials failed to gain and the ball finally dribbled out on the four-yard line but the Deacons escaped without damage as Tony kicked out and G. W. couldn't gain coming back. Gallovich then fumbled but a teammate, Jimmy Ringgold, recovered and saved a loss. It was strictly a defensive quarter until, first Wilamoski for the Colonials and then J. V. Pruitt of the Deacons took turns advancing into opposing territory at the quarter. Tony Barauskas and Frank August turned in a pair of fine defensive plays in the initial period, the former tossing Gallovich for a 10-yard loss and August nailing the Deacon back on the 9-yard line after one of Wilamoski's high punts.

Rangers, Leafs Open National Hockey Season

War Fails to Dampen Spirits and Big Year Is Anticipated

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 1.—The National Hockey League opens its second war-time season tomorrow night at Toronto with the New York Rangers, winners of the Stanley Cup last spring, opposing Conny Smythe's Maple Leafs.

Four other members of the seven-team circuit swing into action Sunday. At Montreal, the Canadiens clash with the powerful Boston Bruins and at Detroit, the Red Wings entertain the New York Americans. The Chicago Black Hawks will not start the season until November 7, when they oppose the Americans on their home rinks.

The league owners were a bit apprehensive last season about the effect the war would have on hockey but apparently they were satisfied with the success of the 1939-40 campaign for there has been no great retrenchments. Since the season closed last spring, a large number of the players, most of whom are Canadians, have gone through a period of military training in the Canadian militia.

Off past performances, the experts pick the Rangers, Bruins and Leafs again to fight it out for championship honors. Their line-ups will be much the same as last year with nary a change in the Rangers, who piled up a record-making run of 19 consecutive wins and then whipped Toronto four games to two in the finals of the Stanley Cup play-offs.

Tiny Thompson will be missing from the Detroit nets; Coach Paul Thompson is strong on his youthful Black Hawks outfit while both the Americans and Canadiens are coming up with a number of youngsters.

Bishop Kroll Finds Liberia More Exciting

Formula for fun:

To one part artist, one part zoologist and one part bishop, add a sprinkling of reminiscence, a dash of politics and a few jokes—the older the better.

Result—a gay time, as was demonstrated yesterday when Edward Bruce, chief of the Government's section of Fine Arts; Dr. William M. Mann, director of the Zoo, and the Rev. Leopold Kroll, Episcopal Bishop of Liberia, got together at lunch in the Zoo restaurant.

Bishop Kroll is paying a short visit to Washington but he's itching to get back to the thousands of African jungle tribesmen whose destinies he controls to a great degree.

"In Liberia," he says, "you don't know what's going to happen next The life is, well, more exciting than it is in the States."

He told Bruce about long treks into the jungle to minister to aborigines and Bruce came back with a yarn about training snakes to catch rats in the Philippines. Then Dr. Mann described his first sight of the Bishop, wading ashore from a capsized canoe, followed by hearty laughs all 'round.

Over six feet tall, constructed along the fullback lines and possessing a fetching sense of humor, the Bishop has spent four years in the Negro Republic of Liberia, from which Dr. Mann returned last August with a shipload of wild animals.

The first meeting between Bishop Leopold and Dr. Mann was in Monrovia, the capital city.

The Bishop and Mrs. Kroll come back to the States every third year so he can attend the triennial Bishops' convention and fill speaking engagements. This year the meeting was in Kansas City.

Leopold, jr., his eldest son, has been doing missionary work in Liberia nearly 10 years. Of the two others, one works for a New York banking firm and the other is in business in Haiti. The Bishop sails for Hatiti November 14 and will be back in Liberia this winter.

The Episcopal mission which he heads has established hospitals, schools, recreation centers and other facilities for the tribesmen, some of whom have eight or ten wives.

Rockne '1-2-3-Hike' System Is Adopted To Improve Golf

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—The Notre Dame shift with its command of "one, two, three, hike" is being used by Bobby Cruickshank, Country Club of Virginia golf pro, on golfers who won't relax.

Washington Players Resurrect Rip Van Winkle at Central High

Washington Irving's American legend of Rip Van Winkle came to life last night as more than 40 District playground youngsters joined with the Washington Players to present the story of the lovable drunkard's 20-year sleep.

Mountain sprites, village folk and the little men of the mountain unfolded the classic plot from Central High's auditorium stage, three months after the production was postponed because of rain at the Sylvan Theater. Outside, it was raining again.

Sponsored by the Community Center and Playground Department, the play's cast of folk in the Kaatskill Mountain village was composed largely of children from the Columbia Recreation Center and the Cook and Bancroft Playgrounds grounds.

Principals were played by Bess Davis Schreiner's Washington Players and two actors from Baltimore's Vagabond Players. The players, who were celebrating their eighth anniversary on the Washington stage, included Anne Ives, Frances Brunt, J. Edmond Veitch, John Van Sikken, William Kilborn, S. Carlton Ayers, George H. Lynn, Hugh C. Smith, Wade A. Robinson, Joanne Latta, Tommy Hoadley, Selma Inoff and Wade Robinson.

Rayburn Predicts Landslide Victory For Roosevelt

President Roosevelt will be re-elected with "the largest labor vote of any candidate ever running for President", Speaker Rayburn, of Texas, told more than 500 Democrats at a rally of all Arlington County Democratic organizations last night at Washington Lee High School. The address was preceded by a torchlight parade.

"This Administration", Rayburn said, "has done more for labor than any other." He added that the popular and electoral votes for Mr. Roosevelt Tuesday would be "overwhelming".

The defense program, he said, "is going ahead 100 per cent despite all criticism" and reminded those who predicted the President would involve the country in war to assure his reelection that the election is only four days off "and we're not in the war yet." He was introduced by Representative Howard Smith.

Civic Leaders Honor King At Luncheon

The National Capital is the "best governed city in the world," Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, retiring chairman of the Senate District Committee, said at a testimonial luncheon given for him yesterday by the Commissioners at the Raleigh Hotel.

Citing his 28 years' experience in District legislative affairs, Senator King pointed out that Washington has been free of corruption and on the whole has been fortunate in the appointments of its Commissioners.

Senator King was praised for his consultation of civic leaders and his active interest in District matters by A. J. Driscoll, president of the Mid-City Citizens Association; Evan Tucker, president of the Northeast Citizens Association; Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, and Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Commissioner John Russell Young, who acted as toastmaster, said that the luncheon was intended to bring together some of the most representative groups of the city to pay their respects to Senator King.

"Had we wished to have a gathering of his friends," he added, "we could have filled Griffith Stadium."

Among the guests of the Commissioners, besides the speakers, were:

Washington R. & E. Settlement Plan Seen Effective

Holders of 81 per cent of the Anacostia & Potomac River Railroad first 5 per cent bonds and 86 per cent of the City & Suburban Railway of Washington first 5 per cent bonds have deposited their holdings in assent to the plan proposed by the Capital Transit Co. and the Washington Railway & Electric Co., it was learned yesterday.

These deposits exceed the minimum requireemnt of 80 per cent necessary to make the plan effective, but any depositor who filed up to October 1 may withdraw his assent anytime until November 8.

The time limit for deposit, originally fixed as last October 1, has been extended to December 2. The plan also has been modified to permit the depositaries to collect the August 1 and October 1 coupons and to pay holders of deposit certificates the interest on their bonds at the modified rate of 3¾ per cent in respect to interest accrued since last April 1.

Under the plan, the Capital Transit Co. and Washington Railway & Electric Co. are asking holders of the two types of bonds to assent to a modification of the indenture. Capital Transit would become the obligor and Washington Railway would become the guarantor. Maturities would be extended to 1951 and interest rates reduced from 5 to 3¾ per cent.

The offer has been made as a proposed settlement of a suit.

New Compensation Plan

Washington's regiment of life insurance agents is studying a proposed new system of compensation which would reduce the initial commission for policy sales but extend the period for which subsequent small commissions are paid.

The new system was suggested recently at the annual meeting in Chicago of the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau. It was drafted by a special committee of life insurance executives after a year's study in cooperation with experts of the Sales Research Bureau. The plan attempts to attain the following objectives:

1—The agent should be able to earn an income selling life insurance at least as large as that which a person of equal ability would be able to earn in other lines of activity.

2—Business having a high degree of persistency should yield a larger degree of return than at present as compared with business of poor persistency.

3 The commission schedule should as far as practicable be arranged to smooth out fluctuations in the agents' income.

4—It should also provide reasonable compensation to the agent for service rendered to policyholders during his active service in the business.

5—A margin should be available to provide a retirement income to agents who have made a reasonable contribution to the business over a period of time.

The survey predicted that production would hold steady for "the next few weeks," after which the direction would be downward.

D. C. Clearings at 11-Year Top In October and Ten Months

Spurting to $135,619,533, Washington bank clearings in October reached the best level for that month since 1929. The gain was $27,387,133 over the like month of 1939 and $25,485,299 over the previous month this year.

For the first ten months of 1940 check transactions here aggregated $1,142,363,739, also a new high for 11 years, according to George H. Bright, manager of the local clearing house association. During the same period of 1939, clearings totaled $989,860,873. The increase this year, therefore, exceeds $150,000,000.

Wheat Uneven On Preelection Nervousness

Early Gains Erased, Prices End Steady To Slightly Lower

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 1.—The wheat market was beset with preelection uneasiness today as traders cashed profits and evened up accounts preparatory to assuming positions pending Tuesday's vote.

Prices fluctuated nervously over a range of more than a cent. Early gains ranging up to ⅜ cent were wiped out after midsession and at times quotations showed net losses of as much as a cent. Closing figures were unchanged to ⅜ lower compared with yesterday, December 84-84⅛, May 83⅛-83¼.

With commercial milling and flour trade activity at a low ebb and not expected to revive until after election, the market's course was dependent almost entirely on small scale orders placed by dealers who followed the trend of securities or covered previous short sales and adjusted accounts. Open interest in wheat is now the smallest in years, reflecting in part reluctance of dealers to participate in the trade in view of domestic and international uncertainties.

Corn advanced ⅝-¾ cent at one stage, reflecting a good demand from shipping interests, but closed only ¼-½ net higher, December 59¾, May 60⅞. Oats were unchanged to ⅛ up; soybeans 1⅛-2⅜ higher; rye ½-⅝ up and lard unchanged to 3 lower.

Business Highlights

Prepared for The Post By Standard Statistics

Construction Costs Rising

Following a period of relative stability between October, 1939, and May, 1940, building costs have turned upward. Both wage rates and material prices have risen, with the gains in the latter somewhat the more pronounced. However, the increase in prices has been largely restricted to lumber, and as this development has drawn a sharp rebuke from the NDAC price-control division, building circles assume that further marked gains are unlikely. The labor situation is more difficult to appraise, as forecasts here must make allowances for the fact that better paying jobs are opening up in numerous fields. It may be that the building trades will need to raise their rates in order to get or retain necessary workers. This angle will bear close watching. Any sharp advance in building labor costs might interfere rather seriously with construction volumes, particularly in the residential field.

Cement Shipments Increase

After lagging during most of the first half, cement shipments rose in July and August by a sufficient amount to lift the total for the first eight months about 2 per cent above that for the corresponding 1939 period. Private works more than offset the sizable decline in public works consumption. And all indications are that the uptrend will, subject to seasonal considerations, carry well into if not clear through 1941. The work on defense plants thus far represents a bare beginning. No figures on the amount of construction now in progress are to be had, but the Defense Commission is authority for the statement that a great many of the needed armament plants have not yet been authorized, and that financing has not yet been arranged for a substantial portion of the building that has received official sanction.

Army Blanket Prices Raised

Indications that the woolen goods producers are adopting a more realistic attitude with respect to Army business were contained in the latest batch of bids on Army blanket contracts. Prices were 30 to 50 cents per blanket above those paid for the previous lot. That figures as an increase of from 4 per cent to 8 per cent, and should go a long way toward establishing this phase of the trade's operations on a profitable basis.

London Money Rates

London, Nov. 1 (AP).—Money, 1 per cent. Discount rates: Short bills, 1⅛ per cent; three-month bills, 1⅛-1⅛. Bar silver, 23½d, unchanged. (Equivalent 42.62 cents.) Bar gold, 168s, unchanged. (Equivalent $33.85.) Exchange $4.03.

Rail Spending Nears 10-Year High Level

Equipment Buying Reported 32 Per Cent Above Last Year

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 1.—Stimulated traffic coincident with national rearmament is bulging railroad budget requirements to near the highest level of the decade, a survey of developments in this rail center indicated today.

With freight traffic expanding contraseasonally to the best volume of the year, analysis of recent expenditures for equipment in anticipation of prospective needs to speed the defense program showed that more than half a billion dollars have been sent so far in 1940.

32% Gain this Year

A compilation of statistics by Railway Age showed purchases up to September 1 amounted to $492,466,000, an increase of 32 per cent compared with the corresponding 1939 period.

This outlay for equipment and materials was the largest for any similar period since 1930, except 1937, and compared with eight months' purchases of $917,000,000 in 1929, $674,000,000 in 1930 and $661,000,000 in 1937.

Aggregate railroad purchases including fuel amounted to $669,815,000 in the first eight months, or 24 per cent greater than in the 1939 period.

Expected to Continue

Rail officials expressed belief the high level of freight traffic will continue at least for some weeks to come. Freight loadings for the week ended last Tuesday totaled 837,651 cars, an increase of about 3 per cent compared with the previous week and about 1 per cent compared with a year ago.

Principal Western railroads radiating from Chicago are now completing plans for purchase of 1941 equipment requirements. The Chicago and North Western plans to buy 16,000 tons of rail and fastenings, the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific 20,000 tons, and the Chicago Rock Island and Pacific 35,000 tons of bridge steel and other reconditioning items. The Chicago Burlington and Quincy and Illinois Central have not as yet made known any portion of their 1941 rail purchase plans. The Santa Fe this week announced plans to spend $12,000,000 on cars, locomotives and rails.

Shipments aggregated 283,662,000 feet, which was 5 per cent greater than the previous week, and 6 per cent greater than last year's corresponding week.

Orders booked during the week were 285,505,000 feet, which was 10 per cent greater than the previous week, and 45 per cent greater than the corresponding week last year.

Capital Area Store Sales Spurt 21%

District Leads U. S. In Extent of Gain In Oct. 26 Week

Department store sales in the Richmond district, which includes Washington, registered a 21 per cent gain in the week ended October 26 as compared with the corresponding week last year, the Federal Reserve Board reported last night. This was the largest increase of any Reserve district in the country.

Sales for all districts averaged 6 per cent larger than in the like 1939 week. The average gain for the four weeks ended October 26 over the similar period last year was 4 per cent for the Nation.

Comparisons for the week ended October 26 with a year ago, by Federal Reserve districts, follows:

Increases—Boston 7, New York 15, Philadelphia 14, Cleveland 7, Richmond 21, Atlanta 9 and Chicago 4 per cent.

Decreases—St. Louis 4, Kansas City 9, and Dallas 1 per cent.

Extra Dividend Of 25c Voted by N. J. Standard Oil

New York, No. 1 (AP).—Directors of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey today declared an extra dividend of 25 cents a share, a reduction from the 50 cents extra paid in June because of serious curtailment of European business and declining prices in the domestic market.

These factors "also led to the budgeting of minimum capital expenditures over next year," the company announced.

The extra dividend, plus the regular semi-annual dividend of 50 cents, will be paid December 16 to holders of record November 15.

The management "has faced an ever-growing number of complications as the tide of war has swept over Europe," the company added. "Our European business . . . in some countries has practically ceased.

"This situation naturally reflects itself in current earnings, which will be considerably less for the last half of 1940 than were reported for the first half of the year." W. S. Farish, president, estimated first half earnings at around $85,000,000 in July.

"In the domestic market, fortunately, the company has enjoyed an increased volume of business but price declines in recent months have depressed earnings below previously prevailing levels."

Frisco Authorized To Pay Back Interest

St. Louis, Nov. 1 (AP).—Payment of $1,998,443 in back interest on bonds of the St. Louis-San Francisco (Frisco) Railroad was authorized today by Federal District Judge George H. Moore.

The trustees, James M. Kurn and John G. Lonsdale, testified at a hearing that the railroad would have about $7,300,000 in cash on hand after the payment was made and after taking out a working fund of $1,200,000 for current operations.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—All classes of livestock held steady today, hog and sheep trading was active, but cattle were slow. With fed steers and yearlings as well as better-grade fed heifers very scarce. Salable receipts of all classes were very light, hog arrivals amounting to 6,000, cattle to 1,000 and sheep to 1,000. Although hogs held steady with yesterday's average the top was at 6.15, or 5 cents below the early top established yesterday, as a result of the weakness that developed in later trade. Best pork loins advanced 50 cents to 13.50 per hundredweight.

London Stocks

London, Nov. 1 (AP).—Security buyers, cheered by news of delay in the Italian advance into Greece, renewed demand for British government bonds and selected stocks today. Gains in the gilt-edge group ranged to ¼ point. Support also was influenced by the probability that the sterling proceeds of recently requisitioned Canadian securities would be diverted to government issues.

Provincial support buoyed domestic rails after unsteadiness earlier this week. Oils tended upward, although Trinidad stocks wavered under profit-taking. Further gains spotted the gold shares.

In the industrial section, colliery shares were marked up on announcement of increased coal prices. Elsewhere, changes were limited to a few pence in either direction. Japanese loans declined 1 point in the foreign bond market.

Sugar Futures

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—World sugar futures slipped ½ to 2 points today as scattered liquidation revealed indifferent buying interests. Sales totaled 1,950 tons: December, 76½¢; March, 82¢.

Unable to Resist Profit-Taking, Stocks Turn Uneven at Close; Turnover Continues Brisk

New York, Nov. 1.—Traders cashed profits on the stock market today and an early bulge of fractions to a point or more for leading steels, utilities, rails and specialties turned into irregularity at the close. Dealings, fast in the forenoon on the extension of Thursday's brisk rally, dwindled in the home stretch but the day's turnover topped the million-share mark for the second time since September 5, and was one of the largest since last June. Transfers of 1,258,905 compared with 1,343,960 the day before.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 45.8 after being up three days in a row. At mid-day the composite was up .2. It was a broad market with 856 individual issues changing hands against 846 yesterday.

Many customers, brokers said, were unable to resist the urge to convert some of their paper gains into real money as the week-end approached although the majority still were optimistic for business and a bit more hopeful of political trends.

At the same time, handicaps were seen in the flow of quarterly statements which stressed the effect of mounting taxes on corporation earnings. While war tension seemed to have eased somewhat, most realized European upsets again could become an important market factor.

There were 37 new highs for 1940 in evidence when stocks were rising. Among these were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Crucible, Great Northern and Chesapeake & Ohio. All but "Big Steel" ended slightly under water.

Among items considered in boardrooms were: This week's motor car production touched a peak since 1937; early reporting railroads disclosed freight loadings in the first few days of this week showed contra-seasonal improvement; North American announced the best third quarter electricity sales in the concern's history, but net for the period was under that of 1939 due to higher taxes; next week's steel mill operations were expected to maintain a near-capacity rate, and retail store sales for the Nation continued to hold well above a year ago.

Standard Oil of New Jersey dipped 1½ to 34⅞ when directors voted a 25-cent extra against a previous 50-cent payment in addition to the regular dividend.

Ending on the upside were Republic Steel, General Motors, North American, Consolidated Edison, Public Service of New Jersey, Anaconda, Dow Chemical, Union Carbide, American Airlines, Glenn Martin, Boeing, International Harvester and Caterpillar Tractor.

Declines were recorded for Chrysler, United States Rubber, Douglas Aircraft, duPont, Westinghouse, Western Union, Santa Fe, Eastman Kodak and Montgomery Ward.

On a spotty Curb mild advances were retained by Brewster Aero, American Gas, Cities Service, Gulf Oil and New Jersey Zinc. In the minus column were Electric Bond & Share, Aluminum of America, Humble Oil and Phoenix Securities. Volume here was around 212,000 shares versus 187,000 in the preceding session.

Rail loans stood up well in the face of bond market profit selling prompted by yesterday's good rise.

New buying in the carrier division and in scattered industrial and utility ratings was encouraged by general business optimism touching industrial earnings prospects. Some loans, up a point or more yesterday, gave up at least a part of those gains.

Closing fractionally to around 2 points higher were Portland Gas & Electric 4½s at 76½, Western Union 5s of '60 at 76, New York Central 3⅜s at 90, Pennsylvania General 4½s of '65 at 106¼, New Orleans Terminal 4s at 67, Sante Fe 4s of '95 at 106⅜ and International Paper 6s at 30.

Foreign dollar loans making the best showing included Japan 5½s and 6s, Belgium, 6s, German 5½s and a few South Americans, up fractions to around 2½.

Transactions totaled $7,614,100 face value against $8,282,900 Thursday.

Cotton declined 10 to 30 cents a bale after hedging out into early gains generated by brisk trade in cotton textiles.

Copper advanced 1-20 to 1-10 cent a pound despite indications recent heavy demand for spot metal was lagging. Lead also moved up, along with cocoa, domestic sugar and cottonseed oil.

On the minus side—none very much—were silk, rubber, world sugar and Santos coffee. Wool tops and hides were irregular.

Pork Output Sets October Record

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—The American Meat Institute estimated today that pork production in October was the largest on record for that month.

The institute estimated October production from 20 to 25 per cent above October, 1939, from 30 to 35 per cent above last month and approximately 28 per cent above the 1929-33 October average.

Wholesale prices of fresh pork dropped 15 to 20 per cent during the month, the institute said.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—The cotton gray goods market today followed up Thursday's late buying movement with sales to around midday estimated at between 5,000,000 and 10,000,000 yards. Prices were unchanged, although some mills showed resistance to large forward shipments at the existing levels and in some cases asked ⅛ of a cent higher on the more popular numbers.

D.&H.Railroad Books False, Senators Say

'Misleading Balance Sheets' Submitted, Committee Charges

By the Associated Press

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee reported today that an investigation had disclosed alleged falsification of the books of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad system in connection with the purchase of Lehigh Valley & Wabash Railroad stocks.

In a statement accompanying a preliminary report, Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, members of a subcommittee, charged that between 1924 and 1927 the Delaware & Hudson system had "submitted false or misleading balance sheets to the New York Stock Exchange and to the public, concealed a tremendous write-up of assets from bond purchasers and in general painted a picture of financial transactions to Government agencies and the public which bore remarkably little resemblance to the facts."

Testimony Summarized

The report summarized testimony dealing with the marginal purchase by the Delaware & Hudson of approximately $40,000,000 of stocks in the Lehigh Valley and Wabash. Wheeler and Truman charged that while part of this purchase price was borrowed from bankers, the borrowing was not entered on the railroad's books as a liability.

"Another part of the purchase price," they said in this statement, "was raised by the sale of securities from the treasuries and reserve funds of railroads or other subsidiaries in the Delaware & Hudson system; the fact that these securities were sold was not entered on the books of account.

"Ultimately, the bulk of the purchase price was financed through sale of bonds to the public by a Delaware & Hudson subsidiary, the Hudson Coal Co. Although this coal company was caused to spend more than $20,000,000 on stocks which Delaware & Hudson executives wished to acquire, the purchases were not entered on the coal company's books.

"Amazing Transactions"

"The public invested nearly $35,000,000 in Hudson Coal Co. bonds without being informed that the assets of the coal company had been 'written up' by about $30,000,000. These bonds are today selling for less than a third of what the public originally paid for them."

The report charged that the Delaware & Hudson failed to report stock holdings and stock acquisitions to the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1924, 1925 and 1926, as required by law.

"The whole amazing set of transactions, in the opinion of this subcommittee, reveals the need for effective enforcement of railroad accounting regulations and for a reform of the system by which railroads are able to accomplish secretly through subsidiaries what they cannot legally accomplish in their own names," the statement concluded.

Listen!

with Glynn

Today, over WJSV and the Columbia network, you'll be able to listen to it from 11:05 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., as CBS's Young People's Concerts have their fall premiere for the eleventh straight season. Rudolph Ganz will conduct and give a descriptive commentary. The program is to be devoted to the symphonic poem and those you'll hear will be Sibelius's "Finlandia;" MacDowell's "To a Wild Rose;" Saint-Saens' "Danse Macabre;" Dukas' "Sorcerer's Apprentice," and Schelling's "A Victory Ball."

There will be six Young People's Concerts to be heard during the fall and winter season, one each month on the same day.

Sunday's regular concert over CBS of the Philharmonic-Symphony, from 3 to 4:30 p. m., will feature the young American pianist, Eugene List, as soloist, playing Rachmaninoff's Second Concerto. John Barbirolli will conduct the 125 musicians and Deems Taylor is the intermission commentator.

In addition to the Rachmaninoff selection, the orchestra will play Ernest Toch's "Pinocchio" Overture, based on the story of the famous puppet; Franz Schubert's infrequently played Symphony No. 5 in B flat and the popular "Capprichio Espagnol" of Rimsky-Korsakoff.
